

Christmas in Oct. at The Venue

Now is the perfect time to begin Christmas shopping.

One of the best places to view "the latest" Christmas decorations and styles is at the Salado Chamber of Commerce Ladies Auxiliary Christmas in October scheduled for 9 a.m.-5 p.m. Oct. 13-14 at The Venue on College Street (near the corner of Royal Street and College Street) in Salado. Admission is $3 per adult.

This annual event is a preview to the Christmas season and will feature the wares of local and area merchants on display inside a beautiful setting at The Venue on College Street.

Each year, vendors creatively display holiday decorations, jewelry, clothing, food and specialty home décor items. Shoppers will experience the sights, sounds, smells, tastes, and charms of the Village of Salado. "We truly enjoy Christmas in October being at The Venue. The facility is a great place for the Ladies Auxiliary to host our annual fundraiser event. This year's array of local and area merchants promises to be the best yet," states Tommye Prater, Christmas in October co-chair.

The Christmas in October Bake Sale is a tradition many look forward to each year. Customers will enjoy wandering through the booth area and the bake sale area all in the same facility. Most importantly, participants will have the opportunity to purchase delicious homemade pies, cakes, cookies and a wide variety of desserts.

A Style Show featuring models strolling through the booth section will display fall fashions from local boutiques as well as out of town merchants. The "strolling time" for the models will be late morning and early afternoon on both days of the Friday and Saturday event.

Representatives of the Salado Community Chorus will provide Christmas carols at 10 a.m. Oct. 14.

"We always look forward to the Salado Community Chorus group entertaining shoppers and the Style Show is fun as well," said Christmas in October co-chair, Deborah Roberson. According to Tommye Prater, "Christmas in October is the best place to ensure you start thinking about Christmas holidays and decorations. We welcome everyone to experience Christmas in October."

The Village trolley will be available to transport visitors from several Village parking areas to the entrance of The Venue on College Street. You may purchase tickets at the door or online at Eventbrite.

The Salado Ladies Auxiliary strives to promote events and activities which enhance, improve and promote the community of Salado. Christmas in October is one of these events in which the money earned is given back to community organizations such as the Salado Volunteer Fire Department, Salado Family Relief, Salado Community Chorus, and the Body of Christ Dental Clinic. Funds also provide annual scholarships for local high school students to attend college or technical school.

Mermaid madness

Mermaids of all sizes and ages converged on Salado for the first annual Sirena Festival and Mermaid Parade. The festival and parade celebrate The Legend of Sirena. Hundreds lined Main Street from Pace Park to Royal for the Mermaid Parade, which included performers from Circus Picnic (above). One of the event organizers, Tiffany Schreiner Humphrey, was all smiles (below) during the parade. Families are looking forward to next year's event.

Deborah Roberson, James Haney and Tommye Prater are shown with copies of Haney's book, Christmas in Salado, which will be for sale during Christmas in October.

Christmas in Salado book sales benefit Salado Family Relief

A wonderful addition to the Ladies Auxiliary Christmas in October schedule of events is the sale of a book by James Ray Haney.

The book is titled Christmas in Salado and is dedicated to "all the young at heart who love Christmas."

Haney endeavored to "create in each reader a desire to spend at least one Christmas in our lovely village." Through his poems, he captured the special Christmas atmosphere the village of Salado displays each year for locals and visitors alike. Truly, James Ray Haney believes, "If you are in Salado for one Christmas, the chances are you will want to return for more."

Haney suggested to the Ladies Auxiliary that he would permit the Auxiliary to sell his book at their annual fundraiser, Christmas in October, and would donate all proceeds from book sales to the Salado Family Relief Fund, a local charity that has a Christmas Project each year benefiting Salado area families during the season.

The book of Christmas poems will be on sale for $10 each ($12 for an autographed edition) on Oct. 13-14 at the Ladies Auxiliary Christmas in October event.

"The Ladies Auxiliary thanks Mr. Haney for his generous offer to help local children and their families enjoy the holiday season through the efforts of Salado Family Relief Fund," President Deborah Roberson said.

Chamber golf tourney is today

The 13th Annual Salado Chamber of Commerce Golf Tournament is Oct. 12 at Mill Creek Country Club.

The tournament will be a four person scramble that tees off with a shotgun start at 1 p.m. Cost is $100 per player and check-in is at 11:30 a.m. with lunch at noon.

Teams of four can play for $350.

To register, call the Salado Chamber of Commerce at 254-947-5040.

You can register the day of the tournament on site.

Prior to the shotgun start of the tournament, there will be a helicopter ball drop. The closest to the pin will win $1,000. Tickets are $10 each or three for $20.

Fall Village-wide clean-up is Oct. 21

Fall has arrived and so has the time for another community cleanup day in Salado. Residents are encouraged to take part in the Salado Fall Clean-Up sponsored by Keep Salado Beautiful on Oct. 21.

"This is a great opportunity for Salado residents to do their part to help keep our community a clean and attractive place to live, work and visit," said Keep Salado Beautiful Chair Susan Terry. "Volunteers of all ages are welcome to participate in the event."

Those persons interested in taking part in the clean-up are asked to gather at 8:30 a.m. Oct. 21 at the Salado Civic Center located at 601 N. Main Street.

After registering, participants will be provided trash bags and trash pickers and then dispatched to designated locations in the community to pick up trash and debris.

Eagle Disposal will provide dumpsters in the parking lot of the Civic Center where volunteers can deposit their bags of collected litter. Drop off your used electronics for the Salado High School Robotics Team.

"Our volunteers make such a difference in Salado," Terry said. "Fanning out across the Village and collecting trash along the roadsides, creek banks and in other public areas in our community is a great way to spend a Saturday in October, while giving back to your community."

Local Boy Scouts, as well as representatives of local service organizations, are expected to join other volunteers in the community clean-up effort that will last from 8:30 a.m. to noon.

For more information, contact Susan Terry at 254.760.1150 or keepsalado beautiful@yahoo.com.

The Non Sequiturs of the Gun Debate

The mind boggles at the horror of Las Vegas, where Stephen Paddock perched himself in the 32nd floor of the Mandalay Bay hotel and sprayed bullets into a crowd of outdoor concertgoers in the worst mass shooting in American history.

If this slaughter of innocents were an act perpetrated by a foreign power, the U.S. military retaliation would begin immediately, and rightly so.

The impulse to act to stop the domestic massacres that have become a heartbreakingly metronomic feature of American life is laudable and understandable. "It's time," as Connecticut Sen. Chris Murphy said, giving voice to the sentiment, "for Congress to get off its a-- and do something."

The problem is that the "something," namely all the usual gun-control proposals, isn't well-suited to stopping mass shootings. But liberal politicians never let the inapplicability of their proposals stop them. The passion with which they advocate for new gun-control measures is inversely related to their prospective efficacy.

The go-to proposal is universal background checks, although the perpetrators of mass shootings usually haven't been adjudicated and therefore have passed background checks, as Paddock did in purchasing at least some of his guns. No enhanced background-check regime, no matter how vigorous, would have stopped him from purchasing guns.

Hillary Clinton immediately singled out so-called silencers, or suppressors. "The crowd fled at the sound of gunshots," Clinton tweeted. "Imagine the deaths if the shooter had a silencer, which the NRA wants to make it easier to get." This conjures an image of the killer shooting down people with a gun impossible to hear, a conception straight out of a James Bond movie.

In a piece on Republican-supported legislation to make suppressors easier to acquire, The Washington Post notes that one of the devices would lessen the sound of an AR-15 to 132 decibels, or comparable to "a gunshot or a jackhammer." In other words, a rifle still sounds like a gun even with a suppressor.

If Hillary cares so much about the issue, she might take 10 minutes to learn something about it, but gun-controllers tend to be low-information advocates. Confusion between semi-automatic weapons, which are common and fire once each time the trigger is pulled, and automatic weapons, which are rare and fire multiple times each time the trigger is pulled, is a persistent feature of the gun debate. Many gun-controllers don't know the difference and erroneously refer to, say, AR-15 rifles as machine guns or automatic weapons.

This is an area where Congress has already legislated, though. It is illegal to own an automatic weapon made after May 1, 1986, and difficult and expensive to own one made before that.

Finally, there are always calls to limit magazine sizes, although this wouldn't have stopped Paddock, either. It took the SWAT team more than an hour to breach his room.

The images from Las Vegas are sickening. There's the sound of gunfire truly worthy of a war zone as people scream and run and cower, with nowhere to go. This shouldn't happen in America; it shouldn't happen anywhere. But that doesn't mean that the off-the-shelf obsessions of gun-control advocates would do the slightest thing to stop it.

How unemployment rate can drop with fewer people employed

For the week ending, Friday, October 06, 2017

The Markets

The S&P 500 Stock Index (SPX) closed at 2549.33, up 1.19% for the week, 13.87% year-to-date, and 18.37% for 52 weeks (one year). The Index didn't close at a record, but it did Thursday and is up about 2% from its recent crossing of the 2500 mark. The 10-year, benchmark U.S. Treasury note ended today yielding 2.366%, very close to where it started the week. The puzzling behavior of the exceptionally low interest rates and inflation we have and are experiencing continues. Gold prices dropped to $1,277.70, down 0.38% for the week and down 5.43% for the last month. It remains at near break-even (not counting transaction costs) for one year.

The Economy

There were two employment statistic numbers reported from the Labor Department that sounded contradictory but were not. The unemployment rate for September dropped from 4.4% to 4.2% but the total number of persons employed declined by 33,000. The release included a note that the drop in total employment was very likely the result of Irma hitting Florida and Harvey smacking several places along the Texas coast.

So, how is it that the unemployment rate declined even though fewer people are working? The answer begins in the fact that the unemployment rate is derived from household surveys while the number of people employed is a total of what government organizations and a sample of larger companies report. The household survey is a large-scale sampling of the views of members of household members as to whether they believe they are employed, looking for work, willing, but not looking for work, or simply not looking. The nature of the

Market & Economic Update

By Jeffrey W. McClure

hurricane impact is that the people who are temporarily unemployed by the disasters are not looking for work as they expect to return to work when things are cleaned up.

Unemployment is the lowest since 2001, and that suggests that we are at or very near "full employment." Just about everyone who wants a job has one. Historically, somewhere around 4% of the working population is between jobs at any given moment as they move to a better job, a transition from one location to another, or are entering or leaving school. The drop in total employment was focused in food-service and drinking establishments. Simply put, following the hurricanes, restaurants, and bars are not doing much business in the affected areas.

Not headlined in many places was another economic statistic. The Institute for Supply Management's (ISM) Index of Manufacturing Activity climbed to 60.8, its highest reading since 2004. Any number above 50 indicates growth in that Index. The survey found "expanding business conditions, with new orders, production employment, order backlogs, and export orders all growing in September." The only reported negatives were fears of a shortage of component parts, raw material, and labor. The ISM additionally reported that non-manufacturing economic activity rose to the highest level since 2005. At the same time, the University of Michigan's survey of consumer sentiment indicated optimism and an expectation of rising inflation in 2018.

The day after the ISM report, Autodata reported a 6.1% surge in automobile sales as pickups and sports utility vehicles sold faster than they were being manufactured. That surge in sales appears to be, at least in part, a result of the unprecedented number of automobiles destroyed in the hurricane-related flooding. An economic cash flow from insurance companies to car dealers is underway that will likely continue for a while. General Motors Co. saw a 12% rise in sales in September over the previous month while Ford reported a 10% rise and Toyota sales rose 15%.

Why is all this important? Final sales to members of the public, or as they are referred to economically, "consumers," represents about 70% of the economic activity in the U.S. When consumers are buying and optimistic about the future, we are likely to see good economic times ahead, and growing earnings for corporations. Those earnings are what drive the stock market, and more stock market value produces more wealth. The bottom line is that we have a healthy, growing economy with likely better times ahead. The only threats currently in sight are worker shortages and the potential for political disruption of imported materials needed to keep manufacturing going.

Answers to some of your questions

You asked these questions:

1. What made Sirena Fest so successful?

A. The Fest committee used social media – Facebook, Twitter, Chat, etc.. They put the Fest on their favorite media and asked their friends to share it with their friends and those friends to share it with others. It was a Social Media blitz that was continuous. Newspapers and yard signs also helped.

B. It was a family event. Children, moms and dads, grandparents came and enjoyed the family time. The children's Mermaid Parade was remarkable and heart-warming.

C. The creek-booths were fun with huge bubbles, cliff climbing, dunking booth, face painting, give-aways, and Mermaid vendors. Families took many memory-making pictures and enjoyed a beautiful day.

D. Everyone, regardless of age, status, or position worked together. The result: an outstanding event.

E Energy and belief; failure was not an option. Mr. Walter LeMar Talbot said, "Success narrows down to two things- being enthusiastic and talking to people. Show me any person of ordinary ability who will go out and earnestly tell their story to four or five people every day, and I will show you a person who just can't help making good."

Mayor Skip Blancett

2. Why are Main Street lanes closed during Christmas in October?

According to TXDoT, lanes are NOT closing. The sign is a safety precaution since employees are surveying and measuring the concrete bridge for January replacement. The State owns Main Street not the Village, therefore; their schedule. However, there is discussion with TXDoT ensuring the flow of traffic will not be interrupted.

3. Is there really a Party-Barn being built on Van Bibber?

No. It is a home. It is an unfounded rumor by the same people who wanted Disannexation. Please call the Village Administrator you need an answer – 947-5060.

4. Fright Night, Tablerock, this weekend. See the stories in Literature come alive.

National Night in Great Oaks

National Night Out is a program that began in 1984 as a way for neighbors to connect with one another and to meet their local law enforcement officers. For most states, National Night Out is held in August, but Texas has chosen the first Tuesday in October for its annual event. The neighbors of Great Oaks have enjoyed this opportunity to meet and greet one another, as well as thank the Bell County Sheriff's Department for their watchfulness and responsiveness year after year. This year, despite a deluge of rain Tuesday night, the neighbors met for hamburgers and hot dogs, lots of chips and dips, and even more desserts. The highlight of the evening was Lt. Perry Moose spending time, meeting the kids and neighbors, and enjoying some dinner that the neighbors served him with gratitude. He spent time reviewing home security protocols and the importance of knowing your neighbors. Great Oaks has a neighborhood watch program which includes being able to quickly inform each other of any suspicious cars or activities. Great Oaks, which is outside of the village, expressed their appreciation for each other but very importantly, for the oversight they sheriff's department provides.

Edmondson to play in Showcase event

Dorislynn Edmondson, 2021 Graduate of Salado High School, will be attending a D9 Showcase Event at the ESPN World Wide Sports Complex in Kissimmee, Florida.

She will be representing her select Texas Blaze organization, as she was selected to compete at this level. Edmondson was selected for her advanced skills offensively.

"She is a great kid and is always willing to put in the work. Her character as a team player really stands out, as she is matured to focus on her role for her team," said her coach Lauren Robertson.

Diamond 9 Sun Classic Fall Showcase will be held at the ESPN Wide World of Sports Complex Kissimmee, FL and surrounding parks October 27-29. The event is an invitational premier national fastpitch showcase event featuring age groups of 14U, 16U and 18U. This event will allow the girls to play and showcase their talents in front of 200 plus college coaches.

Edmondson, 14, is a Freshman at Salado High School, where she currently plays Corner Infield (First and Third) and Catcher for Texas Blaze GTX 18U out of Giddings. She started with Texas Blaze GTX in the Spring on the 14U team.

She was asked by her coach to move to the 18U team at the end of the Spring/ Summer season Coach Lauren Roberts said "I have no doubts that she will be able to handle the game and want her to continue to strive to be the best."

Edmondson started playing when she was 5 years old during coed league ball under Coach Magean.

Robertson Gala held Oct. 13

benefits Salado Museum and College Park

The Salado Museum and College Park will host the annual Robertson Plantation Gala, an evening of fine food and socializing, 6-8 p.m. on Oct. 13. This event is the only time each year that the historic Salado plantation house is open to the public. Tickets are $50 each and are available for purchase at the museum.

The Robertson Plantation, with barn and servants' quarters, is one of the most complete and authentic plantations in Texas. It is presently owned and operated as a working ranch by the direct descendants of Colonel Elijah Sterling Clack Robertson (1820-1879), a Texas pioneer, patriot, soldier, jurist and one of the founders of Salado College and the town of Salado.

Begun in 1854 the Plantation house is a striking example of Greek-Revival style architecture and was a structure of magnificent proportions for the Texas frontier. There are also French, African and Creole as well as Anglo influences in the design of the house. Built of cypress and pine, it has stood the test of time as the Colonel intended.

Stinnett Mill post 1930 (part 2) from Oct. 5

Stinnett Mill ground grain for over sixty years before closing its doors in the 1930s. The machinery for operating the mill that had been left intact when the mill closed was eventually removed and the building allowed to fall into ruins. The basement of the mill became a den for rattlesnakes and other creepy, crawly flea-bitten varmints.

Then after sitting abandoned in a ghostly eerie silence for 15 to 20 years, in 1945 the mill was given a new life and a new purpose. Ruth Berry Brown, the daughter of one of Salado's pioneer families, purchased the old mill to be used as her week-end home. She also wanted to preserve it as a monugrist."

After purchasing the mill and making some changes to convert it into a home, Ruth Berry Brown, sold the mill to Forrest and Linda Gist circa 1968. After four years of working nights and weekends, the Gist family was able to move into the historic mill. The restoration work, however, continued for another ten years. During the restoration stage, Gist was careful to keep the authenticity and character of the original structure by using materials from old homes and buildings that were being torn down in the Salado, Taylor, and Waco areas.

After their purchase of the mill from Gist in 1992, David and Pat Mikulencak was another couple to call Stinnett Mill home. The couple reared three children on the banks of the Salado while residing in the converted mill. Gist had done the first phase of the restoration that preserved the rustic appearance of the mill. During the 20 years the Mikulencaks lived in the mill, they completed the second phase of restoration by adding energy efficient features and a contemporary interior design.

David and Whitney Hill purchased the mill in 2010 and like the previous owners, they have worked to preserve the historic nature of the mill. And thus, Ruth Berry Brown's objective of preserving the mill as a monument to the history of the region has been met and Stinnett Mill lives on.

letters. DON'T SPIT ON THE FLOOR! That was to guard against getting germs in the ment to the history of the region. With this in mind, she did considerable work restoring the building, including putting on a new roof. The original roof was made of shingles fashioned by hand with a froe.

When author A. T. Jackson came to Salado in the early 1970s to gather information for his book Mills of Yesteryear, he explored the grounds and the mill building and after a thorough inspection, he described Stinnett Mill as follows:

"An examination of the interior of the old mill building disclosed several features of interest. In the south end of the ground-level floor was a large fireplace, built of native limestone. In the south center of the first floor is a trap door through which a pipe originally came and enabled a workman to cut off the power. But to cut off the supply of water someone had to go to the dam, about nine hundred yards southwest of the building, to cut it off at the sluice by lowering the gate. When the mill was closed at night the machinery was disconnected in the building, but the water was permitted to run in the sluice."

"Looking down the shaft beneath the cut-off, one sees a roughly circular excavation, about four feet across, dug through rocks and stony soil, leading to a depth of some thirty feet. In the bottom of this shaft, during the operation of the mill, was a turbine to furnish power for the mill. The water from the sluice entered the basement through an opening with a well-built archway. The water poured into the shaft, turned the turbine and then was pumped or flowed out of the sluice at the opposite side and started on its circuitous route for return to the stream."

In his handwritten notes regarding his observations, Jackson wrote:

"Inside steps, leading from the first to second floor, had a message of sanitation and health precautions lettered on them. Near the top step and leading down, step by step, were lettered these words in black paint: DON'T SPIT ON THE FLOOR! THAT MEANS YOU!"

That the message might not be ignored, it was repeated on the south wall in much larger

The bidding:
 East 1♣ South 3♣ West 4♣ North 4♣

A fine declarer, besides playing his cards well, does everything he can to induce the defenders to make a mistake. Take this case where declarer combined both qualities to make a doubled contract that seemed doomed from the start. West led a club, taken by dummy's ace, and South faced his first problem -- how to handle the spades so as to lose only one trump trick. (He also had two heart and two diamond losers to worry about.) After deciding that East had the trump ace but probably not A-J-x, declarer led a low spade

But East was soon to learn why South had taken the ace so early in the proceedings. Declarer next cashed the spade and diamond queens, preparing for the situation he hoped now existed. His efforts were amply rewarded when he led a heart from dummy, forcing East to win with the king. East had only clubs left and had to lead one, allowing South to dispose of his jack of hearts while ruffing in dummy. Declarer then claimed the rest to make four spades doubled. Had South disclosed his intentions by drawing trumps and cashing the K-Q of diamonds before playing the ace of hearts, East might have jettisoned his king under the ace and thereby defeated the contract. Perhaps East should have done that anyway, but South's smooth-as-silk operation caught him completely by surprise. (c) 2017 King Features Syndicate Inc.

The Tiger Beetle is one of the fastest insects

The term “hiding in plain sight” is a term that is used to describe things that should stand out from other things where it is, but often goes overlooked. There is actually a beetle that is found in west Texas that fits this description perfectly, and that insect is the Tiger Beetle.

The species of Tiger Beetle (Cicindela lemniscata) that is found in this area can be observed from western Texas westward to the Pacific coast of California southward throughout Baja California. Taxonomically speaking, it comes from a large and diverse group of insects that can be seen world-wide, with the majority of the 2,000+ species living in the areas of the Far East and the tropical areas of South America.

Wild About Texas

Tiger Beetles are, as the name implies, beetles, and beetles are insects, and like other members of this group, they have three body parts: the head, the thorax, and the abdomen. Each one of these body parts has a specific purpose, with the head being the area where the eyes and feeding appendages are, the thorax is where the legs and wings are attached, and the abdomen is where the majority of the internal organs are housed. Also like others in the insect group, the skeletal structure is on the outside of their body. This structure is known as the exoskeleton. They have six legs, as well as two pairs of wings and two antennae.

This particular species of beetle is quite attractive and eye-catching as the exoskeleton can be various shades of metallic blue, green, or red. It is also known for its large, bulbous eyes that are almost disproportionate to the rest of this quarter-inch long insect. Its legs are long and spindly, and as such, its body is well off of the ground as it runs. The mandibles, or outer jaws, are also quite large and distinctive, as is the pair of long, thin antennae on the front of the head.

While allowing the animal to stand out against the habitat that it normally prefers, which is usually the sandy loam areas surrounding permanent bodies of water, particularly creeks, draws, and rivers, this brilliant color pattern actually aids in its protection as it gives the animal a cryptic appearance that allows them to go unnoticed until it moves.

Tiger Beetles are highly

predatorial, utilizing its ridiculous speed to overrun and its strong mandibles to overpower smaller insect prey. Some species have been clocked at just over five miles per hour, and in human terms, that is not too terribly fast. However, when the size and speed ratio is calculated to an equivalent amount for humans, it means that a man would be able to run at a video game like speed of over four hundred miles per hour! It is no wonder that this species is able to capture even the “fastest” of smaller insects.

Even while in the larval stage this species is a ruthless predator. Tiger Beetle larvae live in shallow borrows in the sandy soil with their heads positioned near the opening of the burrow. As unsuspecting insects walk by, the larval stage of this beetle will jump out from the burrow and grab its prey with its jagged mandibles and begin to feed on the victim.

The Tiger Beetle is active during the day, and many can be observed along the shorelines of local rivers and creeks during the spring, summer and fall. Once it perceives the slightest bit of danger, it will run in short bursts of speed to another spot, quickly blending in despite its bright coloration. Perhaps it disappears so quickly because the eye of the potential predator is still attempting to focus on the insect with the unreal burst of speed that just disappeared from plain sight.
