

Jack Oliver Day will be Sept. 21 on his 94th!

Jack -- as he is known to everyone in Bell County -- turns 94 on Sept. 21.

With that in mind, Bell County Commissioners Court took the opportunity earlier this week to proclaim his birthday Sept. 21 2018 as Colonel John W. Oliver, Jr. Day in Bell County.

Bell County Judge Jon Burrows declared the following before he and County Commissioners Russell Schneider, (Prec. 1), Tim Brown (Prec. 2), Bill Schumann (Prec. 3) and John Fisher (Prec. 4) affixed their signatures to the proclamation:

"WHEREAS, it has been brought to the attention of our office that Retired Precinct Four County Commission Colonel Jack Oliver is celebrating another birthday, in a long, long, long history of celebrating birthdays, in fact his 94th birthday on September 21st, and

"WHEREAS, Colonel Oliver, has been, and continues to be, an inspiration to us all with his good humor, dynamic personality, love of Bell County and his country, and

"WHEREAS, Bell County, the Bell County Commissioners Court, the entire Central Texas area, and the U.S. Army Air Corps/ U.S. Air Force would simply not be the same without the service and contributions of Colonel Jack Oliver, and

"WHEREAS, Bell County wishes to publically recognize and thank JACK for his service and contributions to Bell County as a whole and the Commissioners Court in particular, and to wish him well on the occasion of his 94th birthday;

"NOW THEREFORE, I, JON H. BURROWS, County Judge of Bell County, Texas, and the entire Commissioners Court proclaim Friday, September 21, 2018 as "Colonel Jack Oliver Day in Bell County, Texas" in honor of his birthday, and we join his legions of friends in celebrating this great event."

Jack was raised on the 192 acre Oliver farm four miles east of Belton that was given to his father by Uncle Gus who built a home for his nephew as a wedding present. Jack's mother, Elizabeth Miller Oliver was the daughter of a Katy MKT Railroad fireman and engineer.

Jack says his upbringing was typical of any farm boy in the 1930s. "I milked four cows every morning and evening to get the skimmed milk for my Hampshire hogs," he recalls.

His dad turned over the operations of the small farm to Jack when he was 12 years old and Oliver Sr. was given command of the CCC Camp at Mother Neff Park near McGregor.

He ran the farm throughout high school '36-40. Oliver received the "principal" appointment to West Point in 1940 but had a ruptured appendix and nearly died (out of bodycoma). He could not accept the appointment. The next year 1941 he received the principal appointment to the Naval Academy. Upon taking the physical he found you had to be 5'6".

Col. Jack Oliver in uniform

Anyone who knows him, knows that Jack had to stretch to get 5'4".

So instead, he went to Texas A&M in the spring of 1942, joined the Aggie Corps, Company E, Coast Artillery, Bissel Hall, starting a rough year as an aggie freshman.

After that first semester, Jack was offered an opportunity to go to the "military" replacement center in Houston, Texas and take the entrance exams for an Air Corps flying cadet.

He passed all three as Pilot, Navigator and Bombardier.

Even though Jack had over 30 hours in pilot training at Coulter Field east of Bryan, Texas, he was only offered a chance to go to Navigation training. He accepted and went to the first Bombardier-Navigator cadet class at Concho Field, San Angelo, Texas in March 1943. The Air Corps left him at A&M to finish the winter semester after enlisting on 22 November in the Air Corps.

Oliver finished the Bombardier-Navigator training and was assigned as a crew member on a B-24 for training as a combat crew Bombardier-Navigator, 2nd Lieutenant, at Alamogordo, New Mexico. The entire training group was reassigned to Charleston, SC to finish their overseas training.

On Jan. 1 1944, in Charleston, SC, Jack met his soon bride to be, Miriam Garrick. They were married before the end of the month on Jan. 30, 1944. A week later Jack left for overseas (Italy) with his bomber crew. In less than six months Jack flew 53 combat missions, one purple heart on May 16 1944, the second on June 30 1944, his 53rd mission. He also received the Distinguished Flying Cross and many Air Medals.

He served 30 years active duty as a regular Air Force officer and retired to his GI farm in Texas in 1972. He served 12 years as Bell County Commissioner for Precinct 4, which included Killeen, Fort Hood and Salado.

In the late 1990s he inherited part of the old Oliver farm and moved there, setting the title to his autobiography Full Circle.

"I now own the house I was born in (under a rainbow) in 1924," Oliver said.

Which is where he will celebrate his 94th birthday on Colonel Jack Oliver Day in Bell County.

Markets turn in another stellar week

The Markets

The S&P 500 Stock Index (SPX) turned in another stellar week, gaining 1.16 percent to close at 2904.98. While that was not as high as it was at the end of August it did manage to hold above the 2900 level, shrugging off bad news as it remains fixated on corporate earnings and ignoring the threats of trade war damage and slowing retail sales. The 10-Year U.S. Treasury note, the benchmark for bonds, jumped up to close the week at 2.997 percent. That was a good thing, because the 2-Year Treasury climbed to 2.782 percent, further flattening the yield curve. The average 30-year mortgage followed suit, rising to 4.68 percent, up from 3.83 percent a year ago.

West Texas Intermediate Crude Oil (WTI) rose with the market, ending the week just two cents short of $70 per barrel as concerns about tropical storm Gordon forced offshore rigs to shut down. Gold fell another 0.29 percent to close at $1,189.30 as the dollar continued to rise against the Chinese Yuan.

The Economy

U.S. retail sales, the biggest driver in the economy, rose 0.1 percent in August but more significantly, were up 6.6 percent from last year. The caution in that report was that a 0.4 percent increase for the month was widely anticipated. Looking under the hood, a big drag was auto sales, which dropped 0.8 percent for the month. A factor in that decline may be that auto loan interest rates are up a full percentage point from this time last year, effectively

Market & Economic Update

By Jeffrey W. McClure

increasing the cost by a substantial amount.

Another major driver in the economy, industrial production, was 4.9 percent higher in August from a year ago, continuing a rise that kicked in back in 2016. In a point of irony that economists often see, the biggest recent gains in factory production were from automobile vehicle and parts production, the same area that slumped last month in retail sales. Expect to see that area shrink in the upcoming months as automobile inventories pile up.

In yet another bit of good news, the Consumer Price Index only rose 0.2 percent in August but was up 2.7 percent from a year ago. As average hourly wages rose 2.9 percent, that means that the average worker in the U.S. saw a real wage increase of 0.2 percent over the last year. That may not sound like much, but wages have struggled to keep up with inflation for the past several years. Despite the meager rise in real wages, a University of Michigan survey puts consumer confidence the second highest it has been since 2004.

A less obvious effect of those increases is that the Federal Reserve governors seem to be more and more confident that short-term interest rates will need to continue to be increased over the next year. This month there is a near consensus belief that the Fed will raise interest rates another quarter percent and will continue to do so each calendar quarter over the next year. If that is correct, the current 2 percent short-term rate would grow to 2.5 percent by the end of the year and be at 3 percent by this time next year. At that point, either car and mortgage loan rates will be much higher or the yield curve will be approaching the dreaded inversion that generally forecasts a coming recession.

Those rising interest rates are already starting to have an effect as U.S. home loan originations fell to a four-year low in the second quarter, down 16 percent from the first quarter and 27 percent from a year ago. The Fed's purpose in raising interest rates is to slow down the economy before it overheats, and it seems to be working.

The U.S. economy continues on a roll, and economists generally agree that much of that is due to increased federal borrowing, spending, and tax cuts. The Treasury Department officially announced that the federal deficit for the first 11 months of fiscal year 2018 was $898 billion, 33 percent larger than the deficit at this point last year. While that may not be a great thing for the longer term, even the economists at Dismal-Science.com put the chances of a recession in the next twelve months in the low single digits.

The Blue-Collar Recovery

The economic recovery is really beginning to reach into Trump country.

The president is famous for his extravagant promises, involving, invariably, the biggest and the best. The landscape is littered with examples, although he never promised to create blue-collar jobs at the fastest clip since 1984, something he achieved in the first half of 2018.

A labor market that has been rocky since the financial crisis, and hasn't truly delivered for many workers for decades, is robust enough to reach all corners of the economy, including Trump areas that have recently been doing better than other parts of the country.

As the Brookings Institution observes, "goods-producing industries have been surging while services industries have seen their seasonally adjusted employment growth slow since 2016." This is good news for smaller, more rural areas, which are now actually outpacing the growth rate in large urban areas. According to Jed Kolko of Indeed Hiring Lab, "job growth accelerated between 2016 and '17 in counties that Trump won by at least 20 points." Several things are going on. As the labor market has tightened -- in June, there were 6.7 million job openings and 6.6 million unemployed Americans -- it has benefited workers down the income scale.

The administration, for its part, has leaned into a pro-growth tax and deregulatory program meant to spur more investment and remove burdens on business. The goal has been to defeat fatalist predictions of a "secular stagnation" that supposedly meant that we could never realistically expect anything more than middling economic growth. At the moment, the warnings are less of stagnation than of an alleged labor shortage that, according to CNBC, is nearing "epidemic proportions." This is exactly what we need. As Josh Barro of Business Insider points out, a tight labor market puts welcome upward pressure on wages and creates an incentive for workers to get more training and employers to provide it. This dynamic still needs time to take hold. Wage growth, at least by traditional measures, has been surprisingly sluggish given the low unemployment rate (the White House argues that wages are being mismeasured and underestimated). But in August, encouragingly, average hourly wages increased 2.9 percent from a year ago, the biggest increase since June 2009.

As for training, a report from the National Association of Manufacturers says that two-thirds of manufacturers plan to increase worker training in the next year. This is so important because it's only possible to achieve sustainable wage gains by increasing the productivity of workers. And so far, despite the boom, productivity increases have still been lagging.

The encouraging news for blue-collar workers is welcome. But we should set our sights higher. Regaining what was lost in the aftermath of the financial crisis isn't enough. The national priority should be, as Oren Cass of the Manhattan Institute argues in his forthcoming book "The Once and Future Worker," returning to a lost golden age of work, when labor force participation rates and wage growth were both reliably high.

The implicit Trump pledge in the 2016 campaign was of jobs good and stable enough to make a decent living and raise a family. That should never be overpromising in America. Rich Lowry is editor of the National Review.

International Day of Peace celebrated Sept. 21 at the Beltonian Theater

The 3rd Annual Concert for Peace will feature Austin singer songwriter Betty Soo. This concert has a very specific intention to bring attention to the International Day of Peace, which is celebrated each year on September 21. Proceeds from this event will go to support the Children's Advocacy Center of Bell County in Belton.

This year the concert will be hosted this year by the Beltonian Theater in downtown Belton. During the intermission, there will be several items available for purchase including one-of-a kind hand-painted pinwheels (part of the International Pinwheel for Peace Project) painted by local artists, and clay doves by local artist Amy Flinn. This will be the 9th year of Amy's 1000 Dove Project. Proceeds from all sales support The Children's Advocacy Center.

they come. Raised outside Houston by first-generation Korean immigrant parents, educated at UT, she grew up listening to the Great American songbook and country radio. Older sisters led her to the world of singer/songwriters, and nights spent at The Cactus Café and Hole In The Wall turned her on to the legacy of Texas song. Her 2007 solo disc, Little Tiny Secrets, garnered heavy regional airplay; 2009's Heat Sin Water Sin produced by Gurf Morlix (Lucinda Williams, Ray Wylie Hubbard), provided building blocks to a national (and international) audience. In 2014, When We're Gone, co-produced with cellist Brian Standerfer (Alejandro Escovedo, Terry Allen) placed her firmly in the first rank of songwriters working today. Her awards include New Folk at Kerrville, Songwriter of the Year at Big Top Chautauqua and The Dave Carter Songwriting Award at Sisters Folk Festival.

Doors will open at 6:30 and the concert will begin at 7:30. Tickets are $20 and all seats are reserved. Tickets are on sale now online or at the Beltonian boxoffice. A limited amount free tickets have been reserved for students, but students must go to the box office to get a ticket.

Eagles shut out Travis Rebels in 42-0 rout

By TIM FLEISCHER
 EDITOR-IN-CHIEF

Salado Eagles stymied a lackluster Austin Travis Rebels squad, shutting them down for no first downs while their ground and pound run attack churned up 344 yards of artificial turf at the venerable Austin House stadium Sept. 13 for a 42-0 non-district win.

The Eagles will face Taylor for Homecoming at 7:30 p.m. Sept. 21 at Eagle Field.

Salado scored on all but three possessions that resulted in punts late in the game with backups filling positions. The Eagles also had 26 first downs in the game and ate up more than 30 minutes of game clock.

Salado scored on all four of its possessions in the first half to take a 28-0 lead as Wrook Brown was perfect in kicking extra points for the second time this season.

After forcing Travis to three-and-out, Salado drove 70 yards in 4:39 on 12 running plays. Hunter Turk bulled through the Rebel defense for a 7 yard touchdown with 5:17 left in the first. Brown added the PAT for 7-0 lead.

Salado again forced Travis to three-and-out and drove 71 yards on 11 plays, only one of them a pass from freshman quarter night on a 3 yard lunge with 1:50 left in the half.

The Eagles scored on their first two possessions of the second half. Wesley Quinn returned the second half kick 31 yards to the Eagle 42 yard line. Cook scored six plays later on a four yard run. The drive was highlighted by a 33 yard run by Brown who spun through defenders to get into the red zone. Brown kicked the extra point for a 35-0 lead at 9:46 in the third.

Salado gave up no yardage on the next series and Self returned the punt 18 yards to the Travis 46 yard line.

Six plays later, Quinn scored from the Rebel 3. Brown kicked his final PAT through the uprights for the 42-0 lead with 5:23 left in the third.

Mercifully, the Eagles put on the brakes with substitutes getting playing time through the final 18 minutes of play.

Freshmen slip past Austin Travis

Salado Freshmen Eagles got past their counterparts from Austin Travis thanks to two successful two-point conversions on Sept. 12. Both teams scored four touchdowns in the game, but the two-point tries by the Eagles was the difference.

After a scoreless first quarter, both squads scored touchdowns in the second.

Fullback Blake Volk ran for a touchdown to start the scoring for Salado. Toby Rios ran in the two-point conversion.

The Eagles defense scored a touchdown on a botched punt attempt, when Braydon Summers recovered the ball in the endzone. Boden Savage scored the two-point conversion. Salado had a 16-14 lead at the half.

Volk had two more touchdowns, scoring at the 4:51 and 2:02 mark of the third quarter.

The Eagles had three straight goal line defenses pinned inside their five yard line.

After scoring two touchdowns in the fourth quarter, Travis tried for an onside kick but Chase Joiner recovered the ball to secure the win for Salado.

Coach Ramiro Mojica describes the game as a "slobber knocker."

"Our young men kept fighting back no matter how hard the circumstances got," he said. "The field, the mud, the ants, and the humidity created added adversity that made a difficult challenger even more challenging. Our athletes were up for that challenge!"

While Volk led the offense scoring three of the four touchdowns, Colton Dockray, Ethan Bagley and Braydon Summers led the defensive squad.

Willy Jeep has some stories to tell: check it out during AMC car show

AS TOLD TO JAY RITCH

Come and meet me during the AMC Car Show at Pace Park on Saturday Sept. 22. I am a 70+ year old Willy Jeep now owned by Jay Ritch of Salado.

Let me introduce myself I recollect some young women and old men, noise, lights; I remember vibrations and sparks that shook my frame. I rolled out of the Toledo war plant on my own four wheels in November of 1942. I came into this world thanks to a US Army government contract for a scout car. The requirements were tough to meet and the time was very short to produce a prototype. Only one company met the challenge, a little car maker called Bantam. Bantam just wasn't big enough to meet the demand of a nation gearing up for global war, so the Army thanked them kindly for the inspired design work and handed production contracts to Willys-Overland and Ford. I'm a Willys MB, one of about 360,000 that were made to win the war (Ford made another 270,000).

The war years

I spent my war years, like so many unsung heroes of the Greatest Generation, doing the mundane rear-echelon duties that drive the tip of the spear units that you see winning glory in the books and movies. I remained state-side, fulfilling my duties until the end of the war, then I rode a rail car to the Jewel of the South, Atlanta! There, the Army rebuilt me, fixing all the little things that were worn down by my 3 short hard years in service. I emerged from the 5th SC Shop in Atlanta all ready to continue in the peacetime Army, but still bearing the scars of wartime service; I have 3 sets of initials carved into my steering wheel by bored GI's. That nice Atlanta overhaul shop even adorned me with a brass plate bolted to my engine! I stayed in the Army, shuttling soldiers back and forth until I was retired to civilian life back in '51.

I was sold to a nice young man, I later found out everyone called him Dad. He took me to Atlanta and we studied Orthodontics at Emory University and I learned so much about teeth. Dad finished school and went back home to Talladega. We had many adventures around Alabama, but I noticed we kept going to see a nice young lady (everyone later called her Mom). I carried Mom and Dad around town, to country picnics with their friends and we had a grand time!

We went gold panning in Talladega, but the hills were steep, muddy and rutted and Dad found out that some things are impossible even for Jeeps! Even though we didn't find the mother lode and Dad and Mom had to walk out and leave me in the woods, she married him in 1954. Dad went back to Emory for residency, and we drove into Atlanta every day! Houses were bought and sold, babies were born, residency was finished and we all moved back to Alabama.

The Michaels were my family – I took care of them just like I took care of my soldiers, never breaking down and always ready to go! The children would climb and play soldier and explore on me when they were little, and later I taught them how to drive. The children got big and moved away, and I spent more time in the barn, covered with a blanket and waiting for the next trip outside. Summers and winters passed, children grew up and grandchildren took their place. One day, Dad told me he was going to fix me up like new! Dad had time now, he no longer flew his airplane, he no longer fixed teeth, so he would sand my rusty spots, fix my dents, and carefully started to tag and replace all my little parts. The job was a big one and he ran out of time. I didn't see him anymore, so I slept in the shop at his house in Montgomery, covered with a blanket and wondering what was next.

What I did not know, was that in 1998, Dad's son, Ken told one of his friends in Birmingham about me; nothing happened then, but as life goes, a seed was planted. When Mom had to move from the wonderful Montgomery home in 2014, Ken asked this friend if I could come live with him in Texas!

Off to Texas

I had never been across the Mississippi before, but how could I make the trip - I was a mess! All my little parts were in bags and scattered about, I could not crank or even move on my own! Happily, Jay and his friends were ready, when they came to pick me up, it was the first time I left the shop in years! Mom and Ken came out to see me and say goodbye, she even told Jay that I was her courtin' Jeep (I blushed a little and Jay blushed a lot). Jay, Randall and Matt loaded me onto a trailer and away we went, off to new adventures in Texas! I had NEVER BEEN SO FAST in all my life, those maniacs drove from Montgomery to Salado, leaving Saturday night and pulled into Salado Sunday afternoon, they laughed at their speed and congratulated themselves on no citations, but they deserved plenty!

I could see Salado was different, but then I rolled into Jay's garage and stayed there while he started to put things back together. His neighbor Frank asked if I could carry the Ft Hood Grand Marshall in the Salado Christmas Parade; what an exciting idea but I was still in pieces! We went to a shop in Salado and all the nice men there finished the hard stuff. They even made a video of the very first time my engine started, as reliable as ever! Jay told me that night that he sent the video to Ken who showed it to Mom in Alabama! The day before the Salado Christmas Parade, Jay took me on a drive! It was the first time I had driven on a road since the 1970's! Jay painted a fresh coat of olive drab on me that night and the next afternoon, a nice officer from Ft Hood walked around, checking my lines and asking questions and then hopped in the back seat and we rode around Salado – I thought this was like 1942 again! More videos of the parade were sent to Mom in Alabama!

A trip to Florida

We drove all over Salado for a year, even driving out to Florence and to Walburg and Georgetown! We explored backroads, but I'm afraid all was not well. I was over 70 years old and, well, you know what they say about spring chickens. A man in Tampa is a Jeep doctor, and Jay and his friends took me to Florida! We met so many nice people on the way there, every time Jay stopped for gas or food, people would come and look at me and tell stories, remembering their old Jeeps. I stayed in Tampa for many months, all my insides were fixed, overhauled, bored and sleeved, rebuilt and I feel like new again! They even fixed a driveshaft that had been welded wrong back in 1942. Those insane speeding maniacs brought me back to my home in Salado, but I don't spend too long in the garage any more. We go for drives all over Salado, sometimes for errands and sometimes just to see the stars at night.

I do my best to keep Jay from speeding, I don't like to drive faster than 40 mph. He seems to like it and we have had many adventures.

Driving adventures are fine, but so are stories and Salado people tell the best ones. My favorites are when people tell stories about other Jeeps, or tell stories from their grandpa's about that big war or just ask to sit in me and have pictures taken. I've met an old soldier here who told me about being ordered to steal a Jeep from the British, his CO even gave him bolt cutters to cut the lock off the steering wheel! Another soldier sat down and started my engine, just to remember the sound from when he drove a Willys MB in Korea. One soldier just asked to sit in the seat and smell the hot oil and canvas and gasoline. And one mean old soldier told me about wrecking a Jeep and then setting off a grenade to bolster his story about being "attacked!" Jay told me about his Great Uncle who drove a Jeep like me all over North Africa, Sicily, Normandy and Europe!

I'm 75 years old now, I've seen war, peace, Atlanta traffic, Alabama woods, Salado parades and Tampa test drives. I've hosted picnics on my hood and children behind my steering wheel. I've seen everything from Montgomery to Texas to Tampa and back (at a high rate of speed). I've carried soldiers in 1942 and then again in 2017. I still have many adventures to make, many young people to connect to and old people to reconnect with, but Salado is my new home. If you see me, wave and say Hi!

And Jay told me they will be sending this newspaper clipping to Mom in Alabama, so she can catch up on my adventures!

The Willy Jeep today. Come see it during the AMC Car Show at Pace Park on Sept. 22.

Kids have always loved the Jeep as shown in this photo from August 1956. They still do today!

Contract Bridge

By Steve Becker

Zia Mahmood, one of the world's top players, is especially noted for his ability to guess the location of missing key cards.

In this deal from the 1984 World Team Olympiad, Zia demonstrated that there often is more to a successful "guess" than at first meets the eye.

Zia, then a member of the Pakistani team, got to four hearts as shown, and West started with the K-A-Q of spades, dummy ruffing the third spade with the heart four. Zia could see that a successful trump finesse would greatly aid his cause, and he also realized that West did not have to have the queen of hearts for his opening bid.

South dealer.

East-West vulnerable.

SOUTH

The bidding:

| South | West | North | East |
|-------|------|-------|------|
| Pass | 1 ♠ | Pass | Pass |
| Dble | Pass | 2 ♠ | Pass |
| 3 ♥ | Pass | 4 ♠ | |

Opening lead — king of spades.

Nevertheless, at trick four Zia crossed to the club queen, led a low heart and finessed the ten. The heart ace was followed by a club to the ace and the heart king, felling West's queen and giving South 10 tricks -- four hearts, four clubs, the diamond ace and a spade ruff in dummy.

How did Zia know West had the heart queen? The answer is that he didn't, but he had good reasons for playing as he did.

First, West's spade continuation at trick three, forcing dummy to ruff, made it seem that he was trying to protect a potential trump trick.

Second, finessing against West was the better technical play. It would bring in the entire suit if West had started with Q-x or Q-x-x, while a finesse against East would pick up the suit without loss only if he had started with Q-x-x.

Third, if the finesse lost to East, West would then become marked with the diamond king for his opening bid, giving declarer his contract with the aid of a subsequent diamond finesse.

And so, a lot more thought went into Zia's successful "guess" than might appear at first glance, which is usually the case when a player of his caliber "guesses" correctly.

Black-capped Vireo

Black-capped Vireo are endangered

In regards to bird identification, a dear friend who just so happened to be a biologist from Texas Parks and Wildlife once told me, "If it soars, it is a hawk; if it swims, it is a duck; everything else is just sparrows". He was being facetious of course, but all too often, many amateur bird enthusiasts will employ this broad description. And it is quite effortless to do, especially with the sheer number and similarities of this large avian family. A few species "stand out" however, and one species known as the Chipping Sparrow fits that bill.

At one time, the summer range of this boisterous songbird extended from central Kansas southwestward to southern Coahuila, Mexico. However, due primarily to habitat loss, this endangered species now has a much more limited, and fragmented range. Currently it can be observed in only three counties of Oklahoma, and much of its range in Texas has been altered significantly enough to prevent nesting. It is most commonly found in the shinneries of the Edwards Plateau, preferring areas where a mixture of oak and juniper allow for sufficient cover. It can also be observed in the Sierra Madre Oriental of central Coahuila. The winter months are spent along the western coast of Mexico, primarily in southern Jalisco (near Acapulco).

The Black-capped Vireo is a fairly small bird with a body length of 4.5 inches and a wingspan of only 8 inches. More often than not, it is heard much more frequently than it is seen. The call has been likened to an insistent child, often in two or three note phrases. However, once a birding enthusiast identifies the callers whereabouts, it is often observed flying away rapidly in a direct flight pattern to the next densely foliated areas.

When actually seen, males can be quite stunning. The underparts are white, while the upperparts are colored a light olive hue. The olive wings are adorned with yellow, white, and black wing bars. The head is polished black with white "glasses" that are broken above the bright red eyes. The bill is straight and black while the legs and feet are grayish.

Females, while attractive in their own right, are not as colorfully decorated as the males are. Rather than having the sharply contrasting white underparts, females have more of a buff color on their underside. The olive head coloration does not stand out from the upperparts, and the "glasses" that surround the females eyes are more of a tawny white.

Constantly on the move within the confines of its heavy-foliaged habitat, this omnivorous bird will feed on most insects and insect larvae that it comes in contact with. Other arthropods such as spiders are not turned down as a meal, and it will occasionally feed on fruits and berries.

Primarily a solitary bird, it will remain monogamous during the breeding season. After breeding, the small cup-shaped nest will be constructed by both sexes. This nest is usually built between one and four feet off of the ground and is comprised up of vegetation such as leaves, twigs, and various grasses. The diminutive three - five eggs are unmarked white and are only a mere 3/4 inch by 1/2 inch in size. Both sexes rotate the incubation cycles with the female being the primary care during the evening. Incubation lasts just over two weeks and both parents will feed the hatchlings an additional two weeks until the young are able to leave the nest. Most females will produce two broods annually.

The Black-capped Vireo has been listed by the United States Fish and Wildlife Service as an endangered species since 1987, and as stated before, habitat loss is the primary cause for its disappearance in many areas. However, habitat loss is not the only danger that this species has to contend with. It is also vulnerable to Cowbird brood parasitism. This is where a female Cowbird will lay her eggs in the Vireo's nest, and the parent Vireos will unknowingly incubate the Cowbird's eggs. Upon hatching, the young parasitic birds will out-compete the neonate Vireos for food, and many times will actually nudge the baby Vireos out of the nest to their demise on the ground. One study has shown that over 90% of Black-capped Vireo nests were parasitized by Cowbirds.

Despite the loss of habitat, as well as the parasitic nature of the Cowbird, in some areas, the Black-capped Vireo is still common to abundant. One such area is the Eaton Hill Nature Center and Preserve in Sonora, where the Black-capped Vireo has taken on the role as the Avian All-Star of the Preserve.

Job matching portal for students/employers

Temple College is offering a new resource to match students with prospective employers. Local businesses that need employees can go to www.templejc.edu/bce and look for the link to the job matching portal. There, they can create an account that will enable them to post jobs and look for prospective employees. There is no charge for businesses to use the service.

Temple College partnered with GradLeaders to offer the new service at the request of local employers.

"We want to support our business communities and provide easy access to jobs for our students," said Gracie Conner, director of the Business and Continuing Education Division.

For more information on the new job matching portal, call 254-298-8625.
