

Texas History Day is June 8

From its prehistoric residents that settled just outside of Salado to land grants that gave us our current border, Texas is the product of many cultures who have left their mark on this place.

Texas History Day will celebrate the many cultures that make up Texas life as we know it with demonstrations and presentations throughout the day at the Salado Civic Center and at Salado Museum and College Park on June 8.

The Texas History Days Symposium will feature several speakers representing historical cultures of Texas. The symposium will be held upstairs at the Salado Civic Center, 601 Main Street.

Speakers are the following: Dr. Clark Warnecke of the Gault School of Archaeological Research will speak on pre-historic cultures; Patricia Walsh Small will speak about the families brought in by Spanish land grants in Texas (see story page 1C); Arthur Reza will talk about vaqueros; a representative from the Consulate General of Mexico will make a presentation; Brian Vanicek speaking about the Czech community and Roscoe Harrison accompanied by Linda Seawood will make a presentation about African American culture in Central Texas. The symposium will end with a tour of the black cemetery of Salado led by Roscoe Harrison and Linda Seawood. Cost for the symposium is $25 per person. Tickets available at central-texas-tickets.com.

Genealogy classes will be presented by Martha Everman Jones. Tickets are $10 per class. See story on Page 4A of this edition.

Hands-On Activities and demonstrations by Homestead Heritage plus fun family events on the Civic Center grounds. A tipi will be set up on the grounds of the Civic Center as well. The Salado Historical Society cabins will be open for exploration.

Local artists will take part in a Quick Draw event 10 a.m.-noon at the log cabins on Main. Artists will have two hours in which to complete their artwork. You can bid on the various art as it is being painted. Winning bidders can take home the art shortly after the end of the Quick Draw event.

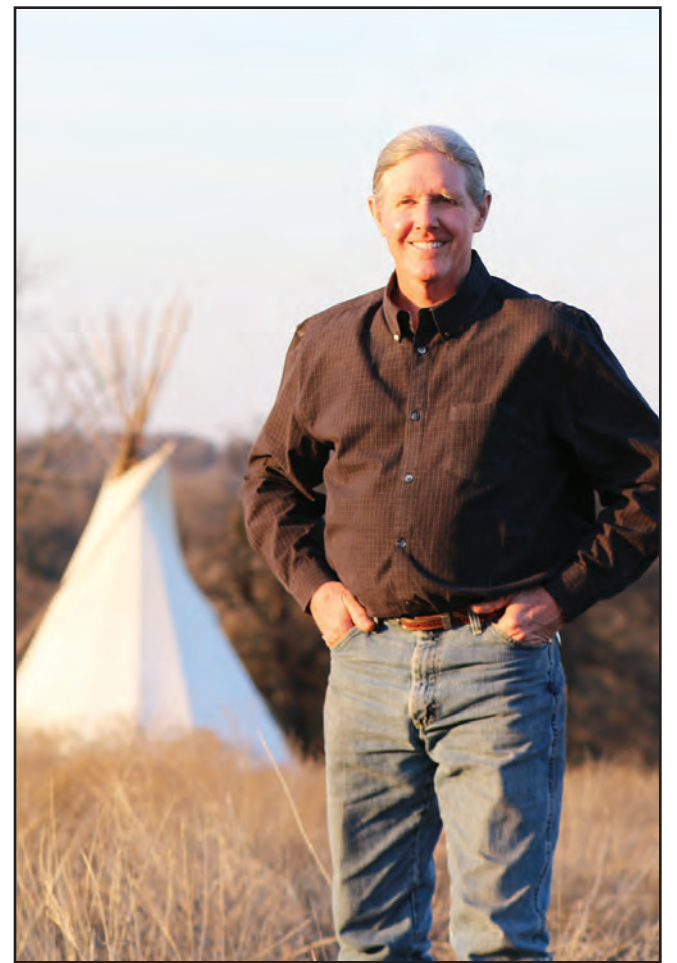

How the Scots Came to Texas: The program consists of five different segments presented hourly throughout the day with words and video by speaker and college professor Nancy Boyens and with live music by historian and musician Joe Romeo. Discover the story of Salado founding father, Sterling Robertson, his Empresario grant and colony, the migration of Scots into the Appalachian Mountains and on to Texas. See story page 1C.

21 Main will have an old-time piano player performing throughout the day on the baby grand in the store located in Salado Square.

Barrow Brewing Co. will host its last farmers market of the season 4-8 p.m. June 8. Richard Egg will have his traditional wood lathe available for demos. At 5:30 p.m. a Square Dance teacher will be at Barrow Brewing teaching anyone who would like to learn or enjoy. At 7 p.m. the Austin-based rock and roll band, Bottlecap Mountain will take the stage.

After a decade of sitting empty, the old Mill Creek Supper Club will have a new life as a gathering hall called The View at the Creek.

The facility will have capacity to seat more than 230 for dining. It will have a full bar through the Mill Creek Country Club license for groups, weddings, reunions and parties that lease the facility. The facility also has a set-up space for caterers.

You can call 254-947-5698 for details on renting the facility, as well as putting together golfing and party packages for business and social groups.

"We are already booking Christmas and holiday parties there," said Billy Helm. Helm thanked the Salado Volunteers for their hours of work in cleaning out the old supper club and putting a fresh clean look to it.

Helm announced that Mill Creek would again host a fireworks show on the Saturday after Independence Day. The best place to watch the show will be at

BoA set to annex school property

By TIM FLEISCHER
EDITOR-IN-CHIEF

Salado aldermen will conduct the first reading of a series of ordinances to annex the Salado school properties on Thomas Arnold Road and Williams Road as well as the rights-of-way for Salado School Road and Williams Road at 6:30 p.m. June 6.

The school properties are annexing into the Village in order to tie in to the Village sewer system. The district uses 4.6 million gallons of water per year.

The district will pay no Impact Fees despite being the first property to be annexed since the Village constructed its $10.5 million sewer.

Aldermen will also consider an appeal by the owner of Barrow Brewing Co. from the calculations to determine the monthly sewer bill.

Commercial customers are charged a flat rate monthly bill that is calculated by averaging the total annual use of water. Residential customers are charged for the winter months' average use.

Barrow Brewing Co. is requesting that the Village adjust the monthly billing calculations to take into consideration the amount of water that is in the beers produced there. Graydon Hill states in the appeal that he can provide calculations down to the gallon of those amounts.

The board will also consider an appeal from Salado Masonic Lodge #296 to be exempted from tying into the sewer and paying impact fees charged by the Village.

S&P Index declines 6.8% since May Day, edging to correction

The Markets

The weeks just keep getting worse on the stock exchanges as the S&P 500 Stock Index (SPX) fell 2.62% for the week that also ended May to close at 2752.06. The Index is now down 6.8% from its recent high of 2954.13 on May Day, almost exactly one month ago. Another week like this one and we will be perilously close to what is generally considered a "correction" when the market has declined 10% from its high point. Once again, the cause of the angst was tariffs but this time it was the announcement of tariffs on imports from Mexico. At the close of the week, the one-year SPX gain had been whittled down to 0.64%. It also put the Index a hair's breadth from falling below its 52-week moving average, an often cited but not extremely reliable predictor of major market downturns.

Perhaps more critical than the stock market decline was the drop in the yield of the 10-year U.S. Treasury note to 2.130%. The 90-day U.S. Treasury bill (T-bill) yield is 2.376% so that the 10-year note's yield decline puts the Treasury bond curve into solidly "inverted" territory and confirms where it has been headed for a month. To refresh your memory, a persistently inverted yield curve historically has been a faithful harbinger of a recession arriving in about 18 months. The intermediate yields, shorter than the 10-year mark, dropped to around 2%, continuing the bond market forecast of a recession arriving in about the same time-frame late next year. The yield on the 10-year note is generally considered to be a forecast of future economic growth and it has now fallen 34.7% from its high last October of 3.263%. West Texas Intermediate Crude Oil (WTI) joined in on the trend, dropping to $53.50 per barrel, down 8.3% for the week

Market & Economic Update

By Jeffrey W. McClure

and 16% for the month. Once again traders cited the threat of tariffs on Mexico as the cause. The dollar crept up another 0.15% for the week on the WSJ Index but had dropped over 1% from its midweek highs.

The Economy

The headline economic news is enmeshed with politics. Trade with Mexico is different from other countries as much of it is integral to U.S. manufacturing supply chains and a disruption or increase in cost will directly affect our manufacturing production. The announcement by the President that he would impose 5% tariffs on all imports from Mexico on June 10, followed by 25% tariffs if the flow of refugees to the U.S. border was not stopped by October sent shock waves through the economy. Particularly hard hit were the auto manufacturers as many American-made automobiles have parts or assembly done in Mexico in the formerly duty-free zones just across the border. That process has been credited with being a large part of why illegal immigration of Mexicans looking for work has dramatically declined. Ironically, if the full threatened tariff is imposed and U.S. manufacturers are forced to shut down production in Mexico, economically-based illegal immigration may mushroom.

In another indication that we are at the peak of an economic boom, personal-consumption expenditures increased a seasonally-adjusted 4.3% in April from a year earlier. Meanwhile, personal income rose 3.9% over the same period. That 0.4% difference represents consumers spending about half a percent more than they earn. During recoveries households tend to focus on paying down debts and building up savings, thus are spending less than they earn. As the recovery turns into an expansion, the cycle reverses and households gradually begin to accumulate debt by spending more than they make each month. At some point, the debt starts to become uncomfortable, spending slows, and so does the economy. The tendency toward overspending is generally accompanied by peaks in consumer confidence and, according to the University of Michigan survey, we are at or near record levels of consumer confidence now. None of this suggests that a pull-back is imminent, but we do appear to be following a classic economic growth cycle and we are clearly in the "boom" part of that cycle. For better or worse, the better than good times are always followed by a decline of some kind. The issue now is when and how far the decline will be. Our estimate remains that we are due for a recession in about 18 months but that it will be relatively mild.

The Commerce Department came out with the second estimate for the first quarter of 2019's GDP growth and reduced the figure from 3.2% to 3.1%, still a robust number. A consensus is building among economic forecasters that the second quarter will come in at about 1.7%. Both numbers are annualized growth rates. The Dallas Federal Reserve Bank's underlying inflation gauge rose to 2% after being well below that number for the last several years, suggesting that inflation may be settling in at a healthy rate.

No Apology Needed on Crime Bill

Rich Lowry

Donald Trump and Bill de Blasio agree: Joe Biden should be ashamed of his support for the 1994 crime bill.

The bipartisan legislation that was long a point of pride for Bill Clinton, who signed it into law, is now in such malodor that CNN the other day identified it in a chyron as the "infamous" crime bill.

Trump says that African Americans won't vote for someone who supported the crime bill, which he calls a "dark period in American History" that Biden should apologize for. De Blasio, the no-hope presidential candidate, agrees, deeming the crime bill "a painful era in our nation's history."

Biden will have a lot of explaining to do about the bill, in the primaries and -- now, it's clear -- even in a potential general election.

The legislation was a mixed bag, representing the blunderbuss approach typical of sweeping bipartisan federal legislation. But the bill was, overall, a politically necessary response to a devastating decades-long crime wave.

It is our good fortune to have forgotten the visceral fear and loathing engendered by the crime wave beginning in the 1960s. Violent crime increased 350% percent of all prisoners.

According to a study by the National Academy of Sciences, the drivers of mass incarceration were increases in prison commitments per arrest and in time served. Time served for murder went from five years in 1981 to 16.9 years in 2000, and for sexual assault from 3.4 years in 1981 to 6.6 years in 2009.

It is true that the arrest rate for possession and use of drugs increased 162% from 1980 to 2006. We shouldn't exaggerate, though. At their height in 1990, drug offenders were about 20% of state prisoners and are currently less than 15%. Overall, the U.S. incarceration rate is now at its lowest in 20 years.

Almost any public policy has its trade-offs, and in the fullness of time, with crime having fallen so dramatically, it is natural that the priorities -- and overkill -- of the 1990s will look different. But no one should apologize for having worked to get dangerous people off the streets at a time when they were causing untold grief and rending the civic fabric of America.

Small business makes out okay in recent Texas legislature action

By ANNIE SPILMAN

Small business, the mom-and-pop shops that drive our economy, came out of this year's session of the Texas Legislature OK.

Not great, not awful, but OK.

We scored some big wins on issues such as workforce development and property tax relief, but legislators let us down on one critical issue: stopping cities and counties from going beyond what the state already requires and creating a patchwork of overreaching rules and regulations that can make it harder for small businesses to grow and create jobs.

Workforce development One of the biggest challenges facing small businesses here is finding good workers.

According to NFIB's latest jobs survey, 86% of U.S. small businesses who want to hire say they're having trouble finding qualified applicants.

This session, the Texas Legislature passed 17 separate bills to improve workforce education programs in our schools. I believe these measures are going to help small businesses and large corporations alike find the workers they desperately need while strengthening our economy and reducing unemployment.

Tax relief

Property tax rates have become a perennial problem in Texas. We'd gotten to a point where property taxes were rising faster than people's incomes. That hurts everybody, but it could be devastating for small businesses. They could either raise prices or cut jobs to offset the rising expense or close up shop.

House Bill 3 was primarily a school funding bill, but it also cut property taxes by $5 billion. It gives voters a greater say in property tax rates and imposes a local cap so property taxes can't rise above a certain level.

One problem the legislature didn't fix this session was phasing out Texas's onerous franchise tax. This is a "privilege tax" imposed on employers simply for doing business in the State of Texas. Many states have already repealed their franchise tax laws. NFIB is urging legislators to add Texas's name to the list.

Healthcare mandates

Healthcare mandates are specific benefits that employers are required to provide to their workers. NFIB generally opposes these mandates because they drive up the cost of health insurance for everyone.

Texas already has 41 healthcare mandates, and this session, legislators introduced bills that would have doubled that number.

Each of these mandates, however well-intentioned, was expected to raise health insurance premiums 1% to 5% across the board, making it harder for small businesses to offer health benefits to their employees.

Jeremy Rodriguez leads musical celebration

Author and keynote speaker Misty Boyd

Over 200 students attend Life Fest

LIFE FEST 2019: Nearly 200 local high school and junior high students, faculty, staff and youth ministry leaders from various Christian churches in Salado participated in an ecumenical celebration of life on May 15. The purpose of this gathering, hosted at the Salado High School, was to promulgate the message that God's love is for everyone.

LIFE FEST is the inaugural effort of First Baptist Church Salado, Saint Joseph's Episcopal Church, Saint Stephen Catholic Church, Salado Church of Christ, Salado United Methodist Church and 3C Cowboy Fellowship. Youth Ministry representatives from each of these Salado churches have worked together through the years for many other projects including 5th Quarter and Halloween Trunk and Treat. LIFE FEST is the first collaborative endeavor to evangelize together the principle of God's enduring love for all.

Keynote speaker, author of Carissa's Law, Misty Boyd, described her journey of hope and courage as a child born with the congenital spine defect known as spina bifida. She shared the "choice" of post-birth termination that her own father encountered, when minutes after her birth, her delivering doctor declared that Misty's existence was not worthy of living. Thankfully, Misty's father did not see his newborn baby as worthless. He chose life for his baby daughter and transferred her to another local hospital wherein she received appropriate and life-giving care. Misty's message emphasized that one's dignity and worth is not tied to what others say or believe. It is tied to one's inherent value based on God's love for all. Misty also reminded the attendees that "all of us are weird, our weirdness is what makes us unique". Our "weirdness" is specific to each of us and enables us to do God's will.

Featured musician Jeremy Rodriguez of ToLove-AndRescue led the celebration with contemporary inspiring secular and worship music that encouraged both dance and song. Local food trucks were available for participants. Sylvia's Tacos, Big Tony's Cheesesteak and Hangry Girl offered local specialties to delight the crowd. Participating students received free t-shirts with the message "YOU ARE LOVED, Mk 12:31", as well as informational resources and promotional materials that emphasized the theme of God's unending and unconditional love for all.

LIFE FEST 2020 is in the works and promises to also be inspirational, fun and full of love for everyone. For more information about LIFE FEST, feel free to contact your local Salado youth ministry team from any of the participating Salado churches mentioned above.

The Temple-Belton Community Bible Study (CBS) adult evening class is registering members for next year's 30-week in-depth interdenominational Bible study of Red Sea to the Jordan River. The study encompasses Exodus, Leviticus and Numbers.

Beginning Sept. 9, the class will meet weekly from 7:30-9 p.m. on Monday in the small sanctuary of First Baptist Church of Belton, Sixth and Main streets. The class is open to all adults. Individuals may choose to participate in core groups for men, women, or married couples.

Each week, participants receive a reading commentary on the previous week's topic and a set of questions to work on each day covering the next week's reading. These questions are discussed in small groups of about fifteen. Following the small groups there is a short teaching over the same section of Scripture.

The class will break for Christmas and spring vacations and finish at the end of April 2020.

To register call (254) 773-1842 or go to templebeltonve.cbsclass.org.

Regulatory overreach

This is where we expected legislators to stand up for small business.

NFIB joined other business groups in pushing for legislation that would have stopped cities and counties from imposing their own employment ordinances that go beyond what the state requires when it comes to issues such as paid leave and predictive scheduling, a relatively new mandate which penalizes employers who need to change workers' schedules at the last minute.

The legislature's failure to act on regulatory overreach by city and county governments is a big concern for small businesses. Local ordinances create all kinds of headaches and confusion. It's hard to follow the rules when the rules can change from town to town, from one store to the next.

NFIB is challenging the constitutionality of Austin's paid sick leave ordinance, and we'll continue to fight these local ordinances in court until the Texas Legislature decides to act.

Annie Spilman is Texas state director of NFIB, the nation's leading small business advocacy organization. She lives in Austin.

Salado Museum presents history program in words and music

Salado Museum and College Park will present a special program at the museum (423 South Main, Salado) June 8, from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m., during Texas History Days in Salado. The program, How the Scots Came to Texas, consists of different segments presented each hour with words and video by speaker and college professor Nancy Boyens and with live music by historian and musician Joe Romeo.

The presentations are free and open to the public. Donations welcome at the door. A complete schedule and description of the program topics are available at www.saladomuseum.org.

"We invite the public to review the schedule online and select the portions of the program that interests them most," says Dave Swarthout, Salado Museum Executive Director. "We will offer a box lunch for purchase during the noon hour and Mr. Romeo will also entertain at that time."

Boyens will tell the story of Sterling Robertson, his Empresario grant and colony in central Texas, and the migration of Scots into the Appalachian Mountains and on to Texas. Romeo will perform the traditional music of Appalachia on banjo in the original "flailing" style of the Scots-Irish pioneers and on the historic bellows-blown Scottish small pipes that once neared extinction.

The Salado Museum and College Park, a 501(c)(3) non-profit organization established in 1959, celebrates 60 years preserving and promoting the pioneer history of Salado, Texas. Through educational programs and exhibits that document the settlement and heritage of this area, the museum tells the story of this frontier college town. The Museum is located at 423 South Main Street

Small speaks about Spanish Land Grants in Texas

Patricia Walsh Small is a seventh generation proud Texan. She is a direct descendant of Jose Antonio Perez who arrived in San Antonio de Bahia on March 9, 1731 as a member of the Canary Islanders sent by the King of Spain to settle along the San Antonio River. She will speak at the Salado Civic Center about the families brought in by Spanish land grants in Texas. Her presentation takes place as part of Texas History Days in Salado.

Her great-great-grandfather, Col. Juan Ygnacio Perez, bought the Spanish Governor's Palace in 1804 and used it as his town residence and headquarters. Spanish Royalist Governor Antonio Bustamante Cordero was invited to live in the Palace as it was the finest building in San Antonio. Governor Cordero married Gertrudis Perez, the Col.'s daughter, and they lived in the Palace until his transfer to Coahuila. Upon Gov. Cordero's death, Col. Perez became the Spanish Royalist Governor of Texas.

Jose Ygnacio Perez was a young Lt. in the Spanish Royalist Army fought alongside an equally young Lt. Antonio Lopez de Santa Anna at the Battle of Medina on August 18, 1813, which is considered the bloodiest battle ever fought on Texas soil. Ironically, on February 23, 1836, Col. Juan Ygnacio Perez's son, Jose Ygnacio, sold thirty head of "beeves" to the Alamo Garrison on the day the Alamo siege began.

And once again, ironically, the remains of the Alamo defenders were placed in the Spanish Governor's Palace with an honor guard until they could be interred. The Palace remained in the hands of Col. Jose Ygnacio Perez's descendants until 1936 when it was sold to the City of San Antonio by her grand-mother, Casamira de la Concepcion Linn Walsh, and restored to its former glory.

Small grew up on the family ranch which was a Spanish land-grant to her Canary Island ancestor, Jose Antonio Perez prior to 1755. She attended the old Ursuline Academy and graduated from St. Martin Hall Elementary School and Our Lady of the Lake High School. She holds a B.A. degree from St. Mary's University, a M.S.L.S. from Our Lady of the Lake University, and an Ed.D. from Texas A&M University. Along the way she studied at King's College, Cambridge University in Great Britain. She worked for Harlandale I.S.D. for thirty-four years, thirty as an administrator.

She is the younger daughter of the late Edward Patrick and Mary Louise Yarborough Walsh. Patricia was married to the late John Hart Small for thirty-four years until his death ten years ago. Together they have three children: John Edward, a Customs and Immigration Officer; Patrick Henry, an attorney specializing in Oil and Gas Law; Elizabeth Trueheart Small, Bexar County Commissioners Court Clerk; and three grand-children.

Studying History and traveling with family are among Patricia's favorite hobbies. She is a member of the Daughter's of the American Revolution (San Antonio De Bexar Chapter), Daughters of the Republic of Texas (Alamo Mission Chapter), and the United Daughters of the Confederacy (Albert Sidney Johnston Chapter). If she can find the time, she will complete the paperwork for the James-town and Colonial Dames Organizations.

Joe Ely performs at CAC June 15

The Cultural Activities Center is bringing back Joe Ely, a legendary American singer-songwriter and guitarist to its stage June 15. Joe Ely kicks off at the CAC at 7:30 p.m., doors open at 7 p.m. Ely's musical style is considered that of Texas country, Tex-mex. and rock and roll. The performance is sponsored by Sonic Drive-In Barnett Franchise.

His musical career began as a child after being inspired by a Jerry Lee Lewis performance. He became interested in music and had lessons in violin and steel guitar before turning to the guitar. After learning to play various instruments, he began playing music professionally in local clubs, forming a band called the Twilights at a very young age. The band became successful enough for him to quit other part-time work and begin traveling to other cities in Texas, then California, and later New York, with even a trip to Europe working for a theatrical company. This peripatetic period in his life lasted a full seven years, from 1963 to 1970. In the summer of 1971, back in Lubbock, Ely teamed up with a couple of singer/songwriter friends with whom he was living, Butch Hancock and Jimmie Dale Gilmore, along with some other musicians, to form the Flatlanders, a country-folk group. They attracted interest from the small Nashville record label Plantation Records and in March 1972 went to Nashville and cut an album that Plantation barely released, credited to Jimmie Dale & the Flatlanders. (The album is reputed to have been issued only as an eight-track tape.)

Ely returned to rambling around the country, but he was back in Lubbock by 1974, when he began putting together a permanent backup band to play there and around Texas. The Joe Ely Band featured Ely on acoustic guitar and vocals; Jesse Taylor on electric guitar; Lloyd Maines on steel guitar; Gregg Wright on bass; and Steve Keeton on drums. A demo tape made by the group was passed to members of Jerry Jeff Walker's backup band, who gave it to Walker, who gave it to an A&R representative of Walker's label, MCA Records, and in the fall of 1975, Ely was signed to MCA. During 1976, he recorded his debut album, Joe Ely, which was released on January 10, 1977, along with a single, "All My Love," that reached the Billboard country charts. That song was one of five original Ely compositions on the LP; the other five had been written by Hancock or Gilmore.

Over a year later, on February 13, 1978, Ely followed with his second album, Honky Tonk Masquerade. (By this point, accordionist Ponty Bone had joined the backup band.) Again, the collection was a combination of Ely originals, including the title song, "Fingernails" (a Jerry Lee Lewis-styled rocker with piano by Shane Keister), and "Cornbread Moon" (all of which were released as singles), and songs written by Hancock and Gilmore (the latter's "Tonight I Think I'm Gonna Go Downtown," co-written with John X. Reed, had appeared on the Flatlanders' album). There was also a cover of Hank Williams' "Honky Tonkin'." Honky Tonk Masquerade was well received critically upon release (and a 1990 article in Rolling Stone magazine named it one of the essential albums of the 1970s), but it didn't sell. Ely was back in record stores a year later with Down on the Drag, released in February 1979. Another four Hancock compositions were introduced, along with five Ely originals. The album reached the Cash Box country chart.

In early 1992, Ely joined together with John Mellencamp, Dwight Yoakam, John Prine, and James McMurry in an impromptu country-rock singer/songwriter supergroup called Buzzin' Cousins to record a Mellencamp composition, "Sweet Suzanne," for the soundtrack of the film Falling from Grace, in which Mellencamp starred. The track reached the country singles chart. In September 1992, MCA released Ely's eighth studio album, Love and Danger. Ely turned to acting in July 1994, appearing in the musical Chippy: Diaries of a West Texas Hooker at Lincoln Center in New York City. He also contributed songs to the score and appeared on the cast album, released by Hollywood Records. MCA released his ninth studio album, Letter to Laredo, in August 1995, by which time Ely's bassist was Glenn Fukunaga. If not quite "unplugged," it was more of an acoustic effort than previous releases and prominently featured flamenco guitarist Teye, with occasional harmony and background vocals by Jimmie Dale Gilmore, Raul Malo of the Mavericks, and Bruce Springsteen. It reached the Billboard country chart.

In 2000, Ely had two live recordings in release. His 1990 solo acoustic appearance at the Cambridge Folk Festival in the U.K. resulted in the six-song EP Live at the Cambridge Folk Festival on BBC/Strange Fruit Records in Great Britain. And he signed to Rounder, which released his third full-length concert collection, Live @ Antone's, in June. His band for the shows, taped in January 1999, consisted of returning members Jesse Taylor and Lloyd Maines, along with Teye, bassist Gary Herman, drummer Rafael O'Malley Gayol, and accordion player Joel Guzman. The album reached the Billboard country chart. The Flatlanders, meanwhile, had taken another step toward reconstitution by launching a national tour in the late winter of 2000. In May 2002, Ely, Gilmore, and Hancock finally re-formed the Flatlanders for a new full-length album, Now Again, released by New West Records. Ely co-wrote 12 of the 14 songs and produced the set, which reached the Top 20 of the Billboard country chart. Ely's 11th studio album, Streets of Sin, was released in July 2003. It reached the Billboard country chart. Having waited 30 years between their first and second albums, the Flatlanders were ready with their third, Wheels of Fortune, within two years. Again produced by Ely, it was released in January 2004 and spent 11 weeks in the Billboard country chart. Among the four Ely compositions on the disc was "Indian Cowboy," a song he had not previously recorded, but which had been recorded over the years by Guy Clark, Tom Russell, Townes Van Zandt, and Katy Moffatt. Six months later, there was another Flatlanders album, the archival Live '72.

Purchase tickets by visiting the website at www.ca-cARTS.org; individual tickets are on sale for $40 for

Short-horned Lizard

Short-horned Lizards call Texas mountain ranges home

There is always that one family member. Not the one that everyone knows about, but the one that sits quietly to the side allowing others to garner all the attention. Not because they are any less likeable or engaging, but because they are just not as well known. Interestingly enough, there is a species of horned lizard that resides in western Texas that is virtually unknown to most folks; not because it is any less alluring than the other species, it's just that the other species is just much more celebrated. The unfamiliar species that I am referring to is known as Phrynosoma hernandesi, or the Short-horned Lizard.

The Short-horned Lizard is one of three species of "horny toads" that live in Texas, and it by far has the smallest area of distribution. It can be observed only in three of this great state's "sky island" mountain ranges of western Texas: the Davis Mountains, the Guadalupe Mountains, and recently, the Hueco Mountains. Outside of Texas this species is known to occur throughout the Rocky Mountains southward to the northernmost portions of the Sierra Madre Occidental of western Mexico northward to southern Saskatchewan.

Being based in high elevation mountain ranges, the habitats that this species prefers to reside in include wooded grasslands in open, rocky terrain. Individuals are often observed by hikers as they frequently utilize hiking trails as areas to bask in the mountain sunlight.

The Short-horned Lizard is a flattened reptile that has scaled, horny skin. It is slightly the largest horned lizard that inhabits this state, with adults reaching a total length of nearly 6 1/2 inches, although the average is between 4 and 5 inches. The background coloration matches the color of the igneous rocks and soil in which it lives, with most specimens being colored a shade of red or dark brown. This coloration is darkest when the lizard is cold. There are usually a pair of dark blotches on the neck followed by 3 (or occasionally 4) pairs of smaller blotches down the back. It also has a row of scales along the sides of the body. There are six horns that adorn the head with all of the horns being of equal length. The belly is white and is occasionally peppered with black spots.

Short-horned Lizards, like other lizard species, are "cold-blooded", or ectothermic. This means that they do not generate heat from the inside of their body, as mammals and birds do, but rather are dependent on outside sources for heating and cooling. They are active throughout the day in the spring and fall, adjusting their schedules to the morning and afternoon hours during the heat of the summer.

This species of lizard has a very specialized diet. It's preferred choice of food is the large harvester ants and many times this lizard can be seen dining in the vicinity of large, round nests of the ants. An adult Horned Lizard can feed upon as many as 100 harvester ants in one day. Unfortunately, the imported fire ant is not on the Horned Lizard's dietary menu.

Unlike the other members of this genus, the Short-horned Lizard is viviparous, which is a fancy way of saying that it gives live birth. After emerging from the winter-long brumation period (reptiles do not hibernate in the true sense of the word), males will search out females to mate. Shortly under 3 months after mating, the female will deposit anywhere from 6 to 31 one-inch long young that have to escape from the amniotic sac immediately prepared to fend for and care for themselves.

Unlike its more regarded cousin the Texas Horned Lizard, this species has not been subjected to declining population trends, probably due to the fact that the imported fire ant has not been established in these isolated mountain ranges.

Homestead Heritage will be demonstrating traditional crafts on the grounds of the Salado Civic Center during the Texas History Day in Salado on June 8. Craft demos will include: Woodworking, Blacksmithing, Pottery, Leather working, Fiber Crafts and Candle Making. Hands on activities include: initialed, hand-hammered brass spoon; wooden cooking spatula, bird feeder, leather bookmark or leather key fob, hand made soap and candle dipping. There will also be craft items for sale throughout the day.
