Early voting begins Aug. 4 for water conservation district

by Tim Fleischer
Editor-in-Chief

Bell County voters will consider the formation of the Clearwater Underground Water Conservation District and a tax levy of one cent per $100 evaluation in August.

Early voting will take place 8 a.m.-5 p.m. with three polling places open:

- Bell County Commissioners Courtroom at 550 E. 2nd Ave. in Belton.
- Bell County Annex in Killeen at 301 Priest Dr.
- Bell County Annex in Temple at 205 E. Central Ave.

Election day voting will take place in Salado at the Salado Civic Center for voters living within precincts 203, 205 and 403.

In addition to voting yes or no on the formation of the Underground Water Conservation District, voters can vote for up to five candidates for the board of directors of the District.

The following candidates are seeking election to the at-large positions on the board: Donald J. Mackie, Wallace M. Biskup, Sr.; Marie Martch; Robert Y. Lyall, Tommy L. Lovelace, Horace R. Grace, Max Sanderford and J. Windell Sullivan.

Mackie chairs the temporary board of directors with Biskup, Martch and Lyall serving as temporary directors.

Temporary board members have been meeting with Bell County residents to discuss formation of the district, including a June 29 meeting with Salado residents at the Salado Civic Center.

About 40 residents attended the meeting, the highest number of any of the "town hall" styled meetings.

Bell County Commissioner Tim Brown called the formation of a GCD a "defensive measure" to "protect your water from commercial overusage and exploitation, " during the town hall meeting.

Water rights, usage and control came to the forefront of discussion when a community lost its lawsuit against Ozarka. The Texas Supreme Court upheld the "right of capture" in Texas water law.

Legislation in 1985 and 1997 confirm GCDs as the state's preferred method of managing groundwater resources.

The Texas Legislature first provided for the voluntary formation of GCDs in 1949 and 42 districts have ben formed since then, including three special districts with additional powers and control.

Mackie told the group gathered in Salado that the responsibilities of a GCD are to develop a management plan, require permits for wells producing more than 25,000 gallons per day and maintain records of water wells in the district.

While it can regulate wells pumping more than 25,0000 gallons per day, a GCD cannot regulate wells used for watering livestock, wells for homes, and wells grandfathered prior to the election.

Mackie told the group that, with no GCD in place, it would be legal for someone to "put a huge well between our Salado Water Company Wells and pull out as much water as they can take to the detriment our neighbors. There wouldn't be anything we could do about it."

Proponents of the GCD say it puts control of groundwater in local hands. One opponent said during the meeting that "it doesn't matter much what we do here in Bell County when they can drain the Edwards Aquifer in Williamson County."

Those opposing the creation of the GCD also said it creates one more layer of bureaucracy and adds unnecessary taxes.

Brown told the group, "The decision here is whether we want to turn over control of our groundwater resources to TNRCC (Texas Natural Resources Conservation Commission) or have local control. This may be our last chance to have local control.

Board members and commissioners have also been addressing area civic organizations to inform the public about the district.

Getting re-elected the old-fashioned way

Our Voice

Editorial Opinion

The Republican controlled House of Representatives has passed a highly partisan tax reduction bill designed to return nearly $800 billion to taxpayers out of an estimated 10 year - $1 trillion surplus that some government economic forecasters predict will remain after social security and medicare are stabilized.

All of this might sound good to the average citizen but behind the false euphoria the GOPers are sending up is the ugly fact that we are dealing here with nothing but pure politics designed to retain control of the lower house of Congress in the upcoming election.

First of all, there is no trillion dollar surplus! Only a projection that if our economy continues to grow at its current rate and if we freeze all future federal spending - then there will be a trillion left on the table - over the coming decade!

The important question is what will happen if our economy sours just a little and the "surplus" disappears? Obviously we would have the obligation to continue with the tax reduction passed this year only with less money which translates into deficit spending; an increase in our national debt and eventually the need for new taxes.

If we are bent on tax reduction why not take the disgraceful $125 billion we spend on "Corporate Welfare" and return it to those laboring at the bottom of the economic ladder? This federal handout involves aiding companies in selling their products overseas; helping with corporate research and development; providing a vast array of special tax loopholes - the list is endless.

Time Magazine and the CATO Institute reported that these "unwarranted business subsidies" are enough to eliminate all income taxes paid by 60 million low to mid-level working Americans.

The question persists: "When will lawmakers stop trying to fool us with false promises about surpluses that do not exist; creating tax relief that is uneven and unjust while putting business and its insidious lobby money ahead of the nation's pressing needs?"

Getting reelected should not be the number one agenda item in this country!

Salado voters could control results of underground water district vote

Off the Record

by Ken Clapp

Apathy and "Aginers" appear to be the major villains involved, thus far, in upcoming vote to protect our underground water supply.

Salado has a unique opportunity to become a political legend in the upcoming county-wide underground water district election scheduled for Saturday, August 21.

The reason behind this somewhat unusual prognostication lies in the almost zero lack of attention being paid to the water proposal in the larger communities of Temple, Belton and Killeen - source of most of the votes in the county.

Thus far attendance, in these major metros, has been dismal to zero at hearings on the matter of forming the Clearwater Underground Water Conservation District. By contrast, in Salado over 40 citizens showed up to hear the pros and cons of such a plan that would protect our underground water that is currently supplying - through wells - all of the life-supporting water needed in Salado and other rural areas of the county.

One reason for the lack of concern on the part of the major population centers is that they receive water from surface sources - the reservoirs at Belton and Stillhouse and the various lakes running through the area. The rest of us depend on subsurface water hence the desperate need for future protection of the underground aquifers.

Rest assured the rural "no growthers" and "anti-tax" folks will join their big city counterparts to get out at least a minimal vote against this all-important matter - even if the tax rate election is capped at a penny per hundred dollars of property value.

The potential loss of underground water by those who can today legally steal (pump) our sub-surface water and sell it to out-of-county users, does not seem to deter those who oppose the planned district even if they lose their own water supply along the way.

Their attitude is that water controls growth, ergo - less water, less growth. Also, water districts bring minimal taxes. So, no district - no tax. And of course - no protection from water loss.

Short-sighted to be sure but there you have the anti-water vote in a nutshell. No pun intended!

It is hoped that our community will feel a vital need to support this measure to protect our water supply. But it will take more than verbal support. It will require all of us going to the polls either during absentee voting that begins on Wednesday, August 4 and ends Tuesday, August 17, or on election day Saturday, August 21.

Salado has more to gain and more to lose if this measure fails through apathy or by letting the "aginers" prevail.

Something to think about between now and August 21. It would be an historical event to have a small village such as ours produce the deciding votes that creates the water district against the apathy and selfishness of the big cities and the other small-minders throughout the county.

LOOK OUT-HERE COMES AUSTIN!

A new map has surfaced in Austin that puts "Greater Austin" a scant five miles south of Salado on IH35! If that doesn't give you a chill then you're not paying attention to our down-the-road neighbors.

The unusual cartographic display appears on page 50 of the July 21, Austin American-Statesman magazine - "This is Austin", and shows the north "boundary of the greater" capitol city area just above Jarrell while taking in such other metro areas as Schwertner, Bartlett and New Corn Hill.

Saladoans who have feared annexation by such grabby towns as Belton or Temple failed to note Austin sneaking up behind us, as the new age high-tech boom town eats up land for factories, malls and homes at a terrifying pace in all directions.

On the positive side, we might someday be eligible to take part in such fun Austin activities as Eeyore's Birthday Party; the annual jalapeno eating contest and the rope pull across the Colorado River - to mention but a few.

No use trying to opt out of this sprawling mega-center's idea of what they think is "their" sphere of influence. All the Austin City Council would then do is form a committee, hire some consultants and by the time a feasibility study was concluded the original request would be moot and current Saladoans would be too old to care!

Guess we are just going to have to build that fence around the village and put guards at all entrances - like some have been contending for, lo these many years!

GOP NUMBERS AND LEADERSHIP DOWN

If you are into political box scoring - it looks like the Republicans in the House of Representatives are down to 221 out of 435 members - a loss of two over the past few days. Demos on the other hand picked up one full fledged turncoat - Mike Forbes (Long Island, New York) now a Democrat and hope to get another party member to replace the late George Brown who represented a strong liberal California district.

This would then give the leftists a total of 212 with one Libertarian and one Independent remaining who vote as their personal winds blow.

All a party needs is 218 to control the speakership and all committees!

Leadership, in both houses of Congress, is also losing clout these days with Trent Lott having a difficult time controlling his upperhousemen while poor old Dennis Hastert, the mumbling, fumbling Speaker of the House, appears barely aware of the issues facing his office now that Tom DeLay has taken over most of the power calling.

Six additional Demo seats and no losses will put Missourian Richard Gephardt in charge of the House next time around.

Hard to believe the changes a few years in charge can create for those who seem destined for a foot-shooting at the "Not-So-OK-Corral" we call Washington!

On the other hand, a lot can happen to either party, between now and November, 2000!

That's -30-

The real tragedy

Digressions

by Tim Fleischer

The media has outdone itself in its nonstop coverage of the search and recovery of John F. Kennedy, Jr.'s body, along with his wife's and sister-in-law's.

Standing just outside of the Kennedy home in Hyannisport, CNN reporters whisper breathlessly into the microphone that he has not actually spotted a Kennedy within the compound. Not yet, anyway.

Elsewhere, news photographers swarm the air around the search and recovery efforts. Then, coverage breaks away to show mourners laying flowers outside New York apartments.

Simply put, CNN should change its call letters to KNN, the Kennedy News Network. All Kennedy, All Day.

But CNN is not alone in its smotherage of the death of John F. Kennedy, Jr. Flip the channel to A&E and you have a "Biography" of every Kennedy ever born.

The Kennedy Coverage stretched the limits of imagination. More importantly, it has stretched the limits of human decency. Just as the media did with the OJ Story and the Princess Di story, it has done with the JFK, Jr. Story.

In an effort to beat the competition at the ratings game, the media has inundated us with images and sound bites of JFK Jr. and his family. Networks learned their lesson well when Princess Diana was killed in a tunnel. Tragedy sells. The old saying, "If it bleeds, it leads" is proven true over and over again.

But when you combine tragedy and fame, you have a very potent formula. And politics and power to the equation and its potential is phenomenal.

But what seems to have been forgotten in the midst of the hoopla is that three people have died. Three people with families back home. Families who need to mourn their deaths.

I remember burying my father. Most of us can remember burying someone we love very much. It hurts down to our core. I know that I needed time to go off and lick my wounds.

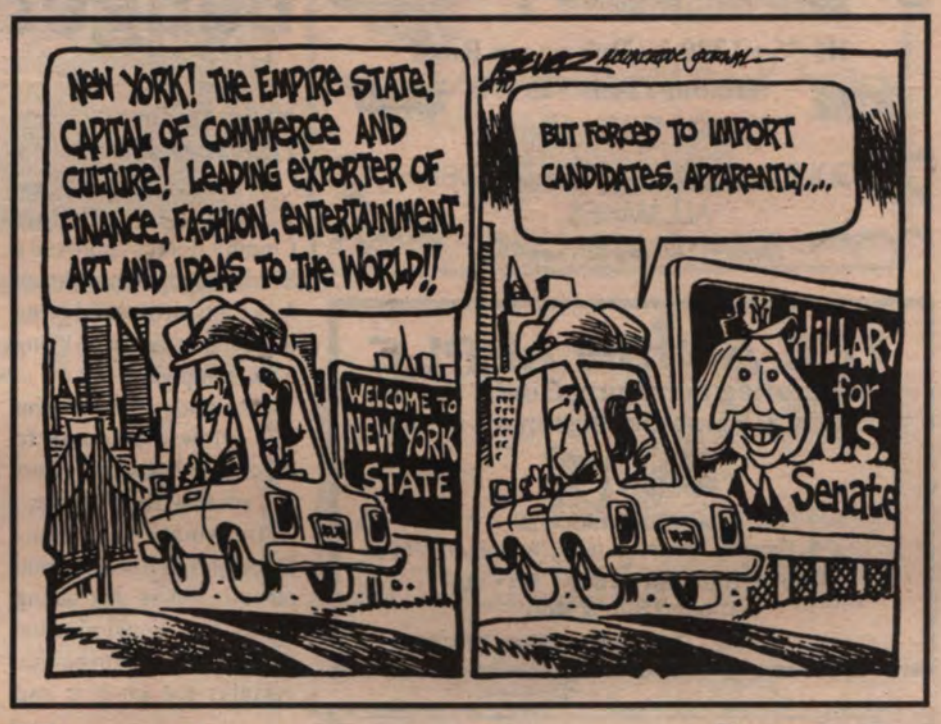
The Kennedy and the Bissett families need that same time, but they will never get it. Not as long as a reporter is waiting outside their home. Not as long as "mourners" and well-wishers wait outside their apartments. Not as long as we refuse them what they need most.

The Kennedy family has buried three men in front of the unblinking public eye. I ache for the members of that family who have not had the peace to go off and lick their wounds. I do not want to see the memorial services. I do not want to see Kennedy Family members walking out of a church.

The real tragedy of JFK Jr.'s death was not whether or not he was qualified to fly the plane, but that it is a topic of discussion in the country.

The real tragedy of JFK Jr.'s death is that we create celebrities only to devour them. We are like Lenny, the retarded character in "Of Mice and Men." Lenny loved rabbits. He liked to pet little animals. A lot. We are the same; we want to love celebrities, to pet them, touch them, squeeze them, smother them to death.

But even that is not enough for our appetites. There's the real tragedy.



Not all deadbeat parents make AGs child support Evaders page

by John Cornyn

Attorney General of Texas

Q: My former spouse has arrears greater than the arrears of the child support Evaders on the Attorney General web site. Why isn't my former spouse considered an Evader and how do you decide which deliquent non-custodial parents are placed on the Evader Internet page?

A: I understand the frustration of custodial parents trying to make ends meet while the non-custodial parent avoids paying court-ordered child support. We receive lots of inquiries from custodial parents who want a non-custodial parent placed on the Evaders page, which contains information on non-custodial parents whose court-ordered child support payments are in arrears.

The Office of the Attorney General uses strict criteria for placing a non-custodial parent on the Child Support Evader web site to ensure no parent is mistakenly identified as an Evader.

For a non-custodial parent to be placed on the Evader page, a court-ordered obligation must be entered combined with judicial enforcement action. The arrears listed on the court order must be in excess of $5,000 and a capias civil arrest warrant or criminal arrest warrant must have been issued.

The amount published on the Evader page is the court established amount not the current arrears. This has led to some confusion since the adjudicated amount may be much smaller than current arrears.

In addition, the non-custodial parent's address must be confirmed as unknown or unverifiable within the last 30 days before publication. The non-custodial parent must not be involved in bankruptcy proceedings or receiving welfare benefits including food stamps. And the non-custodial parent must not have made a payment within the last six months.

In order to make information about the case public, the custodial parent is required to sign a confidentiality waiver stating that he or she has not had recent contact with the non-custodial parent, does not know the location of the non-custodial parent and has not received any payments from the non-custodial parent. Finally, the Office of the Attorney General must receive a photograph for the web site.

For further information about the Evaders program, contact the Child Support Division at 800-252-8014 or visit the agency web site at www.oag.state.tx.us.

Q: Does the custodial parent have the right to deny visitation to the non-custodial parent?

A: Child support and visitation rights are separate issues. Each parent has the duty to financially and emotionally support his or her child. Every parent is presumed to possess the right to custody or visitation. If the parents cannot agree, custody, child support and visitation will be decided by a court.

Both parties must obey the court orders. In other words, a parent cannot refuse to pay support because the other parent is refusing visitation and the custodial parent cannot deny visitation if the non-custodial parent fails to pay child support. The court can enforce its orders against either parent.

Federal regulations do not allow the Office of the Attorney General to provide services for custody or visitation disputes. The Office of the Attorney General encourages mediation of these issues, and most cases are resolved by agreement. In the rare case where custody and/or visitation are seriously contested, the Office of the Attorney General encourages each parent to hire private attorneys.

If you cannot afford a lawyer, you may be eligible for federally-funded legal assistance. Look in the phone book under "Legal Aid" or "Legal Services." Sometimes the court will appoint a lawyer for the child. Many law schools operate legal clinics at which law students assist people under the supervision of a law professor or other lawyer. Contact the law school nearest you for more information.

Now is time for flextime hours for employees

by Kay Bailey Hutchison

U.S. Senator

I was in Galveston a couple of weekends ago, and heard about one of those women who supposedly "has it all." She has a good job, a happy marriage and two great kids. She told a friend of mine something that really struck a chord: That the only thing lacking in her life is the time to enjoy it.

Her son's fifth-grade class was going on a field trip, and she wanted to go along. It was her turn to chaperone, and she really wanted to spend this time with her child. But her participation in the trip turned out to be a major scheduling problem. For her family, the work week is a nightmare.

She didn't want to use a sick day that she might need later, and hated to dip into vacation time. There was no way she could afford to take a day off without pay.

If she worked a few extra hours the week before the field trip, her boss wouldn't have a problem letting her take that day off - except that it would be illegal.

Inconvenient, but true. Federal law now requires employers to pay hourly workers time-and-a-half for all work beyond 40 hours a week. This mother would much rather have compensatory time off instead of cash for working overtime. She wants and needs a more flexible schedule.

She is not alone. American parents, especially mothers, feel the stress of working more than ever before. They need more scheduling options than the law now permits to accommodate family and office obligations. Current law is simply too inflexible to meet their needs.

In June, I co-introduced the Family Friendly Workplace Act to help hard-pressed working parents by providing the flexibility to spend time with their families when it is most needed. This is a long-overdue modernization of our labor laws.

The legislation will amend the Fair Labor Standards Act to give employees the option of choosing to receive either overtime pay or time-and-a-half compensatory time off for overtime work. It would allow them to make a voluntary arrangement with employers for flexible schedules.

Who will benefit from this bill? All hourly workers who would like a schedule tailored to meet the needs of their families. It will ease government's grip on the lives of working Americans. My bill would untie the hands - and schedules- of employers and employees alike.

In two-thirds of American households with children, both the mother and father are employed outside the home. Exsisting laws put these working parents in a straightjacket, effectively preventing the kind of time trade-offs that would allow them to host a scout meeting or to join a child's classroom outing. Flexible working schedules would make workers more content, more productive and more able to address the needs of their families.

Federal employees have been allowed to take advantage of flexible schedules since 1978, and time-and-a-half compensatory time off since 1945. Most state employees also are able to take advantage of such arrangements. Salaried employees in the private sector are not constrained by a straight, 40-hour work week. The 60 million hourly employees who work in the private sector should be able to enjoy this flexibility as well.

My legislation is another installment payment on my commitment to restoring common sense to government policies. If we are serious about strengthening families, it is time to get serious about letting workers and employers work together for a family-friendly workplace.

County commissioners amend budget for Y2K compliance

by Tim Fleischer
Editor-in-Chief

Bell County Commissioners approved a $50,200 budget amendment July 26 which would bring the county closer to being Y2K compliant.

The budget amendment will allow the county to purchase 32 new computers and six new laser printers.

Information Systems Director Ned Roehring told commissioners that taking action now would give the county more time to be sure systems are on-line and ready for Jan. 1, 2000.

Commissioners opted for the budget amendment rather than approving the request with its 1999-2000 budget.

"We're going to have to do this, but by doing it now, we will be ahead of the game," County Judge Burrows said.

The court also approved a resolution to approve reimbursement of expenditures prior to issuance of indebtedness. "This resolution preserves the opportunity for us to get tax-exempt borrowing for funds spent on the courthouse renovation," Judge Jon Burrows said. "We may not ever use it, but we need it in place beforehand."

In other business, the court approved three traffic devices after public hearings: stop sign on Gooseneck Rd. at Hackberry Rd.; 55 mph speed limit on West Amity from IH-35 to FM 1670 and 30 mph speed limit on Wooded Acres off of FM 436.

The court approved County Clerk Vada Sutton's request for a new copier lease of $124/month for 60-months.

The court appointed Harold P. Smedley, of Belton, and Diane Gunn, of Temple, to the Child Welfare Board.

The court also approved the final plats for two subdivisions within Temple's extra-territorial jurisdiction (ETJ): Three Forks Bluff Subdivision, a 12-lot, 60-acre development off FM 436; and Forrest Lawson Subdivision, a 6-tract, 29 acre subdivision off Stallion Rd.

THE ILLUSTRATED BIBLE

Let Us Wear God's Seal

"Do not labor for the food that perishes, but for the food which endures to eternal life, which the Son of man will give to you; for on him has God the Father set his seal." -John 6:27

After Jesus had miraculously fed the multitudes who came to hear Him from the five barley loaves and two fish they sought Him out again, and He chided them for not seeking the true meaning of His ministry but because they had filled their bellies. We all need the daily sustenance that sustains our physical being yet there is a greater nourishment that will enrich us. That "food which endures to eternal life" is repast for our spiritual needs. God's law and Christ's techniques are the main ingredients - the only intake necessary to maintain our hungering faith. While no one may hope to attain that special stamp that God the Father placed on His Son, we may in small measure hope to merit through the feeding of our souls that special seal reserved for those who keep God's faith and His commandments.

Group seeks help to get prayer in school

The Monday Manna Prayer Group, that meets in the home of Marjorie Brashear, is diligently working to put pluralistic and inclusive prayer back in school. The Prayer Group has purchased post cards, self addressed them to the two U.S. Senators and the Congressman of this area, and written three "sample" notes that may be used on the back of the cards.

They respectfully request your help by completing the cards and mailing them with your signature. The Prayer Group believes that this effort will make a pro-active difference in the betterment of our country and society as a whole.

The three post cards with the sample letters may be picked-up in the church office of the Salado United Methodist Church.

Bits & Pieces

Salado High School Band News

Gilliam competes at State

Melodie Gilliam, Senior percussionist for the Salado High School band, traveled to Southwest Texas State to compete in the State Solo and Ensemble Contest. Melodie has earned her way there for the last three years and has performed on the piano and 4-Mallet Marimba.

Melodie earned a rating of a 1(superior) on her piano solo. This puts her in an elite group of all state musicians.

She has been percussion Section Leader for three years and is the Band President for 1999-2000.

Summer Band

Salado High School Band will have rehearsal everyday at 9 a.m.-noon. This is when the band members earn spots in the band program and start to learn their Contest Show.

This year will be different because of a new practice field behind the Intermediate School and a new band hall that will be opening soon.

On July 29, Freshman and section leaders report and July 30 all band members report.

Competition

Every other year the Salado Concert Band has the opportunity to enter the State Honor Band Competition. This is done by submitting a tape recording of your band at its best. Out of 21 bands in the Region, Salado placed 2nd.

Only the top two bands advance onward to the Area level. At the Area level there were six bands and Salado placed 4th. The top two bands advance onward to the State level. This is the first time in 10 years that the Salado Band has advanced out of the region for the State Honor Band.

John Stafford would like to thank the band and Ms. Manning for all their hard work.

Request for Missing Uniforms

Band director John Stafford request that former Salado High School Band students check their closets for band uniforms. If the students are already off to college parents are asked to see if there is a band uniform left at home.

Over the last seven years, 13 Salado High School band uniforms have disappeared into the community.

If you have a band uniform at home please return it to the high school.

SUMC Back to School Sale

All money from the sale will go to the Salado Family Relief Fund, which assists people in need around the community. Community participation is greatly needed.

In addition to donating items for the sale, help is needed for the following tasks: sorting and pricing, this will begin Aug. 9 and continue all week; work at the sale on Aug. 14, between 6 a.m. and noon (two hour shifts); and clean-up after the sale.

The SUMC is only holding the items and furnishing the site for the sale. C.J. Harbuz and Karen Kinnison are the coordinators.

Healthy hints to beat heart disease

The heart is an amazing muscle. For our entire lifetime, it works to pump blood to all parts of the body, carrying nutrients and taking away waste products. In 70 years, it will beat about 2.5 billion times.

But for almost 40 years, diseases of this powerful muscle have claimed more lives in Texas and in the nation than any other cause, including cancer. Health professionals say you can beat some of the odds, and the key is to take care of your heart by adopting a healthier life-style that will not only add years but improve the quality of life.

Among the risk factors that can be changed are smoking, physical inactivity, high blood cholesterol, high blood pressure and overweight. The more risk factors a person has, the greater the chance that he or she will develop heart disease. "Improving the diet can make a big difference in changing more than one risk factor for an individual. Buying heart healthy foods need not be difficult or expensive," said Dr. William R. Archer, Texas Commissioner of Health.

The Texas Department of Health (TDH) has a list of heart-healthy hints for grocery shopping on a budget:

* When shopping for fresh fruits and vegetables, know which ones are in season - they will be much cheaper than those out of season.

* Frozen fruits and vegetables are usually much cheaper than fresh, and they hold just as much nutritional value. They are especially economical because they don't go bad as quickly - if you're not going to use the food all at once, just freeze it for later.

* While leaner cuts of meat are usually more expensive than regular full-fat meats, don't let the price deter you from cutting saturated fat from your diet. Buy the leaner meats, but decrease your portion size to stretch your meat purchase. Make smaller hamburger patties, use less ground beef in favorite recipes such as tacos and try just one piece of steak instead of two. Make up for it by increasing the portion sizes of your favorite fruits and vegetables.

* Did you know that in the U.S., milk is the second-leading contributor of fat to the adult diet? Why not make the switch to one percent or nonfat milk instead of whole or two percent? The cost is the same, the nutritional value is the same, but the decrease in fat makes a difference.

* Canned soups are an inexpensive and timesaving way to eat heart-healthy - if you choose the right ones. Avoid cheese- and cream-based soups unless they are marked as low-fat. Stay away from those that are extremely high in sodium, too - look for those labeled "low salt" or "low sodium." Some soups packed with vegetables and fiber include lentil, navy bean, minestrone, split pea and gumbo.

* It seems like all the low-fat snacks such as cookies and crackers cost more than their high-fat counterparts. Not necessarily! Search your supermarket's bottom shelves for the store brands they almost always offer low-fat alternatives at a lower price.

* Olive oil is known to reduce LDL, or "bad" cholesterol levels, which makes it the smartest cooking oil choice for the heart. Unfortunately, olive oil is extremely expensive. Good substitutes that are more wallet-friendly are canola and soybean oils.

* If you think that buying juice is just too expensive, why not try frozen juice? The taste is comparable, the nutritional value is identical, and the price is economical. Drink up - 100 percent fruit juices such as orange, grapefruit, and cranberry can count towards one of your five servings of fruits and vegetables a day.

Using this list to reduce the controllable risk factors - those you can change - may prevent a heart attack in the future. Eat more fruits, vegetables and grains; cut down on the higher fat foods; and take up some form of aerobic exercise you enjoy. Not only will you live longer; your quality of life will be better as well.

Narcolepsy: What you should know!

Narcolepsy is a chronic, life-long sleep disorder and neurological condition that can greatly impair a person's ability to perform basic daily activities such as working, studying and socializing. One patient who suffered from narcolepsy for 12 years before it was properly diagnosed, is all too familiar with the destructive impact of the disorder. "Having narcolepsy had a real negative effect on my life. Getting through college was very difficult-I couldn't stay awake in class or while reading. Later on, it affected my relationship with my wife and family, as well as my ability to do my job well."

The most common symptom of narcolepsy is excessive daytime sleepiness (EDS), which is characterized by "sleep attacks" that produce sudden and irresistible episodes of sleep. These episodes may last a few seconds to more than an hour, sometimes occurring in the middle of conversation or while performing a task. Other symptoms include:

- Cataplexy - brief episodes of muscle weakness or paralysis induced by strong emotions, such as laughter, anger or surprise;
- Sleep paralysis - an inability to move that occurs at sleep onset or upon awakening;
- Hypnogogic hallucinations - vivid, realistic and often frightening dream-like experiences;
- Disruptions of normal nighttime sleep; and
- "Automatic behavior"- performing familiar or routine tasks without full awareness of what one is doing.

"Most people with narcolepsy are unaware they have a specific, treatable medical condition," said Bob Cloud, president of the Narcolepsy Network, the only patient organization specifically dedicated to the condition. "Even worse, it can take up to 15 years from symptom onset before they obtain an accurate diagnosis, because their condition is often mistaken for other disorders like depression, metabolic disorders and even learning disabilities."

Narcolepsy afflicts approximately 125,000 Americans. It effects men and women equally and most commonly begins in young adulthood between the ages of 15 and 25.

Currently, there is no cure for narcolepsy. However, there are a variety of medications available that can help manage the different symptoms associated with narcolepsy, so that people with the disorder can often resume active, productive lives. In addition, a sleep regimen of about eight hours per night, plus regularly scheduled naps during the day, may offer some benefits.

"I went to my family doctor because I was tired all the time and something had to be done," said Wright. "After being properly diagnosed, I started taking medication that has allowed me to get my life back."

People who suspect they suffer from narcolepsy or of its symptoms should see their physician.

Veterans combat hepatitis C

Many American veterans are now fighting a health enemy from their past.

The problem is the hepatitis C virus (HCV), a virus that can lead to liver cirrhosis, cancer and liver failure.

In fact, the American Liver Foundation predicts that in about a decade, the annual death rate from this virus will be 38,000 Americans.

The condition can be spread in a number of ways. Blood transfusions were one of the most common, until a reliable screening method for HCV in blood became available in 1992. In addition, other risk factors include:

- had hemodialysis (treatment with a kidney machine)
- had your ears or any other part of your body pierced using improperly sterilized equipment
- received a tattoo with potentially contaminated ink or needles
- tried IV drugs or snorted cocaine or other drugs (from a shared straw or bill)
- had a hands-on healthcare job or had been exposed to blood in the military
- shared razors, toothbrushes or any items that could carry infected blood

Many veterans were exposed to the disease due to the numerous forms of blood to blood contact in the military, particularly those who served in southeast Asia during the Vietnam era. There has long been a high prevalence of the virus there, so those who served in Vietnam are particularly at risk.

While symptoms can ultimately include jaundice, weakness, loss of appetite, nausea, brownish urine, abdominal pain and fever, hepatitis C is generally considered a "stealth" virus that does most of its damage before symptoms appear. The first signs of liver dysfunction may not show up for two or three decades after infection.

Many Americans are urging the government to help veterans infected with the hepatitis virus get the treatment they need.

The incidence of hepatitis C infection appears to be rising, partly, health care experts believe, because the virus has now reached the stage where it can be diagnosed in so many Vietnam Vets. According to Lisa Kory, director of the Transplant Recipients International Organization, HCV can mean a serious shortage of healthy livers available for transplants and an increase in the number of people who need them. "The liver shortage is a bigger problem than anyone knows today," she says, "And it will grow."

Fortunately, the U. S. Food and Drug Administration has approved therapies for treating HCV that help fight the disease better than ever before.

A secondary problem for many veterans, however, is that the U.S. Veterans Administration is reluctant to pay for treating HCV-infected veterans, saying there's no proof the infection was service related.

Health authorities, concerned about the future health of all Americans, as well as about the past sacrifices of America's veterans, urge vets to ask their doctor for the hepatitis C ELISA blood test to find out if they have hepatitis C.

How to pick a nursing home?

If you were to evaluate the quality of a nursing home, what would you consider the most important measure? In a recent study, the following nursing home qualities were deemed most important by Americans.

- Quality of life: In addition to medical care, nursing home residents should be given tender loving care. A nursing home should be a compassionate, home-like environment - clean, secure and comfortable. Residents should be encouraged to participate in various activities and be able to maintain their independence as much as possible.
- Quality of care: Most states have teams of surveyors who evaluate each nursing home's compliance with state and federal care guidelines. You can check the state's report to see if the home was cited for practices that required corrective action. By law, the report must be accessible. On your own, you can determine whether or not the attending staff has the credentials and experience to treat geriatric patients. Observe the nursing staff, see if they show the residents compassion. Do they know the residents' names? Would you want one of the caregivers caring for you?
- Family and resident satisfaction: Talk to the residents and family members about their rapport with the caregivers. Ask to see reports on resident and family satisfaction levels. A nursing home with a home-like environment and dedicated caregivers will earn superior ratings.
- Staff experience/ Length of employment: Ask the caregivers or administrator if the nursing home provides ongoing education and training. If you are concerned about special care needs, such as dementia, ask if the caregivers have experience with the condition or if there is a separate unit for the residents. Find out how long caregivers and administrators have worked in the home. Tenure is a sign of dedication and stability.
- Staff satisfaction: Ask the caregivers about their work and how they feel about caring for people with so many different needs.

Your local Office on Aging can give you a list of nursing homes in your area.

Survey offers dieting insight

The bread and butter of a sensible weight loss program is moderation, balanced with regular exercise and cutting out fatty foods, including butter.

According to a recent survey, 56 percent of American women believe the most effective way to lose weight is to count calories and fat. Limiting yourself in this way can lead to a tiresome routine. In fact, 21 percent of those surveyed ended their last weight loss diet because they got bored.

There are a number of ways to make diets more interesting. Substitution can be key. For example, pureed apricot can be used as a low fat alternative to oil in many recipes.

Instead of piling butter onto a baked potato, consider low fat yogurt. Dieting can be a unique and fun experience with substitutions.

Saving money is no accident!

Some accidents may be unavoidable, but drivers may be able to avoid some of the more annoying expenses.

When it comes to saving money, you should ask your auto insurance agent exactly what expenses are covered as part of your auto policy and consider "buying coverage for services such as towing and replacement cars.

While most drivers feel secure in the knowledge that they have excellent collision and liability coverage, they could be in for some expensive surprises if they have the misfortune of being involved in a car accident, especially if the accident is their fault.

Many people don't notice they're missing certain types of coverage until it's to late. The best advice for drivers is to be familiar with the terms in the declarations page (cover sheet) of their auto insurance policy, where every coverage category should be itemized. If a specific coverage isn't listed, the loss probably isn't covered.

In addition, it's a good idea to do the following:

• Always carry your insurance card and vehicle registration in your car. Most insurance companies provide two sets of cards. Carry one with you and place the other in your glove compartment.

• Review your insurance coverage and know what it includes. Will it pay for a rental car if yours has been banged up in a crash? For an average of one to two dollars a month, your insurance company will pay for your rental car while yours is being repaired.

• If you are involved in an accident that is not your fault, the other driver's insurance company may provide a rental car for you. You can enjoy the convenience of having a car while yours is in the repair shop. Some rental companies will even bring the rental car to you.

• Carry a tire iron, jack, spare tire and jumper cables, and know how to use them!

• Keep a list of emergency numbers in the glove compartment at all times. These should include your physician, insurance agent, neighbors and family members, your child's school or daycare center, local towing company and local rental car company.

• Keep a medical card with you if you are allergic to any medicine, or if you have a condition that requires special attention.

Is there a right time to invest in the stock market?

Having money to invest is exciting, but you face an important decision: When is the best time to shift your cash into the stock market?

To answer this age old question, the experts recently conducted a study to determine which investment strategy proved to be the most successful, investing the money immediately, or waiting for the perfect opportunity, when share prices might be lower.

The study considered three hypothetical investors who received $2,000 a piece each year from 1979 to 1998 and each employed a different strategy for investing money.

• Investor "A" represented the perfect timing strategy, placing his $2,000 into the U.S. stock market every year when share prices were at their lowest. He continued to time his investments perfectly every year until 1998.

• Investor "B" invested her $2,000 at the earliest possible moment once she received her cash each year.

• Investor "C" possessed incredibly poor timing. She invested $2,000 in the market each year when share prices were at their highest.

At the end of the 20 year period, Investor "A", the investor with perfect timing had accumulated $283,445. Investor "B" had $265,308, and investor "C" had $242,182.

You can advertise in a space this size for only $10 per week. Call 947-5321 for details!

Al Moore brings acrylic workshop to Village Artists

The Salado Village Artists feature artist Al Moore in their acrylics workshop August 19-20 at the Village Art Center.

The two day workshop will be from 9 a.m.-4 p.m. daily with the art center opening at 8:30 a.m. Registration deadline is Aug. 9. Early registration is advised as this is the only workshop in this medium offered in 1999 and space is limited. Cost is $110.

The workshop is suitable for both the beginning as well as the more advanced student. Each day will open with a period of instruction in the use of acrylics and a demonstration of the elements of the good painting. This will be followed by individual instruction according to the need of the student.

Acrylic by Al Moore

Born and raised in central Texas into a longtime ranching family, Moore is steeped in the beauty of the Texas Hill Country, the subject of many of his paintings. Primarily a landscape painter concentrating on the clear streams, rocks, hills and trees of this area, he uses the proven basics of art such as drawing, design, color and mood to create realistic impression of his subjects.

Moore's paintings have won numerous awards and prizes in shows and are in private and corporate collections in the United States and aboard. His paintings may be seen at his Comanche Gap studio and at several galleries in San Antonio, Waco, Temple and Belton. He has attended numerous workshops given by nationally acclaimed artists in a variety of media. He enjoys sharing his knowledge with his students and his students profit greatly from his expertise.

For more information or a registration form and supply list contact Sharon McGlasson, at 254/947-4545 or P.O. Box 363, Salado, TX 76571, e-mail: SmcGlasson@aol.com

Artist Jim N. Hill showcased August 8 at Barnhill Britt

Houston artist Jim N. Hill with his recent 1999 paintings will be showcased at Barnhill Britt, 12-4 p.m. Aug. 8. His exhibit will continue at Barnhill Britt through Aug. 31.

Jim's recent work includes striking black and white watercolor and acrylic images of people and landscapes, boldly defined with minimal lines and few brush strokes. He has included a series of vividly toned faces which he call "masks" in his painting this year. Other pieces he will be bringing to the opening include several traditional Jim N. Hill seascapes and beach scenes, landscapes, and abstract floral work.

Jim's favorite works remain his whimsical interpretations of women and men in a variety of circumstances. His style favors Matisse or Avery in its colorful and flowering nature, and his works of women in large floppy hats - truly a trademark image - are derived from memories of his grandmother and aunts in Arkansas.

After completing his Master of Fine Arts degree at the University of Arkansas in 1978, Jim moved to Houston, and he has been painting and teaching art students in the Houston area since that time. This fall, in addition to his creations and an extensive show schedule, Jim will return to teaching art full time in an urban Houston high school.

For more information about the Jim N. Hill exhibit, call Barnhill Britt at 254/947-3277.

These items as well as textiles, divination and altar items and other forms of art will be displayed and their meanings interpreted. Whittingtons teach ballroom dancing at the CAC in August

There will be evenings of sassy samba, fancy foot work, fox trots, elegant waltzes and just enough 'jump jive' swing to keep your feet on the ground at the Cultural Activities Center this fall, thanks to Drs. Harold and Nil Whittington. "This series of ballroom dancing workshops marks the beginning of the Whittington's fifth year teaching at the CAC," explains David Pennington, CAC Executive Director.

"Last year, we were flooded with reservations with a waiting list for each set of classes." Pennington emphasized early reservations for this fall's series of classes, which include five weeks of instruction of Samba - August 2-30; Fox Trot - September 6-October 4; Waltz - October 11-November 3 and Swing from November 15-December 13.

There are four dance lessons per course plus a practice dance. Classes are held 6:30-8 p.m. on Monday evenings in Wendland Hall at the Cultural Activities Center. The cost is $20 per person per course and includes a $10 nonrefundable deposit required to hold your reservation. Class size is strictly limited to 20 couples. Singles will be accepted when gender balance is achieved.

"We are not professionals," Dr. Nil Whittington makes sure to offer. A retired professor, Harold Whittington was a department head at Temple College, having earned his Ph.D. in sociology and a master's degree in journalism and political science. His wife, Nil, served as Director of Instructional Telecommunications for the Texas Higher Education Coordinating Board and as Associate Director of Academic Affairs for the Kansas Board of Regents before her retirement in 1988. Together they discovered a genuine love and passion for ballroom dancing, spending their free time developing their dancing skills and techniques by taking professional instruction from several ballroom teachers in the Central Texas area. Texas Wild Bunch member Joe Friddle to show in Salado

Killeen artist Joe Friddle will return to the 33rd Annual Salado Art Fair to show his watercolor paintings Aug. 7-8.

An outdoorsman, lover of nature and believer in those thing that make up our past are words to describe Friddle.

A transplanted Texan for 25 years, Joe was raised on top of the last mountain in the Smokey Mountain Range in Birmingham, Alabama. He received his formal education from Auburn University and earned a BS in Art Education.

Throughout his life, Friddle has sought ways to share his love for wildlife, the great outdoors, and the importance of strong grassroots characters stemming from rural Texas.

Beginning with stylized pencil drawings and portraits, Joe now explores the freedom watercolor adds to nature. He incorporates the mediums to join the outdoors and the remembrance of a time gone by.

While serving the public education as a teacher the past two decades, his artistic pursuits are a continuation of exploring the beauty of Texas. A student of his interests, he continues to experiment and expand ways to share the character of his subject matter.

A member of the Texas Wild Bunch, the state's oldest organization of traditional-style professional artists, Friddle continues to discover outlets to share his painted subjects and evoke warm memories from those who see his work. His paintings can be found in private collections in many states, as well as several countries around the world.

Texas Wild Bunch member Joe Friddle will show his watercolor paintings during the 33rd Annual Salado Art Fair Aug. 7-8 in Pace Park.

A day and trip to remember

by Tumbleweed Smith

On the way down to Austin, my wife Susan and I stopped in Brady to interview Gilbert Currie, who has cooked goat the past 26 years for Brady's annual goat cook-off, held every labor day weekend.

In Austin we got a room just two blocks from the capitol building, where we were expected the next morning. While eating supper, a woman came up to me and asked if I was Tumbleweed Smith. I was flattered. She asked for an autograph. Her name was Sally Papasan from Midland. She recognized me from the photograph on my weekly column in the Midland Reporter-Telegram. She and her family were in Austin for an end of school trip.

On the walk to the capitol the next day, we stopped for breakfast at Rick's Cafe. I was surprised to learn that Rick was an old friend of mine from Odessa. He used to have Rick's Cafe on the campus of the University of Texas of the Permian Basin, where I teach a couple of broadcasting courses.

Then we got down to the legislative business. Representative Bob Hunter of Abilene had arranged for a resolution to be presented to the House recognizing my 30 years of producing THE SOUND OF TEXAS radio program. While we were in his office, a couple of men came in. One was Mitchell George of the Texas Department of Economic Development. He said he listened to me in Plainview when he was growing up and later sponsored my program when he managed a department store. Wow!

Our representative, David Counts came in Dr. Hunter's office and led us to the podium area where Speaker of the House Pete Laney was presiding. After Dr. Hunter read the resolution, State representatives from Hamilton, Bay City, Beaumont, Vernon and other cities came up and congratulated us. Pete Laney gave me the gavel he used to pass the resolution.

Susan went to school in Big Spring with Ronnie Crownover, who is now the representative from Lewisville. He has been battling leukemia since he was elected, and was in the hospital just the day before. He came up and visited with us. That really meant a lot.

We were then taken to the Senate chamber where we were introduced by State Senator Robert Duncan of Lubbock. Senator Troy Fraser then took the microphone and said some words about us, then Senator David Sibley did the same thing. We were escorted to the podium where Lt. Governor Rick Perry was presiding. He visited with us for about 20 minutes.

The resolution Dr. Hunter introduced was beautiful. Susan cried when she heard it and when people started coming up to shake our hands she could hardly speak. It was one of the most meaningful things ever to happen to us.

The Texas Legislature does some very nice things. The legislators probably do not realize what an honor it is to be so recognized.

The resolution, on parchment paper, will be here in a few days. I can't wait to frame it and put it on the wall. It represents a big highlight in my life.

On the way home we stopped in Brady to do an interview with a man who had been struck by lightning three times. I'll write about that later.

Lawn & Garden Weekly Tip

Window Boxes

When filled with flowers and foliage, window boxes become decorative garden accents. Window box gardens compliment the plantings surrounding a house, provide color on a plain structure, and enhance any view.

A great range of annuals, perennials, and herbs are adaptable to window boxes, and plants can be easily changed from one season to the next if the boxes have removable liners. The flowers you choose for your window boxes and the style in which you plant them will produce a variety of colorful effects. An informal profusion of pastel-colored flowers combined with trailers such as lobelia or ivy, for instance, create a romantic look, while tidy rows of well pruned plants have a trim, tailored appearance.

Before you plant a window box, it is important to observe how much sun and shade each window receives. Many annuals and herbs thrive in full sun, but shade loving plants such as impatiens, wax begonias, and ferns make attractive plantings in less well lit spots. Keep in mind, that because window boxes hold relatively little soil, plants will quickly deplete moisture and nutrients, and roots are likely to dry out, especially in sunny locations. But careful watering, light but frequent application of fertilizer, and regular deadheading will keep window box gardens healthy and blooming.

Decorating a window box - window boxes are adaptable to a great variety of decorative treatments. The window box colors and trims you choose may simply match the color of your house, or they might depict a favorite theme or flower motif.

The boxes themselves are available in many materials, but those made of wood are by far the most practical and attractive.

To protect your decorative work, and the health of your plants, be sure to start out with good quality boxes; redwood and teak boxes withstand the elements best. They should be constructed with boards that are close to one inch thick (thinner boards are apt to warp) and joined with screws or metal strapping rather than nails. Both the boxes and any plastic liners you use should have evenly spaced holes for drainage.

Choose paints and sealers that are formulated specifically for outdoor use. A latex high-gloss enamel will provide goof weatherproof coverage, and can be rubbed in for a stained look. Decorative scenes can either be sketched directly on a box or drawn to full scale on a sheet of paper first and then traced onto the box using transfer paper. You can paint with artists acrylics (sand the paint after it dries for a rustic look); for protection, seal it with several coats of polyurethane.

Trims such as tulip or basket cut outs should be painted separately before they are applied.

Antiques & Antiques

Q: In around 1960, I received a remote-controlled toy called the "Radicon New Sedan, Radio Remote Control Car." I have saved it in the original box. The car is a red sedan with a flat, silver, air plane shaped hood ornament. It is not designed as a real make or model but is in the style of cars from the late 1950's or early 1960's. The box pictures a young girl and boy playing with the car. The bottom corners of the box front read, "The first and only complete radio remote control toy! Exciting to young and old," and "Trade Mark Modern Toys, Japan." Who made the car?

A: Your car was made in the mid to late 1960's by Masudaya, a Japanese toy manufacturer. Masudaya is probably best known as the maker of Radicon Robot, which was also marked as "the first and only complete radio remote control toy." The company also made a Radico toy bus and toy speedboat. Radicon Robot is worth over $4,000. Your car, in working order, would sell for more than $500.

Q: My arts and crafts sterling silver pendant is marked with the initials "H.W." in a monogram. I'm told it came from England.

A: Henry Wilson was an English designer who began making jewelry about 1890. He made silver and gold pieces and often added to the designs with enamel or gemstones.

Humanities workshop opens doors to teaching history and humanities

The Institute for the Humanities at Salado and Temple College collaborated this past month sponsoring a five-day workshop that will enable middle school and high school teachers to use computer technologies in teaching world history and other humanities courses. The workshop, held on the Temple College campus July 12-16, was presented by the Texas Humanities Resource Center, a division of the Texas Council for the Humanities in Austin.

The workshop gave 14 Central Texas teachers a hands-on engagement with new materials that can be used to develop creativity among students in their own classrooms. Resources included exhibits, audio-visual media with viewing-discussion guides, and special curriculum aids for teachers.

Schools districts represented included Killeen, Temple, Belton, Academy, Salado, Rogers, and Mt. Pleasant.

Workshop faculty included humanities scholar James Johnson, associate professor of classics at Austin College in Sherman; Frances Leonard, director of the Texas Humanities Resource Center; Jan Ward, English and humanities instructor at Temple High School and recipient of two summer fellowships from the National Endowment for the Humanities; and Ray Landford, director of the writing program at Temple College, who served as the technology coordinator. Participating from the co-sponsors were James Van Ness, dean of instruction at Temple College, and Jim Veninga, president of the Institute for the Humanities at Salado.

Several hours a day were reserved for work on computers, introducing the teachers to new resources available on the Internet for teaching the cultures of the ancient world. Many of the resources can be found on the web site of the Texas Humanities Resource Center (www.humanities-interactive.org).

The workshop was funded by the Texas Council for the Humanities, with additional support provided by Temple College and the Institute. No registration fees were charged. The attending teachers received a stipend of $100 to help cover miscellaneous expenses. In addition, they received a Teacher's Sourcebook and will receive later a CD-ROM version of the Internet resources.

Smart Borrowing: Mortgage Loan Vocabulary

Understanding the basics of how a mortgage works can be a lot easier once you understand some of the vocabulary used by lenders.

The experts offer these explanations for some of the most common terms that come up during mortgage transactions:

Principal - The actual amount of the mortgage. Usually this is the cost of the house, minus the down payment.

Interest Rate - What percentage of the principal you will pay in interest each year. Depending on the type of mortgage you have, your interest rate can be fixed or adjustable.

Amortization - Gradual reduction of a mortgage debt through periodic payments of principal and interest, according to a schedule, over a specified mortgage term.

Closing Costs - Money paid by the borrowers and sellers to effect the closing of a loan. These costs could include origination fees, discount fees, title insurance, survey fees, and credit report fees. Closing costs are estimated at the beginning of the loan process, and can end up being much higher than expected.

Point - Money paid to the lender to reduce the interest rate charged. A point is equal to one percent of the loan value.

Escrow Amount - An account held by the lender on behalf of the borrower for payment of taxes, insurance or special assessments.

Hazard Insurance - Insurance coverage that compensates for physical damage to the property by fire, wind or other natural disasters.

Title Insurance - A type of insurance that protects against unforeseen problems, such a liens or judgements against the property.

Home Improvement Tip of the Week

Arranging Picture Groups

A group of pictures makes a stronger statement than one single one and, with a little planning, turns a blank wall into an eye-catching feature.

Choosing a shape - Take furniture arrangement into account. If there is a blank space around a sofa, create a cozy corner using an L-shaped around one end. Also make sure that color and style of the surroundings suit the frames and their contents.

Arrange same sized pictures in a triangle or arrow shape to avoid a solid block effect.

For balance, keep spacing consistent, A muted background lets pictures dominate, Add coordinating ribbons and bows to link pictures together.

For a number of smaller pictures in different sizes but with identical frames, group them in a cross shape.

• Be sure to place one of the larger pictures at the bottom for balance, This angular display looks best adjacent to a piece of furniture with straight lines.

Choosing height - Pictures should hang just above eye level. This will be lower in seating areas (dining/living room), higher in areas for standing (hallway). Measure down from ceiling to top of eye-level, mark guideline in pencil, then hang pictures below it.

Choosing lighting - Choose subdued effects that will not reflect in glass. Wall lights on either side add atmosphere while picture lights emphasize prints. Avoid any lighting that shines directly on pictures as it will detract from the images.

You will Need:

Framed pictures, Newspaper, Measuring tape, Pencil
Spirit level, Hammer, Picture hooks

1. Measure the width, length and depth of the wall area where the pictures will be hung. Equivalent in size and shape on the floor using the newspaper as a template.
2. Arrange the pictures on the newspaper. With varying sizes, balance a larger one against two or three small ones. Move them around, trying different positions until the overall effect looks right.
3. Make sure that spacing is consistent, three pictures in a row should be the same distance apart. Draw a miniature plan of the arrangement. Measure pictures and spaces and note these on the plan.
4. Taking one picture at a time. Measure from the taut wire to the center top of the frame. Note measurement for each picture on the plan. Allow for distance when hanging.
5. Start top left, transfer all picture and spacing measurements onto the wall with light pencil marks. Use measurements noted in step 4 to position picture hooks. Gently hammer in place.
6. Hang pictures in same order as the newspaper design.
