Snow drifts around the old red barn behind The Halley House on Salado's Main Street on Feb. 23. Central Texas was blanketed with a few inches of snow early this week, resulting in the Salado schools letting out at 1 p.m. Schools were scheduled to open two hours late on Feb. 24 to give the roads a chance to thaw out. The snow fell throughout the day Feb. 23 but the winter storm was expected to clear out in the late evening with warmer temperatures and the sun returning later in the week. Highs this weekend are expected to be in the mid-50s and lows in the upper 30s with a chance of scattered showers. (PHOTO BY MARILYN FLEISCHER)

Gov. Perry stumps in Salado

By TIM FLEISCHER
EDITOR-IN-CHIEF

Don't spend more money than you make.

Don't over-regulate or over-litigate business to the point that it cannot compete.

Educate children so that they can be productive members of society.

And, lastly, "get the government out of the way of the free market."

Those are the four simple principles that have guided a life of public service and government for 10-year Texas Governor Rick Perry.

Gov. Perry stopped in Salado for a visit with friendly Republicans at the Stagecoach Inn on Feb. 20. He earlier met with Republicans in Waco and afterward met with the Grand Old Party faithful in Georgetown in an effort to rally support in his re-election bid against two opponents in the March 2 primary. The winner of the Republican primary, which pits Perry against U.S. Senator Kay Bailey Hutchison and former Wharton County Republican chairwoman Debra Medina.

Gov. Perry defended his decisions to reject federal stimulus money for both unemployment and public schools, two separate but equally controversial decisions.

"Doing what is right is not always what is popular," Gov. Perry said.

He explained to the group that he rejected the $550 million in stimulus funds directed at unemployed Texans because of the strings attached to the federal dollars. Texas would get relief for two years, he said, but the expansion of the program on a longer-term basis would cost Texas businesses more than $75 million per year in additional unemploy-

Both Republicans are seeking re-election, although Brown's re-election is assured as he has no primary nor Democrat opponent this year. Gov. The strings attached to the $1.3 billion in additional federal funding for education had even more

"strings" attached to it that led to the governor rejecting those stimulus dollars.

An Open Exchange of Ideas

Case reopened

Climate alarmists conjured a world where nothing was certain but death, taxes and catastrophic global warming. They used this presumed scientific certainty as a bludgeon against the skeptics they deemed "deniers," a word meant to have the noxious whiff of Holocaust denial.

All in the cause of hustling the world into a grand carbon-rationing scheme. Any questions about the evidence for the cataclysmic projections, any concerns about the costs and benefits were trumped by that fearsome scientific "consensus," which had "settled" the important questions.

A funny thing happened to this "consensus" on the way to its inevitable triumph, though. Its propagators have been forced to admit fallibility. For the cause of genuine science, this is a small step forward; for the cause of climate alarmism, it's a giant leap backward. The rush to "save the planet" cannot accommodate any doubt, or it loses the panicked momentum necessary for a retooling of modern economic life.

Phil Jones is the director of the Climate Research Unit at the University of East Anglia, a key "consensus" institution that has recently been caught up in an e-mail scandal revealing a mind-set of global-warming advocacy rather than dispassionate inquiry. Asked by the BBC what it means when scientists say "the debate on climate change is over," the keeper of the flame sounded chastened. "I don't believe the vast majority of climate scientists think this," Jones said. "This is not my view. There is still much that needs to be undertaken to reduce uncertainties, not just for the future, but for the ... past as well."

Jones discussed the highly contentious "medieval warming period." If global temperatures were warmer than today back in 800-1300 A.D. -- about a thousand years before Henry Ford's assembly lines began spitting out automobiles -- it suggests that natural factors have a large hand in climate change, a concession that climate alarmists are loath to make. Jones said we don't know if the warming in this period was global in extent, since paleoclimatic records are sketchy. If it was, and if temperatures were higher than now, "then obviously the late 20th century warmth would not be unprecedented."

Jones also noted that there hasn't been statistically significant warming since 1995, although the cooling since 2002 hasn't been statistically significant either. All of this is like a cardinal of the Catholic Church saying the evidence for apostolic succession is still open to debate.

The other main organ of the climate "consensus" is the U.N.'s Intergovernmental Panel on Climate Change. It won the Nobel Peace Prize for its 2007 report, which turns out to have been so riddled with errors it could have been researched on Wikipedia. It said Himalayan glaciers would melt by 2035, warned that global warming could reduce crop yields in Africa by 50 percent by 2020, and linked warming to the increased economic cost of natural disasters -- all nonsense.

In The Boston Globe, MIT climate scientist Kerry Emanuel marshals a new argument for fighting warming: "We do not have the luxury of waiting for scientific certainty, which will never come." Really? That's not what we were told even a few months ago -- before climate-alarmism acknowledged doubt.

"Mad as Hell" voters might produce needed "Term Limits" and halt partisanship idiocy

Historically, our nation's people have united in desperate times, without prodding from elected officials or nagging sociological scolds. Two of the more memorable events include: December 7, 1941 bombing of Pearl Harbor; and the terrorist attacks on New York's World Trade Center and Pentagon, on September 11, 2001.

Fact is - we may be on the verge of coming together once again, as our United States "Seal" so nobly proclaims: "E Pluribus Unum" which translates "Out of many - one."

Words that properly describe our nation and its goals. What's remarkable is that despite our political, social, and economic polarization, coupled to the ongoing fiscal recession-depression, there's a strong feeling abroad-in-the-land, that Americans are coalescing in anger towards politics in general and Congressional officialdom in particular.

* * * *

THE GOOD AND THE BAD

The feeling of public rage, fury, indignation is growing and that's both good and bad: Bad because of the "do-nothingism" that's prevalent in Washington, as our elected gadflies perpetually fail to provide for the common good, while clinging firmly to a pair of all-purpose partisan shibboleths - i.e. (a) keep the lobby handouts coming and (b) getting reelected.

What's potentially good and positive about all this bubbling discontent is that for the first time, in a long time, we find a near-unified citizenry, angry enough to demand that our wayward (and hopefully uneasy) elected sycophants, give us the right to amend our Constitution, so as to provide for "Initiative and Referendum."

After all - the Constitution is not the exclusive property of Congress or the President - it belongs to all of us.

* * * *

TERM LIMITS - NOW!

"Initiative and Referendum" are somewhat obscure words to most of us - so why demand they be given to voters? What's the purpose? Answer: "I and R" would give us a way to get "term limits" before Congress - with enough pressure to have it pass overwhelmingly.

Those twin rights are actually the best (and perhaps only) way to eliminate perennial politicians, who produce nothing but large federal retirement annuities, after years of stalemating partisanship.

* * * *

"MAD AS HELL"

Why not just "ask" elected officials to place term limits on themselves? Sorry, but that's plain hokey - they'd sooner refuse payola from the lobby (bribes, junkets, gifts and cash).

Only an uprising will force their hand and as noted at the outset - this may just be the opportune time - because most of us have the same feelings today, that Paddy Chayevsky had in the 1976 movie Network: "I'm mad as hell, and I'm not going to take it any more."

* * * *

TIME TO "ASK AND TELL"

After the March 2 primary (and

Off the Record

by Ken Clapp

runoffs) when ballots are set for November's general election - let's ask all candidates running for Congress (Republicans and Democrats) if they would vote to give citizens an opportunity to vote on a constitutional amendment granting the rights of "Initiative and Referendum."

We could also toss in "term limits" - just for fun!

This might not work - since we are dealing with politicians who can sweet-talk a five year old out of his ice cream and candy, however printing their answers in the newspapers would be instructive: As this column intends doing in subsequent issues of the Salado Village Voice.

* * * *

FLAT TAX

And while we're at it - in this "utopian" search for better governance at the congressional level - lets tie a required "Flat Tax" to our "Term Limits" demand and get the job done right, once and for all.

Hopefully readers will not feel this is a "mission impossible" task. Bear in mind - if we don't look to the sky as a goal - we'll never get off the ground!

* * * *

MILLION DOLLAR GAFFE

Republican National Committee Chairman Michael Steele played right into the hands of the "enemy" (bad old liberal Democrats) last week when he proclaimed that Obama (GOPers won't use the title "President") should not allow former President Bush's tax cuts (for wealthy Americans) to expire.

Here's the Top-GOP's rationale: "Trust me, after taxes, a million dollars is not a lot of money!"

Over at National Democratic Party headquarters, (after a stunned: "He said what?") the happy opposition cranked up their message machines and launched: "Here in America where the average household makes $52,000.00 a year - that's crazy talk." Followed by: "It's outrageous - but sadly, not surprising."

Demo bloggers also went ballistic, and from their varied reactions, we've cobbled a composite retaliatory riposte: "Let's just say that the tax on a million bucks does return to 45 percent, (from today's top 35 percent) and see exactly what's left.

Avoiding the normal high powered tax-lawyering, the "poor" jillionaire would have a scant $550,000 left to spend. Question: On what planet is that NOT a lot of money?"

GOP-TOPPER Steele might try his hand at listening to average Main Streeters (for a change) who remain worried about the seemingly endless depression: Especially after helping bail out the "too big to fail" banks, who are now flush with billions in profits and millions in bonuses.

That is - if the Grand Old Party leadership really gives a damn about what "other folks" think: specifically minorities; the working-middle class; and those legitimately on welfare - including food stamps for kids and aiding the poverty-stricken.

No wonder most Americans are "Mad as Hell" as noted in today's "Off The Record" introduction.

Mapping out the Mission

For more than two centuries, Americans displayed a love of politics -- and debate. Often the debates boiled down to a fundamental question: What's the proper role of government in a free society?

Conservatives believe the answer is a limited government that encourages free enterprise, individual freedom, traditional American values and a strong national defense. Polls show most Americans agree. But turning these ideals into a functioning government is tougher. We need to explain our core beliefs in clear language.

Some 50 years ago, leading conservatives did just that. They gathered in Connecticut to sign the Sharon Statement explaining our principles. It helped pave the way for the Reagan Revolution and victory in the Cold War. But it's time to update the Sharon Statement. Not because the principles have changed, but because the threats to those principles have.

That's where the Mount

Heritage Forum

by Edwin Feulner

Vernon Statement comes in.

The statement reads, in part, "We recommit ourselves to the ideas of the American Founding. Through the Constitution, the Founders created an enduring framework of limited government based on the rule of law. They sought to secure national independence, provide for economic opportunity, establish true religious liberty, and maintain a flourishing society of republican self-government."

"These principles define us as a country and inspire us as a people. They are responsible for a prosperous, just nation unlike any other in the world. They are our highest achievements, serving not only as powerful beacons to all those who strive for freedom and seek self-government, but as warnings to tyrants and despots everywhere.

"Every one of these founding ideas is under sustained attack. In recent decades, America's principles have been undermined and redefined in our culture, our universities and our politics. The self-evident truths of 1776 have been supplanted by the notion that no such truths exist. The federal government today ignores the limits of the Constitution, which is increasingly dismissed as obsolete and irrelevant."

"Some insist that America must change, cast off the old and put on the new. But where would this lead -- forward or backward, up or down? Isn't this idea of change an empty promise or even a dangerous deception?"

"The change that we urgently need, a change consistent with the Ameri-

An Open Exchange of Ideas

Dealing With a President who is in denial

By CONGRESSMAN JOHN CARTER

There is no point, and great danger, in attempting to talk with President Obama about healthcare reform until he first agrees that the House and Senate healthcare bills are dead.

Republicans have not killed his bills. The American people have rejected them, from their knowledge of the details of the Democrats' plans. Democrats and the President can't seem to fathom that the voters of this country are pretty darn smart and very interested in anybody's plans that include controlling their healthcare and 18 percent of the national economy from Washington. Average voters across the country have actually bothered to read extensively about these proposals, and have reached their own informed conclusions.

This fact is indeed a big pill to swallow for those who believe average Americans spend all their time bitterly clinging to their guns and Bibles.

Rejection of these proposals by the public is the driver behind the Tea Party phenomenon across the country, the massive Republican election wins in Virginia, New Jersey, and Massachusetts, and the national polls showing Obama's popularity in the tank and the pending Democrat loss of the House and Senate in November.

Mr. Obama is in denial of these facts. He has convinced himself that the public has simply been misled, that they really would like his plan if they only knew more about it, and that all this rejection is due to just clever and underhanded political maneuvering by Republicans.

Obama has so basked in the adoration and praise of the left and the national media since taking office last year that he believes he simply cannot be wrong on any policy he espouses.

So rather than engage in true open and honest discussion on healthcare reform with Republicans next Thursday, the President has chosen to meet again in the shadows with the left wing of his party to repackaging the same failed legislation, and attempt to win over public opinion by better "messaging".

He has accordingly announced that when Republican House leaders meet with him to discuss healthcare reform, they will be discussing his House and Senate bills, and they should be prepared to agree to "some things they don't like".

Then if Republican leaders do the right thing and tell the President again that these bills are repugnant to the voters, the Obama media machine will launch their PR campaign that while the President tried to "reach out", Republicans chose to remain the "party of no", and that the Democrats will now be justified in violating historic Senate procedure to jam their bill down the people's throats without having to gain the necessary 60 votes.

There is no point in House Republican Leadership wasting the people's time by allowing this President in denial to continue his political tantrum.

Unless the President agrees in advance to wipe the slate clean and bury the rotting corpse of Democrat healthcare reform, we will really have nothing to talk about.

Perry

Those “strings” included national standards and national tests. “They told us that, ‘Here is the money now but there will be national standards and national tests... even though we don’t know what those standards or tests might be now, your state will be accountable to them at a later time.’” The federal dollars also decrease the incentive of competition between the states. “You know, people vote with their feet,” Gov. Perry said adding that Texas was the top destination for relocation in the United States for the fourth year in a row. The state is also the top exporter for the eighth year in a row and has most Fortune 500 Companies operating here than in any of the other states in the country.

“People see the overtaxation, the over-regulation and the over-litigation happening in the other states around the country and make the decision to move their homes and their businesses here,” Gov. Perry said.

Government initiatives offered to lucrative businesses don’t hurt either. Gov. Perry told the group about the growing film industry thanks to the business climate in Texas.

“The best thing we never did in Texas was to pass a personal income tax,” Gov. Perry said of earlier attempts for the additional tax when the state legislature faced a $10 billion deficit.

“Instead, we prioritized our spending. We cut the budget while at the same time increasing funding to public education by $1.2 billion,” Gov. Perry said.

Gov. Perry spoke about improving public education. “We have a high dropout rate in Texas,” he said, adding that he wanted to implement a new approach to keeping teenagers in school. Gov. Perry spoke about creating a virtual high school.

“And for those teenagers who want the privilege of a driver’s license, they must be enrolled in either a brick-and-mortar high school or a virtual high school. Driving is a privilege, not a right.”

Gov. Perry said he is committed to public schools and wants to double the number of what he calls STEM teacher (science, technology, engineering and mathematics).

“As you can attest Morris, these fields are crucial,” he said, pointing out Morris Foster. Gov. Perry in his opening remarks to the group pointed to the success of Morris Foster, who was born in Salado and attended Salado schools before graduating from Texas A&M University.

“You are one of hundreds and thousands of stories of success due to the hard work and sacrifice your parents made for you,” Gov. Perry said of Foster, who retired as president of Exxon-Mobil and purchased the Stagecoach Inn where his father worked during his childhood.

“We are much alike in that we both came from small Texas towns from parents who worked hard and made sure that we had the opportunity to get a college education,” Gov. Perry said.

Gov. Perry added that he would work as governor to see that young children like the one who came with his father to see the governor speak “would have that same opportunity,” even though the boy was donned in the burnt orange of the University of Texas.

Gov. Perry, a graduate of Texas A&M University with a degree in animal science, teased the boy that, “We’ll have to work on that!”

Lastovica shows Breed Champion

Her Grand Champion Limousin Dooney was sold for $8,000 at the S.A.L.E. Youth Auction. She also received a $10,000 scholarship, making her total earnings $18,000. Her entry was one of 14 breed champions chosen from the 1,443 entries at this year's competition.

Other winnings for this steer include: Grand Champion Steer, Texas Limousin Association State Show; Grand Champion Limousin Steer, Belt Buckle Bonanza; Grand Champion Limousin Steer, Heart of Texas Fair and Rodeo; and Overall Grand Champion Steer at the Prosper FFA Spring Futurity. Although he was entered to show at the 2010 Bell County Youth Fair, Stephanie chose to pull him in order to compete for the Limousin Breed Championship at San Antonio.

She is the daughter of Steven and Sandra Lastovica. A Varsity Cheerleader, she is active in many school activities, serving on the Superintendent's Advisory Council, Student Council, Salado FFA Historian, Salado 4-H County Council Representative, Fashion Club Reporter, a Temple Wildflower Belle Sophomore Candidate, and a past officer for the Texas Junior Angus Association. She and her family are active members of St. Stephen Catholic Church in Salado.

In the future, she would like to attend Texas A&M University and get her teaching certificate.

Members were elected to serve as advisors for the Texas Junior Angus Association and are pictured at the 2010 Texas Junior Angus Association Annual Banquet, February 23 in Fort Worth, Texas. Over the course of the next two centuries, that freedom was rarely without enemies -- from within Q: My husband just died. His daughter planned the funeral. When I showed up at the funeral home and expressed what I wanted, they told me I would have to talk to his daughter. Is this legal?

A: Yes. The party who signs the contract is the one who decides what can or cannot be granted. The funeral home works for one party and cannot willfully operate outside the contract.

If you have questions about Social Security or are concerned about your retirement, you may want to attend a free seminar 4-6 p.m. March 4 at the Salado Church of Christ Activity Center.

The Salado Church of Christ Primetimers and Mike McLain of Rembrandt Financial Group, LLC, will present the seminar featuring Greg Molina, Mick and Mary Koffend.

Contract Bridge

By Steve Becker

Many deals offer declarer a choice of several lines of play. While it may not always be clear which approach is the best of the lot, it shouldn't be too difficult to decide which is the worst.

Today's deal from a duplicate game is of this type. At every table, South wound up in three notrump, and West led the queen of spades after having overcalled in spades.

At some tables, declarer won the first trick and immediately tried a club finesse. East won and returned a spade, and it was then just a matter of time before West gained the lead with the ace of hearts to cash his spades and set the contract.

Other declarers decided that since at least one heart trick would be needed to score nine tricks, hearts should be attacked before clubs. This would force West to take the ace of hearts -- possibly his only entry -- before his spades became established.

So these declarers won the first spade, crossed to dummy with a diamond, led the ten of hearts and let it ride. West took the ace and returned a spade, but South was now in full control. Even though the club finesse lost, East was out of spades and had to return another suit. A repeat of the heart finesse then brought declarer to nine tricks in the form of two spades, two hearts, two diamonds and three clubs.

Yet another variation was found at other tables. These declarers ducked the first spade lead entirely, won the spade continuation and then tried the club finesse. East won but could not return a spade, so declarer had time to finesse East for the queen of hearts. West won the heart with the ace, but since South still had a spade stopper, these declarers also finished with nine tricks.

The relative merits of the second and third lines of play may be debatable, but one thing is certain: Those who chose the first line, making no effort whatsoever to defuse the threat of West's spades, clearly adopted the worst approach.

It's all about the chocolate!

Okay Salado, from now until April 1, it's all about chocolate! Did you know that April is National Chocolate Eaters Month... and also National Smith Month? It makes complete sense to me. Who doesn't like chocolate? Not many people since 7 billion pounds of chocolate are eaten every year in this country. And don't blame the children: 65 percent of that is eaten by those of us over 18. There are few foods people feel such passion about (well, maybe except for chips and hot sauce). And so that all of us can indulge in this delicious, delectable and healthy---- yes, I said healthy treat, the library and the Friends will sponsor a "Death by Chocolate" contest on April 1 at the library. This event will also let us celebrate our seventh anniversary in this beautiful building.

The contest is free and open to everyone. The public will be able to judge the entries as well as professional chefs. Entry forms are at the library and the deadline is March 29. Each person will display their own entry and will need to prepare sufficient samples to have available for the public and the judges. The chocolate entries will be on exhibit at 1 p.m. April 1 in the library for sampling and judging!

Check It Out

News & Notes from Salado Public Library

And now for some "hot" books for cold nights.

"Flawless" by Scott Selby and Greg Campbell: This is a fascinating chronicle of the $108 million theft at the Antwerp Diamond Center on Feb 15, 2003. This real-life "Ocean's Eleven" is a combination of diamond history, journalistic reportage, and riveting true crime story.

"Beach Street Knitting Society and Yarn Club" by Gil McNeil: Smart novels about starting over don't get any better than this sweet treat by Brit author McNeil. This is an uplifting, winning tale about the healing power of friendship and new beginnings. It's for every woman who dreams of starting over or being a better mother....or just knitting a really nice scarf.

"Roses" by Leila Meacham: This is the one folks that heralds the return of those delicious, door-stop epics in the grand tradition of Edna Ferber, Colleen McCullough, or B.T. Bradford. This enthralling stunner, good old-fashioned read is the story of two founding families in a small Texas town in the 20th century and is set against the backdrop of the powerful timber and cotton industries. It covers a hundred years, three generations of Texans and an explosive story of passion and revenge.

"The Midnight House" by Alex Berenson: In Berenson's best thriller yet, he again offers John Wells, CIA super spy, who is called upon by shifty CIA superiors to investigate the murder of operatives in a super secret interrogation team known as The Midnight House. Scenes and characters contribute to understanding of the CIA's overseas "rendition" program which both benefited national security and was also morally destructive to all. You don't want to go to the Midnight House but you will want to read the book.

Auditions set at Silver Spur

Two plays will be part of 2010 season

The footlights in Salado are beckoning to Central Texas performers for two great stage comedies. On March 5-7, the Salado Silver Spur Theater will be casting actors and actresses for Neil Simon's romantic comedy "Barefoot In the Park," and for the Texas stage premier of Michael Russell's "Countermaids."

Auditions for both plays will be held concurrently 2-6 p.m. March 5 and 7 and 10 a.m.-6 p.m. March 6 at the Salado Silver Spur Theater. The theater is located at 108 Royal St., in historic downtown Salado. Appointments are encouraged, but not required, and can be made by calling 254-947-3456 or by e-mailing info@saladosilverspur.com.

"We are pleased to add these two great stage comedies to our 2010 season line-up, one a perennial favorite, and the other an exciting new work that's destined to become a favorite," said Executive Director Grainger Esch, co-founder of the six-year-old entertainment venue. Full details at: <http://www.saladosilverspur.com/>

"We are looking for adult actors and actresses of many diverse types for these roles, with good verbal and physical comedy skills," said Esch, who will be directing "Barefoot In the Park." He will be joined by Silver Spur staffer Tony Blackman, who will be directing "Countermaids". "Countermaids" focuses on the employees at the Collierville, Tennessee F.W. Woolworth's lunch counter," said Blackman. "Set in the 1990's, we learn about the lives and dreams of five unlikely friends who can't help but make you laugh." Also present, to read cue lines for the auditioning performers, will be members of the Spuraldical Players, the Silver Spur's in-house comedy/variety ensemble.

"All performers are paid for their performances," Esch emphasized. "In some cases, we also provide a gas stipend for rehearsals to out-of-town talent." Shows are staged only on Friday evenings, Saturday afternoons and Saturday evenings. Rehearsals for "Countermaids" will begin March 22, with performances from April 30 through May 22. Rehearsals for "Barefoot In the Park" will begin in late July, with performances from Aug. 27-Sept. 18.

Here is a breakdown of the roles:

"Countermaids"

Lib Stalsworth - early 40's-Manager of the lunch counter at the Clarksville, Tennessee F.W. Woolworth. She had a hit as a young country singer but chose to have a family instead of a singing career. She is the glue that holds so many lives together during the course of the play. She has faith in everyone, though at times her own patience is tried. Country singer is a plus. Prepare a few bars of a classic country song (think Tammy Wynette or Loretta Lynn) best friend from high school. She recently returned from Texas and is in the throes of a divorce.

Lynette Henderson - 60's - a 25 year veteran of the lunch counter. She's the crusty career waitress whose biggest fear is growing old and losing her independence-and her job.

Janita Womsley - late teens/early 20's - part-time waitress and candy counter clerk. She is a Pentecostal preacher's daughter who has "star" ambitions, a voice to rival that of any country music queen, and a salty tongue that belies her sweetness and innocence. She would like nothing better than to be the next Dolly Parton or Tammy Wynette. Country singer a plus.

Donnie Ray Nicely - late 20's/early 30's. Donnie Ray is the orphan son of another of Lib's friends, and the janitor and general caretaker of the lunch counter. He's a little slow but has a heart of gold. He often communicates with phrases he's read or heard on the radio or television.

"Barefoot In the Park" Characters

Corie Bratter - Young newlywed, free-spirited, impulsive

Paul Bratter - Young newlywed lawyer, practical, conservative

Ethel Banks - Corie's mother, mid-fifties, lives alone in New Jersey, practical, more like her son-in-law than her daughter

Victor Velasco - Charming, eccentric, middle-aged neighbor

Telephone Repair Man - minor character role, not age specific

Delivery man - non-speaking role, not age specific

Auditioning actors will cold-read from scripts, but may also bring prepared monologues. Headshots and resumes are preferred, but a snapshot can be provided with a Spur audition form. Photos and resumes may also be e-mailed to info@saladosilverspur.com.

Village-wide garage sale benefits PALS

ward making this first sale a memorable success. PALS will accept all items that are in good condition except clothing and bedding. Nuclear waste on reservations

EARTH TALK

Questions & Answers
About Our Environment

Dear EarthTalk: Some time ago there were issues with Native American tribes storing nuclear waste on their land, something that was both unhealthy to the communities and caused considerable controversy among tribal leaders. Where is this issue today? -- M. Spenser, via e-mail Native tribes across the American West have been and continue to be subjected to significant amounts of radioactive and otherwise hazardous waste as a result of living near nuclear test sites, uranium mines, power plants and toxic waste dumps.

And in some cases tribes are actually hosting hazardous waste on their sovereign reservations—which are not subject to the same environmental and health standards as U.S. land—in order to generate revenues. Native American advocates argue that siting such waste on or near reservations is an “environmental justice” problem, given that twice as many Native families live below the poverty line than other sectors of U.S. society and often have few if any options for generating income.

“In the quest to dispose of nuclear waste, the government and private companies have disregarded and broken treaties, blurred the definition of Native American sovereignty, and directly engaged in a form of economic racism akin to bribery,”

Local Man Gallops 1.2 Miles Without Pain

BEXAR COUNTY – After using Thera-Gesic® pain creme on his sore legs, Tom W. was comfortably romping through town while laughing, according to witnesses. When asked about the laughing, he replied, “The price on this product is silly!”

Go painlessly with Thera-Gesic® says Bayley Lopez of the Nuclear Age Peace Foundation. He cites example after example of the government and private companies taking advantage of the "overwhelming poverty on native reservations by offering them millions of dollars to host nuclear waste storage sites."

The issue came to a head—and Native advocates hope a turning point—in 2007 when public pressure forced the Skull Valley band of Utah's Goshute tribe to forego plans to offer their land, which is already tucked between a military test site, a chemical weapons depot and a toxic magnesium production facility, for storing spent nuclear fuel above ground. The facility would have been a key link in the chain of getting nuclear waste to Yucca Mountain, the U.S. government's proposed permanent storage facility.

In February 2009, the U.S. Department of Energy (DOE) announced intentions to scale back efforts to make Yucca Mountain the nation's sole repository of radioactive nuclear waste and to look into alternative long-term strategies for dealing with its spent nuclear fuel.

The National Congress of American Indians, in representing the various tribes around the region, no doubt breathed a sigh of relief.

The issue essentially goes much deeper: As long as we continue to make use of nuclear energy—and many in Congress are looking to expand its role to get away from fossil fuels—the waste and spent nuclear fuel will keep coming and need to be stored somewhere. Groups like Honor the Earth, founded by author and activist Winona LaDuke to promote cooperation between Native Americans and environmentalists, are trying to persuade tribes that availing their land to nuclear power and other toxic industries isn't worth the potential long-term damage to the health of their citizens. Honor the Earth helped convince the Goshutes to turn down a lucrative deal to store waste on their land, and is working with dozens of other tribes to try to do the same.

NEWS FROM THE TEXAS WATER DEVELOPMENT BOARD

TEXAS WATER DEVELOPMENT BOARD APPROVES A $23,200,000 LOAN TO THE CENTRAL TEXAS WATER SUPPLY CORPORATION TO FINANCE WATER SYSTEM IMPROVEMENTS

AUSTIN – (November 19, 2009) – The Texas Water Development Board (TWDB) today approved by resolution a loan in the amount of $23,200,000 under the American Recovery and Reinvestment Act (ARRA) of 2009 through the Drinking Water State Revolving Fund (DWSRF)-Disadvantaged Communities Program or through an alternative source of funding, to the Central Texas Water Supply Corporation (Bell, Burnet, Coryell, Falls, Milam and Williamson Counties) to finance water system improvements.

This project has been approved for funding under ARRA through the DWSRF or an alternative source of funding under the standard State Revolving Funds. Financing will be offered with the same favorable terms and conditions as are available under ARRA.

With these funds, the Central Texas Water Supply Corporation (Corporation) proposes to complete the following projects: construction of a three million-gallons-per-day surface water treatment plant with a 300,000 gallon equalization water storage tank; two four-million-gallons-per-day raw water pumps; raw water intake screens; an electrical building; construction of a one million gallon treated water clearwell water storage tank; construction of a three-pump high service pump station; construction of a 600,000 gallon elevated storage tank; and the purchase and installation of automated leak detection equipment.

The Corporation is located approximately 70 miles north of Austin. The Corporation serves a population of approximately 28,224. Its water system has 16 wholesale customers, and they anticipate adding two additional customers.

The TWDB is the state agency charged with collecting and disseminating water-related data, assisting with regional planning and preparing the State Water Plan for the development of the state's water resources. TWDB administers cost-effective financial programs for the construction of water supply, wastewater treatment, flood control, and agricultural water conservation projects.

On February 17, 2009 President Obama signed the ARRA, which included funds for water and wastewater infrastructure financing to be administered through existing Clean Water State Revolving Funds (CWSRF) and Drinking Water State Revolving Funds (DWSRF). The intent of the ARRA is to provide funds to projects that are ready to proceed by Feb. 17, 2010.

Some of the key requirements of ARRA are:

- At least 50 percent of the funds must be used to provide additional subsidies to eligible recipients in the form of grants, loan forgiveness, or negative interest rates
- At least 20 percent of the funds must be used to fund Green Reserve projects
- Land purchase is not eligible
- Davis-Bacon wage rate requirements prevail
- Any funds used for construction, alteration, maintenance or repair of a public work must use American made iron, steel and manufactured goods
- Reporting on a weekly, monthly, quarterly and annual basis about the number of jobs created

For ARRA, projects submitted for consideration on the CWSRF and DWSRF Intended Use Plans (IUP) were prioritized based on their readiness to proceed to construction with additional emphasis on disadvantaged communities and Green Reserve projects. The Board approved the IUPs for CWSRF on June 18, 2009 and for DWSRF on July 16, 2009.

All funded projects must have executed construction contracts or be under construction by Feb. 17, 2010.
