Traffic backed up on the access road and on West Village Road for most of the morning on Oct. 31 after an 18-wheeler turned over on I-35 during slippery wet conditions. Construction has slowed on the expansion of I-35 through Salado in recent weeks and it was learned recently that instead of a near-completion date of December, the project will be mostly complete in May 2016. A town hall meeting with Texas Department of Transportation officials concerning the I-35 project is scheduled for Nov. 10 at Salado Intermediate School. An open period begins at 6 p.m. followed by the formal presentation and questions and answers at 6:30 p.m.

Gault site one of richest archeological finds in U.S.

By Tim Fleischer
Editor-in-Chief

One of the richest archeological sites in North America, more than 2.6 million artifacts have been found at the Gault site, about 12 miles southwest of Salado off of FM 2843 (Florence Rd.).

"There is a stone floor there," D. Clark Wernecke told the Salado Historical Society during its annual general membership meeting Nov. 2. "It is 12,700 years old and there are clues to a structure being built on top of it."

"That makes it the earliest house in North America," Dr. Wernecke added.

The Gault site has been known for its artifacts for almost a century. In 1929, the first anthropologists from the University of Texas were able to excavate the site, named after the owner of the property at that time, for about eight weeks.

A burnt-rock midden produced Clovis-era tools two years before the Blackwater find in New Mexico.

Over the years, the property changed hands several times and fell victim to archeological looting. In fact, at one point, people could pay just $10 to dig all the artifacts they would want to dig in one day.

Despite this damage to the original site, there remained an archeological record that may prove that the Americas were populated much earlier than scientists have originally hypothesized.

In 1998, the lower jaw of a juvenile mammoth and ancient horse bones surrounded by a large number of Clovis artifacts were discovered.

Archeologists, Dr. Wernecke said, discovered a great deal of chert, some of it engraved in what he described as "the earliest art in the Americas."

The University of Texas was able to secure a three-year lease, during which time more than 1.2 million artifacts were recovered. About half of those artifacts were from the Clovis era.

In fact, about 85 percent of all Clovis-era artifacts that have been recovered in the Americas come from the Gault site.

Volunteers, students and archeologists have carefully made their way through more than 48 cubic meters of the site down to the Comanche Peak bedrock. Wernecke explained that whenever a chert is found, it is carefully noted where exactly it was found. Each piece is highly documented, resulting in a catalog of paleo-Indian America that has not been seen in any other location.

Wernecke explained that one section measuring 10 centimeters in depth and one meter squared resulted in finding 16,629 flakes. "If it was larger than a quarter, we know exactly where in the earth it was taken," Wernecke told the Salado Historical Society.

Pieces have been examined at the microscopic

No cheap, easy fix for growing deer population

By TIM FLEISCHER
EDITOR-IN-CHIEF

"There is no quick fix. There is no cheap fix. The problem will not go away. The longer you wait, the more expensive it will be."

Texas Parks & Wildlife biologist Derrick Wolter said this to a room full of Saladoans during a forum on Suburban Deer Populations. He was one of seven panelists for the meeting, which included Charles Edwards, the former Mayor of Lakeway, Dr. Walt Cook, the chief wildlife veterinarian at Texas A&M University College of Veterinary, Bryan Durlock, Bell County Game Warden, John Cornelius, Wildlife Management professional, Laura Murphy, past president of the Bell County Master Gardeners and Susan Terry, former Salado alderman and Keep Salado Beautiful president.

Wolter said that defining the problem is the first step to a community's success in combatting an ever-growing urban deer population.

Former mayor Edwards told the audience that this is what was done in Lakeway before a program was pursued to control the population. "We documented the number of accidents involving cars and deer, the numbers of deer that were being disposed of by the city workers," Edwards said.

Lakeway figures for deer deaths due to accidents was more than 200 per year when the town of about 15,000 outside of Austin began a methodic approach to culling the white tail deer herd.

In the first year of Lakeway's Trap, Transport and Transplant program, 650 deer were moved to ranches in Texas. Edwards said that the process for a local Texas ranch to become a recipient of the TTT deer was too prohibitive for much local participation.

"We could not get relocation permits," Edwards explained, "Ranchers did not want to follow through with permit process because they had to justify that they had the carrying capacity.

So then, the city moved 800 deer to ranches in Mexico. "Mexican ranchers picked them up in Laredo," Edwards said.

Lakeway spends more than $30,000 per year on its deer population control program.

The TTT permit is one permit process that property owners and communities can pursue through the TPWD to cull its herd. The other is a Trap, Transport and Process permit in which deer are ultimately killed and processed with the meat donated to local non-profit agencies.

Lakeway donates the majority of deer meat through its TTP permit to Austin-based agencies such as the Capitol Area food bank.

Wolter and Edwards concur that building consensus in the community is crucial to the success of any control program. Edwards said that since Lakeway began its program about 15 years ago, "there are a whole lot of new people in town and we've got to educate them."

In addition to the TTP program, Edwards said that Lakeway also has a strong Do Not Feed the Deer ordinance. Implementation of this program required a great deal of education about the harms of feeding corn to deer, according to Edwards.

"Having the political will to implement a program is the hardest thing to overcome," Edwards said. "Then you have to find the money for the program."

According to Wolter, there are several approaches to controlling deer population in suburban and urban areas, with varying costs and effectiveness.

High fencing costs more than $25,000 per mile and works only on closed properties such as ranches.

Trap and relocate programs cost more than $150 per deer. However, some transplant programs have seen as much as 50 percent fatality among the deer, according to Wolters.

John Cornelius, a wildlife management professional, said that with new approaches in transplanting deer, the fatality rate that he has seen in his transplant programs is closer to three to five percent.

Sterilization and birth control programs are not effective in open deer populations, according to both Wolters and Cornelius who both iterated that these are expensive approaches with limited success. These programs can easily cost more than $750 per deer and are most effective in closed populations behind high fences where the number of does coming into and out of the herd are controlled.

Laura Murphy, with the Bell County Master Gardeners and Susan Terry, with Keep Salado Beautiful addressed issues for homeowners who have trouble keeping deer from eating their landscape.

"There is no such thing as a deer-proof landscape," according to Murphy who said that deer will eat even so-called resistant plants during drought conditions. "When there is plenty to browse, they will leave unfriendly plants alone, but when it is dry they will eat just about anything," Murphy said.

Spraying garden areas with predator urine is temporary at best, according to Murphy. Rains and sprinkler systems will dilute the spray quickly.

Electric fences have limited effectiveness when the deer figure out a way around, under or over them, according to Murphy. These fences might work best around small vegetable gardens.

Terry and Murphy recommend homeowners get a copy of the Agrilife Extension and Grow Green resource book on "Native and Adapted Landscape Plants."

FORUM

An Open Exchange of Ideas

Hillary: It's the Sexism, Stupid

It was inevitable that Bernie Sanders would be accused of sexism sooner or later.

His day came at the signature Jefferson-Jackson dinner in Iowa. Hillary Clinton hit the Vermont senator for saying in the first Democratic debate that "all the shouting in the world" wouldn't keep guns out of the wrong hands. According to Clinton, Sanders had directed a notoriously sexist insult at her -- although not one of the 15 million people watching at the time had noticed it.

"I haven't been shouting," Clinton intoned, "but sometimes when a woman speaks out, some people think it's shouting." What Clinton's plaint lacked in plausibility, it made up for in bad faith.

Shouting has not typically been considered a loaded term. Sanders didn't say "screeching." He didn't say "nagging." In fact, he had been saying that shouting is ineffectual in the gun debate long before he was entangled in an argument about gun control with Hillary Clinton.

Nonetheless, Sanders felt compelled on the CNN show "State of the Union" to tout his record on women's issues and say, "I think what the secretary is doing there is taking words and misapplying them." But there he goes again -- suggesting that women aren't capable of correctly applying words.

Sanders should get used to it. If he remains a threat to Clinton in the early states, he'll be deemed a cross between Archie Bunker and Andrew Dice Clay. Already, the left-wing publication Salon ran a headline urging on the sisterhood: "Let's storm the Sanders' he-man women-haters club."

If Hillary is willing to use this tack against Sanders, a down-the-line supporter of the feminist policy agenda, just wait until she gets into a race with Donald Trump, Ted Cruz or any other Republican. No microaggression will be too "micro" to try to use to win a news cycle.

Hillary has already broadcast that she's going to wield her gender as an all-purpose argument for her candidacy. At the Democratic debate, she said she's an outsider -- because she's a woman. She said she wouldn't simply be the third term of Barack Obama -- because she's a woman. Hillary clearly doesn't want anyone to be mistaken about her gender.

Hillary will need to do all she can to motivate women voters to make up for what may well be a historic poor showing among men. In the latest Wall Street Journal/NBC poll, her favorable rating among white men was an abysmal 26 percent.

Republican pollster Kellyanne Conway says there are three positive attributes that voters tend to attribute to women candidates: They are warm and understanding; they are new and fresh; they are honest. Hillary, a partisan warrior who's been on the national stage for decades, usually trailed by an ethical cloud, is an imperfect vessel for all of those qualities. Which is why she'll use her gender as a means of attack as much as a selling point.

In Iowa, she defended playing the "gender card," saying if that's what it's called when you stand up for women's rights, then "deal me in." Actually, she'll be doing the dealing, and it will be from the bottom of the deck.

Taking the high road and staying focused on the goals

Scott Peck wrote in The Road Less Traveled: "Fearing the Pain involved, almost all of us, to a greater or lesser degree, attempt to avoid problems. We procrastinate, hoping that they will go away. We ignore them, forget them, pretend they do not exist . . . We attempt to get out of them rather than suffer through them."

Dr. Chris Thurman, "The Lies We Believe," adds,

"Those who avoid their problems usually end up with more pain in the long run. Those who face their pain save themselves a great deal of unnecessary suffering. It is as simple as that."

This is not an article on causes of mental illness. It is on the pain Salado is suffering and what to do about it.

Construction. There is no changing the date. It is not fair, honest, or right. However, there is no choice, either complain and become more miserable or get busy and find ways to overcome it.

Sanctuary is coming. A MUD or accepting the terms of the Village. Either, continual conversation must be. Communicate or suffer the consequences of ignorance. A Village cannot be an island unto itself.

Sewer. Due diligence in researching every option was necessary. No one builds a house or a sewer without figuring the cost and the unintended consequences first. The past proves this. Sewer is coming.

Roads. They did not get this way over night. This year, over $200,000 was spent on Village roads. To repair all is approximately 8 million. Approximately $70K for this year and all will be spent on repairs, Stagecoach. It takes much longer than desired, but when completed; it will be fantastic. We either look forward to the day it opens or bemoan the time it takes.

Criticism. There are Monday quarterbacks, self-centeredness, ego, sour grapes, and people who enjoy hearing themselves talk. As several owners testify, "These people take what is said and twist it for their benefit." The only solution is taking the highroad and staying focused.

Painful? Yes, but not near as damaging as ignoring it.

Staffing Up for Corruption Campaigns are hiring "donor maintenance managers" as personal concierges to millionaire supporters.

Jim Hightower

Oh, great -- just what America's Big Money politics needed: more campaign consultants.

Already, candidates are walled off from people, reality, and any honesty about themselves by a battalion of highly specialized consultants controlling everything from issues to hairstyle. But now comes a whole new category of staff to add to the menagerie: "donor maintenance manager."

We can thank the Supreme Court for this. Its malevolent Citizens United decision produced an insidious platinum class of mega-donors and corporate super PACs, each pumping $500,000, $5 million, $50 million -- or even more -- into campaigns.

These elites aren't silent donors. They're boisterous, very special interests playing in this court-created political money game for their own gain.

Having paid to play, they feel entitled to tell candidates what to say and do, what to support and oppose. A Jeb Bush insider confirms that mega-donors bluntly tell the candidate: "I just invested in you. Now I need to have my say; you need to answer to me."

Thus, campaigns are hiring donor maintenance managers as personal concierges to meet every need and whim of these special ones. This subterfuge institutionalizes the plutocratic corruption of our democratic elections, allowing a handful of uber-rich interests to buy positions of overbearing influence directly inside campaigns.

Donors at the million-dollar-and-up level are expecting much more than a tote bag for their "generous gifts."

Of course, candidates piously proclaim, "I'm not for sale." But politicians are just the delivery service. The actual products being bought through the Supreme Court's political bazaar are our government's policies, tax breaks, and other goodies -- as well as the integrity of America's democratic process.

Nora: A Doll's House Like You've Never Seen Before

Baylor University continues their 2015-16 season with Nora, a story of a seemingly picture-perfect family with a hidden secret that stains the shiny perfection of their lives. Adapted by Ingmar Bergman, Nora is based on the novel A Doll's House by Henrik Ibsen (and translated by Frederick J. Marker and Lise-Lone Marker).

The play portrays the life of an almost flawless mother, Nora Helmer, her husband and three children, that seem to be moving onward and upward, but all that glitters is not gold. Nora has a well-kept secret that is actually the catalyst behind the success of the family.

When the secret starts to come to light, the pristine "dollhouse" becomes stained with the ugly truth. Come and see the exposure of truth behind the Helmer's fortune and watch A Doll's House come to life.

Director Cason Murphy is excited to put this play on the Baylor mainstage and has incorporated many ideas that surround the psychological thrill of Nora.

Although a dark tale, Nora will be a thrilling performance facing some controversial topics that will resounded in the minds of the audience as they see the corruption of Nora's family unfold.

Nora will run Nov. 17 - Nov. 21 at 7:30 p.m. with matinee shows at 2 p.m. on Nov. 21- 22 in the Mabey Theatre of the Hooper Schafer Fine Arts Center.

Tickets for Nora were on sale Nov. 3 and are $20 for the public or $17 with a valid Baylor ID. Groups of 10 or more are eligible for a group discount.

"We would like to use our favorite tool out there, which is the trowel," Wernecke said, "except chert comes from the rock in the Edwards Plateau and is stronger than steel. Hand trowels just leave a big silver and gray scar."

So instead, they careful-

KSB receives garden grant, seeks workers

Keep Texas Beautiful (KTB) has recognized Keep Salado Beautiful as a recipient of the Native Garden Grant. Through funding from Keep America Beautiful (KAB) and Lowe's, Keep Texas Beautiful will provide twelve Keep Texas Beautiful affiliate communities with the support and materials needed to create and maintain a native plant demonstration garden. These gardens will serve as a model to educate and engage community members to grow native species in their own gardens. KTB hopes to create awareness not only in the twelve communities involved, but throughout Texas.

To assist with the creation of the garden, Keep Salado Beautiful will receive a $600 gift card to Lowe's, $500 in maintenance assistance, a variety of gardening materials, along with additional administrative assistance and marketing support from Keep Texas Beautiful.

The Robertson Colony-Salado College Foundation in Bell County received a Texas Parks and Wildlife Grant of $14,159 to improve the Salado College Memorial Park Trail by constructing a new 0.08-mile decomposed granite trail park entrance and installing accessible parking and signs. KSB and Robertson Colony-Salado College Foundation are working together to turn an underutilized space, next to the Cultural Trail, into a pocket garden and gateway into Salado College Memorial Park.

Funds awarded from the Native Garden Grant will be used to plant a native garden that will be used to add an appealing aesthetic to a park entrance gateway that welcomes a high volume of visitors during the year but will provide a "living museum" that focuses nature exhibits, education programs, and recreation resources for countless visitors, teachers, and children of all ages.

Because the garden will need to be built in phases, KSB asking for volunteer sign up to help with building this garden that needs to be completed by Nov. 30. The Salado Junior High School's Leadership Council has volunteered for the building of the beautification project 9-11 a.m. Nov. 7.

Salado High School Theater program will present Our Town on Nov. 12 and 19. Cast members include Mrs. Webb played by Kaydee Free and Emily Webb played by Kelsey Marquis.

Salado High Theater presents Our Town

Historical Salado will rival the pride of Grover's Corners when Salado High School's theatre department presents the classic drama Our Town on Nov. 12 and 19. The Salado Historical Society will display early photos of Salado at both productions in a celebration of small-town society.

The Salado Historical Society also will have a book for sale entitled "Images of America SALADO," a pictorial history of Salado by Mary Harrison Hodge and Charlene Oshtner Carson. The book contains over 200 vintage photographs which take the reader on a photographic journey through the rich, diverse history of Salado. Price of the book is $20 (cash and checks only - no credit cards).

Many may recall Our Town from their own high school experience when it appeared in the freshman English textbook.

Our Town is a 1938 play by American playwright Thornton Wilder. It tells the story of the fictional American small town of Grover's Corners between 1901 and 1913 through the everyday lives of its citizens.

Throughout Wilder uses metatheatrical devices setting the play in the actual theatre where it is being performed. The main character is the stage manager of the theatre who directly addresses the audience and fills in playing some of the roles. The play is performed without a realistic set and the actors mime their actions without the use of props.

Our Town was first performed at McCarter Theatre in Princeton, New Jersey in 1938. It later went on to success on Broadway and won the Pulitzer Prize for Drama. It remains popular today and revivals are frequent.

More than 40 Salado students are involved in the technical and acting aspects of the play, making it one of the largest productions in Salado High School's history.

Performances begin at 7 p.m. in the SHS Cafeteria. Admission is $5.

Railroad & Heritage Museum to host Communication Family Day slated Nov. 7

Join the Temple Railroad & Heritage Museum for a celebration of the many different ways we communicate, at the Museum's Free Family Communication Day held this 11 a.m.-1 p.m. Nov. 7.

From prehistoric man who sent smoke signals to today's era of instant messaging, people have always found new and inventive ways to communicate with one another.

Local newspaper and television staff will be at the museum sharing how technology helps them reach thousands of people every day.

The Bell County Museum and the Temple Public Library will show children how their parents and grandparents connected before there was an internet.

Attendees can also explore interesting and unique hobo codes, calligraphy, and get hands-on with historic communication equipment.

"Railroads have always looked for new ways of communicating, especially across long distances and around noisy trains," said Museum Curator, Angela McCleaf. "We host Communication Day each year to celebrate the innovations that help us connect today."

The Temple Railroad and Heritage Museum hosts a free Family Day event of the first Saturday of each month. Attendance to the event is free. Regular admission charges apply to view the rest of the museum. The museum is located in the Santa Fe Depot located at 315 West Ave. B in downtown Temple. The museum is open 10am-4pm, Tuesday through Saturday.

For more information about this and upcoming Family Days at the Temple Railroad & Heritage Museum, please call 254.298.5172 or visit www.rrhm.org.

Salado Winery Co marks decade in business with Italian dinner Nov. 7

Salado Winery Company has enjoyed 10 years of growing grapes and making wine, and they want to celebrate that with you on Nov. 7, when they host a family-style Italian dinner with entertainment and plenty of wine.

Plan to arrive around 6 p.m.. At 6:30 p.m., the blessing, wine barrel ceremony and toasts will begin. Around 7 p.m. they will be serving up "more pasta than you can handle" according to June Ritterbusch, followed by cake from Simply Sweet Bakery.

All of Salado Winery's signature wines will be $10 to celebrate 10 years! They'll also have door prizes, silly contests and a mystery wine pull.

Salado Winery Company is a small, family-owned winery located on north Main St. Salado.

June Ritterbusch, owner, winemaker and "winerymom," is usually in charge, but sometimes her husband, little boy, and #winerycat have their turn too.

They produce wine from their own vineyard located south of Salado as well as vineyards throughout the state of Texas. Their labels feature Texas animals and they are especially known for their unadorned chardonnay named "Night Flight". They have been selling the best in Texas wines since 2005.

Tickets are $14.95 for adults and $4.95 for kids and can be purchased at www.saladowinery.com.

Heritage Speaks in Salado's old Graveyard Nov. 7

In the dusky evening of Saturday, Nov. 7, the Salado pioneers who are buried in-the Historic Salado Old Graveyard will come to life to tell their stories. They will tell how they came to Texas, when they came to Salado, and how they served their community and their country. Some will tell of other relatives who are buried next to them. Some will tell all; others will keep their secrets buried.

Salado Historical Society and Tablerock are sponsoring a walking tour of the Old Salado Graveyard on Nov. 7, from 5-6:30 p.m. The historic Old Salado Graveyard is on Baines Street The program is titled "Our Salado Heritage Speaks" referring to the lives of Salado settlers buried in the Old Graveyard who will have their biographies presented by historical reenactors. The program is scheduled to begin at dusk and will conclude before dark.

Sixteen early pioneers designated historically significant to the founding and early settlement of Salado are the focus of the walking tour. Seven grave sites have Texas Historical Commission markers, two have markers on their Salado homes, two have family markers, and five are remaining to be researched for markers.

Tickets will cost $5 for adults and $3 for children 12 and under. Tickets can be purchased at the cemetery on the night of the program.

Parking will be on site. Cars will not be permitted in the cemetery during the program.

Historians and architects have been in love with the Robertson Plantation since it was built in the late 1850s by Elijah Sterling Clack Roberston near the banks of Salado Creek. They have debated when it was started, completed and the architectural influences of the two-story mansion for decades. The sixth-generation family members have recently renovated the home place. You will have your chance to fall in love with the home when the doors open in December for a Gala evening and for the Salado Historical Society Tour of Homes.

Robertson Plantation is fascinating piece of history

By TIM FLEISCHER
EDITOR-IN-CHIEF

They know the tinner's name who did the standing seam roof.

They know who made the 11,000 shingles for the original barn.

The windows, sashes and shutters came from Houston.

They have records of just about everything.

"The Colonel didn't throw away anything," stated restoration specialist Gregory Free five years ago when he was leading the research into and restoration of Salado's Robertson Plantation, acting on behalf of the sixth generation of the family that had such a great influence on Salado.

But what Free doesn't yet know is simple: who designed the antebellum mansion.

The frontier mansion was built near the banks of the Salado Creek less than a decade after the last known Indian raids in central Texas.

"We don't know who the architect was," Free said about what is perhaps Salado's best and least-known resource.

The Robertson Plantation was built by Col. Elijah Sterling Clack Robertson in the late 1850s. Construction on the main house finished in 1860, built of siding from the Lost Pines area of Bastrop.

The slave quarters, stable and kitchen/smoke-house/dining area were built of the ubiquitous native limestone of the area. "It was plentiful and cheap because it did not have to be transported," Free said.

Other materials, including the metal roof, the windows (about 56 of them) and the siding were transported overland from Houston and other areas.

Free spoke about the challenge of building a home of this stature in this area which was not much more than frontier at the time.

"Colonel Robertson was dedicated to what he envisioned Salado to be," he said, "and invested himself in that manner."

That investment of time, money and labor -- slave labor as the place was a Plantation -- has stood near the banks of Salado Creek since then.

Free said that because the property has remained for more than 160 years in one family, it has been well kept for the most part.

Its history has been well chronicled and kept by the descendants.

During the Depression, the Robertson Plantation was studied in-depth as part of a works program called the Historic American Buildings Survey. Of the homes in Texas that were part of that survey conducted from 1936 to 1940, the Robertson Plantation was the most drawn in detail and number. Architectural drawings (some to scale) exist of all the details of the home and outbuildings. In fact, all of the moldings are drawn to scale, Free said.

Free said that while the name of the architect of the Plantation is not known, the style is more French Colonial than Palladian.

Pointing to the small rooms on either side of the front and rear recessed galleries -- cabinets, as they were called, Free said that design is more likely to be found in the colonial architecture of West Africa and Louisiana than in the rest of the south. The Robertson Plantation has eight cabinets, or small rooms, in its symmetrical design.

The small rooms served as an office, stranger's rooms, dressing rooms and later, with the advent of indoor plumbing, bathrooms.

The symmetrical design of the main house is Greek Revival in essence. The small rooms on each side are reminiscent of Palladio's out buildings on either side of the main house as are the three triangular cornices of the roofline. These were hints at the architecture of the Robertson Plantation that the late Lucile Robertson shared with me some 27 years ago when she first gave us a tour of the grand place.

Whether it is Greek Revival, Creole-influenced,

Palladian or a mixture of several influences, the Robertson Plantation is certainly Salado's Grand Dame. She will open her doors to the public this winter for a Gala affair on Dec. 3 and for the Salado Historical Society Tour of Homes.

Sterling Ambrose and Cile Cowan invite you to experience the rich history of the place that their family has called home for more than six generations.

Salado Historical Society invites you to its annual Christmas Home Tour, which will be anchored by the historic Robertson Plantation. The tour will be open 5-8 p.m. Dec. 4, 10 a.m.-5 p.m. Dec. 5 and 1-4 p.m. Dec. 6.

Tickets are $18 before Thanksgiving and $20 after Nov. 26. Tickets are pre-sold at the Visitors Center on Main Street and will be available at the tour stops during the first weekend of the Christmas Stroll, December 4-6.

Stops on the tour include the Robertson Plantation, the home of Dave and Barbara Swarhout at 11300 Stinnet Mill Rd., the home of Dena Parks at 800 Blaylock Dr. and the historic Boles-Aiken Cabin and Denman Cabin on Van Bibber, which were reconstructed at their current location by the Salado Historical Society. The cabins will be decorated for a traditional Christmas. Springhouse will decorate the cabins this year.

What should I do to make my house show better?

First, make sure the house looks as clean and spacious as possible. Remember, people will look behind doors - closets, crawlspaces, cabinets and rooms. After cleaning, try to correct any cosmetic flaws. Paint, re-grout tile, and replace or remove old carpet. Replace dated faucets, light fixtures, handles and knobs.

Finally, inside and outside, try to make it easy for prospective buyers to imagine your house as their home. Give your prospect plenty of room to dream.
