

ZBA denies variance request for extension of fence

By TIM FLEISCHER
EDITOR-IN-CHIEF

Salado Zoning Board of Adjustment (aldermen acting as such) turned down a request for variance from Hauptstrasse Brewing Co., LLC to allow for the 12-foot extension of a fence from the side yard to the front yard of property located at 109 Royal St.

Applicants were requesting a variance from Zoning Ordinance Section 5.3.B.2 "Placement of a Screening Fence or Wall: In non-residential and multiple-family zoning districts, no fence or wall shall be erected in any front yard or side yard which is adjacent to a public street unless the fence or wall is required to screen the development from an adjacent residential area. If required to screen a residential area, the screening fence or wall shall be extended out to the street right-of-way line by the developer of the non-residential or multiple-family development."

The side yard and front yard are defined in the building code according to the placement of the main building on the property.

K.D. Hill explained to the ZBA that the building in question, which is being renovated to house Rio Salado Cocina and Cantina, sets very far back from the road, farther back than most other buildings in the area.

Hill and other representatives explained the need for the extension of the fence from the side yard to the front yard.

"We have engineered the space to hold 77 parking spots," she said, explaining that the fence and other barriers are necessary to control the foot traffic from the parking area in order to make the area safer for pedestrians.

She explained that by having a narrow entrance into the parking and an exit from the parking area to a sidewalk along Royal St., it would make the congestion issues at the corner of Royal and Main safer for walkers and drivers.

The request is also driven by a decision to improve the aesthetics and experience of their customers. "For years, the businesses across the alley have fronted Main St. and have only had their entrances on Main," she said. "Recently, they have opened entrances to the back, but what is unusual is that they have not done anything to screen some of the things back there like air conditioning units and other mechanical equipment. It is unsightly and not what I want our customers to see when they come here."

"I want them to experience the beauty of Salado and to maximize the space available," she said.

She told the ZBA that the original request was to allow for an extension of a seven foot fence, but after discussion with Morris Foster, the owner of Shady Villa at the corner of Main and Royal, "we have agreed to lower the height of the fence to less than five feet tall."

ZBA members asked questions about access to the parking lot. "You can't enter from Peddler's Alley," Jay Rich said because it is on other private property.

Frank Coachman said that if Foster came in for the fence permit, it would be able to extend all the way without seeking a variance. "Can you do that?" he asked. After the presentation on the design and variance request, ZBA conducted a formal public hearing on the matter.

Several people spoke during the public hearing on both sides of the issue.

Shawn Miller, employed by Chupacabra Craft Beer and Lone Star Winery located in Shady Villa, spoke in opposition. "This is cutting off one business from a half dozen others," he said, rather than working in cooperation with them. He raised concerns about traffic, limited visibility in the natural alleyway behind Shady Villa, limited access for delivery trucks to those businesses' back doors and the aesthetics of a large fence in the Historic District. "Once they start going up," he said, "they will start going up everywhere"

Gary Verdun said that he did not think the applicant met the standards outlined in the Zoning Ordinance for the variance.

Rachel Strong, owner of Chupacabra, also spoke against the variance. She said that the request is not necessary because there is no harm to the existing owner without the fence. "There is nothing special, unique or new about this," she said.

Strong added that approving the variance would be detrimental to adjacent businesses.

Rich told the ZBA that currently without a fence, parking is unregulated and uncontrolled. "Without a defined inlet and outlet, people could pull through a gap between a set of parked cars directly onto Royal," he said, adding that people are also walking between cars directly into the street.

Chris Lovebridge spoke in favor of the variance because it gains control of the parking area. "In light of everything they have done for this community," he said, "I know that it will be done right."

Following the public hearing, Rodney Bell gave a motion to deny the variance request. "It does not meet the requirement for undue hardship," he said. John Cole gave a second to the motion.

ZBA members discussed if there were other measures that could be taken to accomplish the same result, such as having the owner of Shady Villa make application for the permit.

Bell and Cole were joined by Michael Coggin and Skip Blancett in voting in favor of the motion to deny the variance with Coachman and Amber Preston-Dankert voting against.

Following are the criteria outline in the Zoning Ordinance concerning "undue hardship" on a property owner:

"(1) That literal enforcement of the controls will create an unnecessary hardship or practical difficulty in the development of the affected property; and

"(2) That the situation causing the hardship or difficulty is neither self-imposed nor generally affecting all or most properties in the same zoning district; and

"(3) That the relief sought will not injure the permitted use of adjacent conforming property; and

"(4) That the granting of a variance will be in harmony with the spirit and purpose of these regulations.

Communities, individuals can prevent virus' spread

By TIM FLEISCHER
EDITOR-IN-CHIEF

"You should stay home when you are sick."

Gene Mikeska told this to the Village of Salado Board of Aldermen during a presentation on the COVID-19 coronavirus on March 5.

Mikeska should know. He is the Chief Epidemiologist for the Bell County Health Department. He and Cathy Brem, Director of Public Health Emergency Preparedness for the BCHD, spoke to aldermen about what communities and community leaders can do to help prevent the spread of the novel coronavirus.

"The COVID-19 Virus is important because our bodies have not been exposed to it and have not developed an immune response to it," Mikeska stated.

Those who are most at-risk are people who have co-morbidities, Mikeska said: older people, those with weakened immune systems or those other health problems such as heart disease, diabetes, COPD or undergoing cancer treatment can be more susceptible to severe infection.

The key to righting the spread among weaker populations is Distance and Space, according to Mikeska.

Things an individual can do to help, he said, are these: "Stay home when you are sick. Stay clean, always. Increase the cleaning of surface areas that are touched a lot. Avoid touching your eyes, nose and mouth with unclean hands, cover your cough or sneeze. Don't travel to areas with an active spread of the virus."

"Most importantly, wash your hands with warm soap and water regularly and use hand-sanitizer with a high alcohol content when soap and water are not available," he said.

Businesses can do a great deal to fight the possible spread of the virus. Having good sick leave policies and support in place is very important.

- Employees with signs of a fever and any other symptoms should stay home for at least 24 hours.

- Ensure that sick leave policies are flexible and consistent with public health guidance.

- Do not require a health-care provider's not for employees who are sick with acute respiratory illness to validate their illness or return to work.

- Maintain flexible policies that permit employees to stay home to care for a sick family member.

- Increase cleaning of frequently touched surfaces in the work place.

- Post signs to remind employees to wash hands and use good cough and sneeze etiquette.

Coronavirus having effect on local events, churches

June Ritterbusch announced that the 2020 Texas Wine & Rogue Art Fest on March 28-29 is canceled,

"Our forecast is that many folks in Texas will decide to forgo large public gatherings in the next few weeks," Ritterbusch stated in announcing the show's cancellation.

"We are grateful for your many years of support and have sincerely given this difficult decision considerable thought," she added. "Our goal every year is to produce a quality event for both attendees and vendors. Given the ever-present weather risk coupled with headwinds from progress in improving the village and the known unknowns of contemporary current events, we felt compelled to cancel."

This event has consistently drawn 3,000-5,000 people to the Wine Festival and the Village of Salado throughout the weekend in the previous 11 years. "We have poured as many as 29,000 tastings which is equal to about 1200 bottles," Ritterbusch said. "The economic impacts include not only the sales tax on the wine sold, but also the other businesses of Salado including restaurants, unique shops and hotels."

"We hope and pray that this moment passes quickly," she added, "and we promise that when it does we are going to throw one heck of a great party!"

Salado Wine Seller is not alone in canceling what has become a major event for a Texas community. Last week, SXSW organizers announced that they were canceling the annual South by Southwest event in Austin, which was slated for March 13-20.

Not every public event is being canceled due to concerns about gatherings of people and the possible spread of the coronavirus.

Barrow Brewing Co., on the heels of the SXSW cancellation late last week, announced that it was continuing with plans for the Northbound and Down music weekend March 21-22.

The Annual Wildflower Art Festival, slated for March 28-29 on the grounds of the Salado Civic Center is still slated. The event is sponsored by the Salado Chamber of Commerce. A final decision on this event is scheduled for this week.

Local churches announced changes in their services due to the flu and virus season and an abundance of precautions.

The Austin Diocese of the Catholic Church announced changes in its procedures for Communion and gatherings recently.

Most Rev. Joe Vásquez, Bishop of Austin, asked parishes including Saint Stephen Catholic Church to temporarily distribute holy Communion in the hand, rather than on the tongue. Bishop Vásquez made it clear to clergy and eucharistic ministers that no one is to be denied the Eucharist over this measure.

Bishop Vásquez also requested a temporary end to the distribution of the Precious Blood at Mass.

Those who cannot receive the Eucharistic bread due to gluten intolerance or allergy, should consult their pastor on making accommodations to receive the Precious Blood.

While the typical reception of Communion is under both species, that is bread and wine, Catholics are reminded that Christ is fully present in the Eucharistic bread: Body, Blood, Soul and Divinity.

Standing basins of holy water, such as stoups at church doors, should also be removed. Holy water fonts that circulate and filter water can remain operable.

Pastors may ask parishioners to forgo holding hands during the Lord's Prayer and to offer the Sign of Peace without handshaking, if that is best for their parish.

"These temporary changes were made in consultation with clergy and public health officials to safeguard our parishes," Bishop Vásquez said.

Citing the example of Pope Francis, Bishop Vásquez also asks those who are ill to not attend Mass or religious education (Sunday school). Pope Francis, who while he had a cold, said he would not attend an annual Lenten retreat.

Saint Joseph Episcopal Church announced the following change required in church operations due to COVID-19:

1. discontinue intinction (dipping the bread or wafer in the cup)
 2. refrain from dipping hands in the water font
 3. avoid physical contact with others which includes the offering of peace -- bow or give a verbal exchange
 4. use hand sanitizing gel
- Additionally, worshippers may partake in communion without receiving the wine at all.

Bulls & bears fighting it out over recent market correction

The Markets

Reading the headlines, one could easily be forgiven for thinking that Armageddon was at hand and the stock collapse of 1929 was a mere shadow of what was happening now. The reality was far less exciting. The S&P 500 Stock Index (SPX) rose 0.61% for the week ending March 6, closing at 2,972.37. That is not to say the "correction" is over. The SPX is still down about 12.2% from its high point on February 19 but this week with its dramatic ups and downs was far less stressful than last week's 11.5% decline. The bulls and the bears fought fiercely all week with the Index climbing as high as 3,127 twice before retreating to about 2,900 then ending the week somewhere in the middle, but higher than at the end of last week. The question is not whether the coronavirus will become an epidemic in the U.S., as that is currently assumed to be a given, but whether fear of the virus will trigger a major domestic economic downturn.

The ten-year U.S. Treasury note, the benchmark for all U.S. bond rates, closed at a record low yield of 0.767%. For a point of reference, one year ago the 10-year T-note was yielding about 2.7%. As a sort of bright spot, the Federal Reserve's reduction in its overnight interbank rate by 0.50% effectively erased the inverted yield curve we saw last week. Still, the one, two, three, and five-year notes are all well below the interbank rate, indicating the bond market is forecasting a significant slowdown in economic activity over at least the next year. West Texas Intermediate crude oil (WTI) agreed with the bond market this week, closing down 5.31% at $41.57 as world-wide demand for oil shriveled and supply built up in the U.S. WTI is now down over 32%

Market & Economic Update

By Jeffrey W. McClure

from the beginning of the year.

The Economy

Looking at the economic data released for the week ending on March 6, an objective observer would conclude that the U.S. economy was in good shape. Admittedly, growth was slowing with manufacturing looking stressed by the tariff wars and the consumer beginning to slow spending growth, but still on solid footing. The Labor Department released its February employment report and estimated we generated a net 273,000 jobs in February. The official unemployment rate dropped back to a half-century low of 3.5% and average wages were up 3% from this time last year. As a footnote to that report though, there were anecdotal reports from survey respondents suggesting that future hiring may be put on hold and layoffs were possible if the virus epidemic spreads to America.

Echoing that concern, the IHS Markit U.S. services index fell to 49.4 from last month's 53.4 on a scale where numbers above 50 indicate growth and below 50 indicate shrinkage. That reading indicates that the business activities of service industries in the United States are already starting to contract. At the same time, the Institute for Supply Management (ISM) also reported significant business disruptions were being reported in the service sector.

The Federal Reserve executed an emergency interest rate reduction of 0.5% to a range between 1-1.25% for its overnight interbank rate. That emergency rate cut was the first one since 2008 as it became apparent the economy was in trouble during the mortgage-bond crisis. Historically, an emergency half-percent rate cut by the Fed has been reserved for serious economic threats and, to date, has been followed by a recession. The good news is that the Fed is not waiting for the bad news to officially be confirmed a month or more after the fact, but rather is getting ahead of the power curve.

With infections now being reported in 24 states, including, as of Friday 17 confirmed cases in Texas, the COVID-19 coronavirus is here. Festivals like Austin's South-by-Southwest are being cancelled. It is apparent that any service that involves people gathering is going to be hurt. Airlines are already seeing large-scale cancellations. It is no longer a question of "if" we have an epidemic here in the United States but more one of how long it will last and how big will be the short-term economic damage.

As we have written before, it is not going to be pretty, but the nature of this economic crisis is very temporary. Given the history of viral epidemics, six months from now the worst will likely be over and by the end of the year it will be history. Meanwhile, it is good to recognize that any attempt to get out of the market and get back in at the right time is very likely to be a good way to lose money. Our underlying economy is in good shape and the virus has a short time on stage before we return to normal. As it says on the cover of The Hitchhiker's Guide to the Galaxy, in bold letters, "Don't Panic!"

Stop pooh-poohing Corona virus worries

The White House has been walking into a coronavirus trap.

By pooh-poohing worries about the virus and saying everything is under control, it is setting itself up for the charge, if things get even a little bad, that it was self-deluding and overly complacent.

Although President Trump has recently struck a better tone, he's been a chief offender, wanting to downplay the virus for fear it will continue to suppress a stock market that has experienced vertiginous drops.

This is exactly the wrong approach. The moment doesn't call for market-reassuring Trump, but threats-aren't-getting-past-our-borders Trump, not Dow 30,000 Trump, but draw-bridge-and-moat Trump. Everything should be geared toward overreacting now, when the threat in the U.S. is still in prospect, instead of later, when circumstances may be beyond anyone's direct control.

That means appointing a point person for the coronavirus response with a medical background, who doesn't already have a full-time job, like current designee Mike Pence. The right pick could provide genuine expertise in public health and the workings of government, as well as being a reliable source of public information.

Rich Lowry

It means erring on the side of further travel restrictions, even if it will be impossible to exclude infected people from the United States, given its break out from China to countries all around the world.

It means not quibbling with Congress over coronavirus funding, with even Minority Leader Kevin McCarthy saying the administration's $2.5 billion request is "a little low" (Trump has signaled a willingness to accept more).

It means making sure that the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention is working at maximum efficiency to make coronavirus tests widely available, which is the most worrisome shortfall in the federal response so far, and that government agencies are doing everything possible to push the development and deployment of a vaccine.

Finally, it means coordinating with localities, as warranted, on ways to slow the spread of the virus via "social distancing," or the avoidance of large gatherings and public transportation.

The coronavirus is not a modern-day plague. Many people infected will experience only mild symptoms, and it's not as deadly as SARS or Middle East respiratory syndrome.

Yet, it is not a creation of the fake news, either. It has hobbled one of the most important counties in the world, China, and is shutting down towns in Italy. There are now more new cases outside of China than inside it. The virus has killed nearly 3,000 people. If it gets loose in the United States, there could well be a panic that in itself would be damaging to the social fabric and the economy.

Maybe none of this comes to pass, but it's better to be overly prepared and vigilant than play to catch up.

Besides, the political valence of the coronavirus crisis should be favorable to Trump's worldview. It demonstrates a downside of globalization and shows the importance of borders. It is an object lesson in our over-dependence on a China that is dictatorial, dishonest and poorly governed.

The president shouldn't shrug off the threat in the hopes of talking up the stock market. If his team responds effectively, the Dow will take care of itself.

FINE CHINA LUNCHEON MARCH 26

State Senator Buckingham is SARW keynote speaker

State Senator Dawn Buckingham, the first woman to represent Senate District 24, will be the keynote speaker at the Salado Area Republican Women's Fine China Luncheon and Fund-raiser Thursday, March 26.

Buckingham is a small business owner who says the best approach to government is "less is more." As a doctor, she says she has witnessed firsthand how government often interferes, rather than enhances, an individual's or a business success.

State Senator Dawn Buckingham

Dawn is an avid hunter and outdoorswoman. She served as a volunteer firefighter, and she is a graduate of the A&M Fire School. She worked two jobs to pay for college at UT-Austin and graduated Magna Cum Laude and debt-free.

She is married to Dr. Ed Buckingham and they have two children.

She has held leadership positions in local, state and national organizations.

Her key Senate Committee assignments in 2018 were Nominations (Chair), Criminal Justice, Health and Human Services, and Higher Education. She is one of only five Senators chosen by the governor this year to serve on the Redistricting Committee.

There will be 26 decorated tables to view at the event with gift certificates given to first, second and third places. Doors open at 10:45 a.m. after judging is complete by three outside judges. Tickets are now available for the event and may be ordered by mailing a $30 check to S.A.R.W., PAC; P.O. Box 373; Salado, TX 76571. The event will be held at the Blue Heron Room at Tenroc Ranch at 11:30 a.m. with Lynette Jones of McCain's Café and Bakery providing the food. Proceeds from the fundraiser go toward funding civic, educational, military and political campaigns. For more information contact Third Vice President, Dorothy Dentry, at ddentry13@gmail.com or 254 760-2456.

Thanks to the generous offer by Shirley and John Stephenson Salado Area Republican Women again will be able to offer two $1,500 scholarships this year. Applicants must be Salado High School Senior ladies in good standing with a 2.5 GPA or better. Applications can be obtained from counselor Heather Bisson's office and must be postmarked by April 30. Information is also listed on Salado ISD website. If you have any further questions, call SARW Scholarship Chair, LaNora Miller at 254-947-8556.

Chris Isaacs is a three-time winner of the Academy of Western Artists "Will Rogers Award."

He is a poet and storyteller who has lived the life that he writes about. He has seen life from a cowboy's point of view for all of his 60-plus years, and his poems and stories are alive with the heart and humor of life from a cowboy's point of view. He can usually find the funny side of any situation, and is considered by many to be one of the finest humorists in the country.

Isaacs will be one of the cowboy poets in Salado on May 2-3 for the Cowboy Poetry Gathering with performances in several locations in Salado.

"It always bothers me that so many people seem to think that cowboy poetry is nothing more than funny stories and bad grammar. Nothing could be further from the truth. Good poetry is good poetry whether it is "The Ballad of William Sycamore" by Stephen Vincent Benet, "Maud Muller" by John Greenleaf Whittier, or "Anthem" by Buck Ramsey. The story of an American experience is being related, and if it is well written it should be recognized. Humor has always been a great part of the cowboy poetry genre, but those critics who say that is all cowboy poetry is, need to dig a little deeper."

Award winning Cowboy Poet and Storyteller Chris Isaacs

1996 AWA Award
Chris has been published in numerous magazines, including American Cowboy, Western Horseman and Cowboy Magazine. He has two books of his work published, Bringing it Home, and Rhymes, Reasons & Packsaddle Proverbs. The latter was nominated for the "Western Heritage Award" by the Cowboy Hall of Fame and winner of the "Will Rogers Medallion Award for Excellence" by the Academy of Western Artists. He also has five albums of his poetry recorded. His album "Both Sides" was voted "Poetry Album of the Year" for 1997, by the Academy of Western Artists. In 2002, his album "Out With the Crew" was voted the same honor. 2005 found him the recipient of the Western Heritage Award by the Wickenburg Az Chamber of Commerce, the Gail I Gardner Award from the Arizona Cowboy Poet Gathering and in 2009 he was inducted into the Arizona Culture Keepers.

Chris has worked at many different aspects of the cowboy life from being a full time working cowboy, to rodeoing, to many years as a packer.

In between jobs you could usually find him making a living as a horseshoer.

He has a passion for good horses and mules, and has even owned a good dog or two.

He currently day-works for area ranches and travels the country with his poetry.

a result, he allowed the opponents to escape with a much smaller loss than they should have.

The bidding went as shown, with Zia lying low at his first two turns before showing his true colors. In the interim, the opponents' spade bids told him that his partner had at most one spade. When Zia eventually bid the slam, South, who had seen the Pakistani in action before, believed him and took the diamond save.

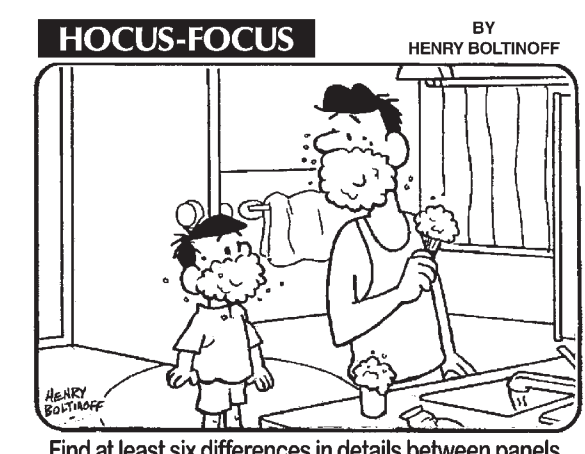

The defense seemed obvious: ace of spades, spade ruff, a heart to the king, spade ruff and the ace of diamonds for down five. This would come to 900 points (1,100 in today's scoring) — only 80 less than the score for making six hearts.

To everyone's astonishment, Zia led a club, reasoning that on the bidding, his partner's ace was likely to be in clubs. In that case, the defense would go: club ace, club ruff, spade ace, spade ruff, heart king and spade ruff for down six and 1,100 points.

However, South won the first club and led a trump to the jack and ace. East then returned a club, never expecting that his partner would lead a singleton club holding only one trump. When West couldn't ruff, declarer discarded his losing heart on a third round of clubs, drew trump and then led a spade. Zia had to grab the ace or he would have lost it, so South finished down only two for a loss of 300 points.

Perhaps there is hope for the rest of us after all.
