Peaceable Kingdom retreat making tracks (dinosaur tracks)

Children who come to the Peaceable Kingdom Retreat for Children may not have their own Jurassic Park, but they do have a good beginning.

The retreat is a free retreat for chronically ill children, located on the Lampasas River in West Bell County.

Reproduced in limestone-appearing concrete, the retreat has casts of the tracks of a 3 ton meat-eater (a raptor-type of dinosaur), chasing and leaping upon a 30 ton plant eater.

In 1940, the original section of these tracks was cut out of the Paluxy River at Glen Rose, and shipped to the American Museum of Natural History in New York. They are still there, but the State of Texas later got casts of them and reproduced them as an Exhibit at the Dinosaur State Park, alongside of many original tracks still in the river or on the banks.

Several years ago, the Peaceable Kingdom Retreat for Children rented the casts from the State and had Peggy Maceo, the same artist who prepared the Glen Rose Exhibit, reproduce them at the retreat.

"We did it as an introduction of the children's study of birds," says Jim D. Bowmer, President of the Retreat. "Scientists increasingly believe that our modern birds are the sole surviving dinosaurs. We've made this the theme of our bird study booklet we're preparing for the children at the retreat. We hope to translate their natural interest in dinosaurs to an interest in birds."

Jackson to perform at Salado Legends

Dave Jackson, a Native American from Yukon, Oklahoma, will once again play the part of Tonweya and perform a mystical, spiritual dance portraying the Tonkawa Indian legend of origin in this 5th season of Salado Legends.

Dave acted in the movies "The Last of the Mohicans", "Texas", "Stolen Women", "Trail to Abilene", "Jim Thorpe" and a Smithsonian special on Native American Spiritualism, to name a few. His picture is on the Oklahoma Historical Society T-Shirt, and he appears with reenactment groups, Native American Dance Shows, and enjoys appearing at public schools all over the United States.

In May of 1997 Dave received the Silver Merit Award from Asplundh Tree Expert Company for saving a child's life. A 5-year old boy was playing near a stream when he fell into the water. Dave, an employee of Asplundh, was inspecting trees in the area when the boy's brother and playmates ran to him for help. Dave called 911, found the child's body, performed CPR and had the boy breathing by the time the ambulance arrived. There is no permanent damage to the youngster even though he was under water for over 5 minutes. The boy has invited Dave to his 6th birthday party in June.

TOPS to meet June 12 in Belton

GOP PLANS COUP

While Sharp is licking his chops over a possible move to the cat-bird seat in the Senate, Bush and his fellow conservatives are looking for their own candidate who can win the Lt. Governor's position and give Texas a potent one-two punch with the top two leaders from the same party and in all probability a Senate full of GOPers to boot.

Right now Agriculture Commissioner Rick Perry is the leading Republican contender provided Texas voters are willing to turn all of the executive branch and most of the legislature over to the GOP. There currently being a new and growing fear of unproduc-

Laney has enough pledge cards to be reelected speaker if he can win another term as representative from Hale Center.

Still and all, even good old Pete might have some problems since Republicans came ever so close last election to the 76 member margin needed to control the lower house. They missed by only eight seats - a number that might be achieved next year when the entire House of Representatives is once again up for grabs.

WORTH WATCHING

We started this column by noting that the "silly season" had begun. For the next several months prior to the first primary in March there will be much to ponder if one is turned towards politics.

Texas style politics, taken with a grain of salt, a grin and a sense of humor, is fun - so stay with us. It will be a long ride, full of surprises, laughter and perhaps some tears.

We promise - it'll be well worth the trip.

Keith R. Thompson, D.D.S., will be the guest speaker at the Lions Club's fortnightly luncheon June 11 at Mill Creek Creek Country. Dr. Thompson, a retired dentist who lives in Salado, will speak about traveling in Ireland. Dr. Thompson was born on Oct. 10, 1926, in Mandan, N.D., where he graduated from high school. After graduation, he was inducted into the U.S. Army Air Corps and was discharged in November of 1946. He enrolled in the pre-dental program at the University of North Dakota, and later transferred to the University of Minnesota, where he received a B.S. degree in 1952 and his D.D.S. in 1954. Dr. Thompson practiced dentistry for 13 years in Elgin, N.D., where he was a member of the Lions Club. In 1958, he married Mary Flannigan of St. Paul, Minn., and they had three children, all born in Elgin. In 1967, they moved to Big Spring, Texas, where Dr. Thompson served as chief of the dental service at the V.A. Hospital there. In 1976, he was transferred to the V.A. Sadie Lou Holland celebrates 1,000 months

Mrs. Sadie Lou Holland was honored Tuesday, May 27, with a surprise 1000 Month Birthday party at the Fellowship Hall at First United Methodist Church of Salado.

The celebration was the idea Mrs. Holland's oldest great-grandson, Michael Madison. Mrs. Holland was 83 on January 27, 1997, and Michael calculated that the years would equal exactly 1000 months on May 27, 1997. His remark was, "What a great idea for a party for Memaw!"

Michael was assisted with party preparations by four other great-grandchildren, Robert Ellis Schuster, Loren Michelle Schuster, Keith Evan Touchon, Dylan Matthew Touchon, two granddaughters, Angelyn Rochelle Schuster and Erika Yvette Touchon, and a daughter, Weeta Sue Evans.

Guests were served punch and cake as they kept a watchful eye on the devastating tornado passing overhead. Attending the celebration were 75 friends and relatives from Salado, Belton, Temple, Moody, Fort Worth, Lake Dallas, Flatonia, San Antonio, Yancy, Pearsall, Killeen, and Broussard, La.

The meat-eater's tracks look like enormous turkey tracks. The vegetarian's look more like huge elephant tracks."

The Glen Rose tracks have indirectly influenced such things as Jurassic Park. Bowmer says, "The Glen Rose tracks are among the first to indicate to scientists that meat-eating raptors hunted in packs."

Technically, the name of the retreat's vegetarian is Pleurocoelus (or a sauropod, which means a plant eater), while the smaller (6,000 pound) meat eater (a theropod, which means meat eater) is Acrocanthosaurus.

The retreat also has plastic single full-sized reproductions of tracks found on the San Gabriel River in Williamson County and from the Blanco River.

"We have heard there are some real tracks in the Lampasas River, which flows by the retreat, upriver at Kempner, but we have never seen them," Bowmer states. "At any rate, these are exact reproductions of tracks of dinosaurs which once lived in this area."

An artist's drawing of the actual event is shown on a Parks and Wildlife poster hanging in the main building of the retreat.

Small plastic reproductions of various kinds of dinosaurs are distributed to the children at the summer sessions of the retreat.

What does it mean to be a dad

by Dan Morales
Texas Attorney General

THIS FATHER'S DAY, as in years past, children will send cards, give gifts or place phone calls to their fathers. Many children will simply say, "Happy Father's Day." What they mean is: "Thank you and I love you for being an active and positive part of my life."

On June 15, Father's Day, this scenario will play out with millions of children and their fathers. And many men will feel their efforts to raise their children have meant something to their children.

What Does it Mean to Be a Dad?

For children whose fathers take the time to provide for, talk to, play with, advise, discipline, help, listen, defend, encourage and sacrifice for their children, this kind of participation can be summed up in one word - commitment.

Sadly, not all children will be able to wish their fathers Happy Father's Day because, for whatever reasons, their fathers have not been there. However, the status quo can change. Fathers can and should take the necessary steps to be active role models for their children.

In the best of circumstances, daughters learn how they should be treated and respected by their boyfriends or husbands by watching their fathers interact with their mothers. Likewise, sons learn how to treat and respect women through the example set by their fathers.

The decisions parents make when raising their children make all the difference in the world. Child support plays a major role in the development of the next generation and in the future of our state.

Responsibility Begins at Home

Responsibility, pride and integrity go hand-in-hand when it comes to discussing the characteristics of committed fathers. A responsible father will provide financially for his children and has the pride and integrity not to push his children off on the government to obtain food, clothing and shelter.

Every child needs caring and responsible parents. But government and laws cannot mandate caring parents. As a governmental entity, the Office of the Attorney General can only try to locate parents, establish paternity and support obligations, and enforce those obligations through the IV-D child support program. The rest is up to the parents.

It's Not Too Late

More than money is at stake. The love, affection, and respect of children will become more important to fathers as their children grow. I encourage all fathers to show that you care - and earn your children's respect - by taking responsibility as fathers. The decisions parents make when raising their children are critical.

It's not too late to become an active and positive role model in your children's lives. Take the time to establish paternity if you haven't done so. If you have fallen behind in your child support payments and would like to work out a repayment plan, please call the child support office listed in your local telephone directory or call (800) 252-8014. Your children are counting on you and they're worth it.

Frazier turns down Braves' offer after being drafted in 14th round

by John Eubanks

It appears that recent Salado High graduate Chris Frazier will not sign a baseball contract with the Atlanta Braves and will instead attend TCU in the fall.

The Braves selected Frazier, a power-hitting pitcher, in the 14th round of the Major League Baseball Draft June 3.

The money offered by the Braves was apparently not enough to entice Frazier to sign. "That had a lot to do with it," he said June 9.

Frazier is believed to be the first baseball player from Salado to be drafted since the draft was instituted some 30 years ago. Salado baseball coach Melvin Bates said he knows of no other player from here to be drafted.

Frazier said he was pleased to be selected in the 14th round. Thirty Major League teams, including two expansion teams, participated in the 100-round draft.

By attending a four-year college, Frazier will not be eligible for the draft until after his junior season of 2000.

The 6-1, 185-pound right-handed pitcher signed last fall to play baseball at Texas Christian University, where pitching legend Nolan Ryan serves as an assistant coach. The Braves have the rights to Frazier until the day he attends classes at TCU.

Frazier was asked the day after the draft if it would be hard passing up college life and working with Ryan. "I've thought about it a long time now, but I think I can do it," he said.

Chris Frazier

Bates, commenting before Frazier turned down the Braves, said it's a tough decision to make for an 18-year-old, especially since the Braves would pay for Frazier's college education if he signs with them.

Bates said Frazier has the potential to become a Major League pitcher, because of his ability and desire.

"I see him as a Greg Maddux control-type pitcher," Bates said, referring to the Atlanta pitcher considered one of the best in the business.

"He won't overpower Major Leaguers. His mental approach will aid him greatly, though."

Asked if Atlanta had expressed interest in him before the draft, Frazier said, "I've talked to them a lot in the last couple of months."

Other teams expressed interest in him as well, but as Frazier said, "I think most of them were probably pretty sure I would go to college."

Some teams mentioned the idea of him attending junior college, where players are eligible for the draft after their freshman and sophomore years. Players attending a four-year college are not eligible to be drafted until after their junior year.

Instead of contemplating an offer to turn pro, Frazier will be playing summer baseball with a league in Austin.

He has also been selected to play in the Texas High School Coaches Association All-Star Game June 27 at The Ballpark in Arlington, the homefield of the Texas Rangers.

Had he signed before then, he would have likely missed out on the opportunity to play in the game.

This past season, Frazier posted an 11-1 pitching record while striking out 165 batters in 81 innings. The switch-hitting Frazier also batted .442 and led the team in home runs (9), runs batted in (30) and runs scored (27).

He was the MVP of Salado's district as the Eagles won the league title and posted a 16-5 record.

"He's been outstanding," Bates said, adding that he would have supported any decision Frazier would have made on his future. "You couldn't ask for anything more. He was a team player, just a coach's dream."

Princess' story is sad but true

What follows is my true story.

My name is Princess. My mistress named me when I was a small puppy. I was really cute and fun then. Last year, when I was one year old, I got with puppy (you know—pregnant). My adopted mom didn't know what to do with me because as a large dog (black Lab) with 5 puppies, there wasn't enough room for me, my puppies and the 2 children in our small house.

So Mom took me and my pups out to the country where she thought we would be happy. We could run freely and romp. She probably thought that someone would find us and take care of us. She left some food and water but the fire ants got the food and we drank the water in less than one day. Puppies and large dogs need lots of water, you know.

The only problem was that she didn't come back for us. I tried to do the best I could to take care of the puppies but we couldn't find food or water. I guess it was my fault because I had never had to take care of myself before, my owner always took care of me.

We waited and waited at the side of that road. We were afraid to go too far for fear mom would return for us and we would be lost. The puppies were really scared and would run and hide when a car drove by. But I was brave and waited there at that spot.

After a while, I guess I wasn't too pretty, skinny, dirty from nursing and all. No one stopped for us, no one! After about a week, my paws have become raw and bleeding from wandering around looking for water and food. If only someone would give us some water. You just can't walk up to a farm or ranch house and ask. The dogs that live there will kill you even if you are a big dog like me. Cars can kill you too. Two of my pups died on the road. It was awful, I couldn't do anything about it. The others died of dehydration. I did the best I could. But it just wasn't enough.

It seemed like an eternity waiting at the side of that country road. I am not a very good hunter and besides I was nursing my puppies so I am not very fast. I tried time after time to catch a rabbit or even a mouse, anything. But years and generations of being taken care of has not helped me learn any survival skills. The real problem is water. I am getting weaker and more scared. If only the dogs at the ranches would let me have some water or if someone would stop. It has been three weeks now and all the pups are dead, and I'm dying. There is no happy ending to this story, and that's the truth.

Princess' story is repeated every day. We can help by giving aid to those who cannot help themselves.

Please spay and neuter your pets so this story is not repeated by your dog's or cat's offspring.

Humane Society dedicated to helping homeless, helpless animals in Salado area

Dear Saladoans,
The Salado Humane Society is a non-profit organization run by volunteer help. We are dedicated to helping the homeless animals in our village by spaying, neutering, feeding, sheltering, providing rabies shots and investigating animal cruelty calls.

These animals haven't chosen to be homeless and would prefer a home and someone to care for them. If you can provide a home for a dog or cat, please let us know and we'll be happy to find the right companion for you.

We rely on your contributions of money, pet food and time spent on fund-raisers.

We have many different kinds of job openings, and even if you can only help one hour a month, please get in touch with us.

There are 70,000 puppies and kittens born in the United States every day. Most of these will be euthanized or killed by other means. You can help put a stop to the tragedy most animals face by providing funds to your Humane Society to help in their efforts to stop unwanted reproductions. If you are a pet owner, please spay or neuter your pet. Prices vary on this procedure, and information is given over the phone. Please call for this information today so your pet doesn't add to this tragedy.

The society is open to everyone and if you would like to make a contribution, adopt, have questions or comments, please write to:

Mike Roe was one of the lucky ones: He only lost his home in May 27 tornado

by John Eubanks

Mike Roe is among the "lucky ones" who weathered the storm of May 27. He only lost his home.

Roe was at his Salado business on that fateful Tuesday, when all hell broke loose in the form of tornadoes.

One of them destroyed his Rocky Lane residence near Lake Belton. Two other homes in the area were also destroyed and seven more were damaged.

Roe and twin sister Denny Blass were at the business they share on North Stagecoach Road -- his stained glass and rare coins, her floral and gift shop -- when the storms blew in that afternoon. Worried about impending hail, they moved their vehicles under some nearby trees.

They even watched the tornado that headed south on its deadly path to Jarrell, where it took 27 lives.

Roe tried calling his parents, whose trailer sat behind his home, but got no answer. He then called a neighbor, but only got a recording.

Something about phone lines being tied up.

Ten minutes later, he got a call from John Willingham of the Department of Public Safety.

"He said I needed to come out to the lake," Roe recalled. "My house had been hit by a tornado."

He hurried to the truck he had parked under the tree, only to get it stuck in the mud.

Denny let him use her car, and off he went. The traffic was heavy after crossing the dam, two or three miles from home, which made the wait even longer.

When he finally got home, the enormity of the situation hit him.

"I didn't have any idea it was as bad as it was," Roe said, describing the once "woody" area as nearly barren. "It looked like pasture land. Nothing higher than three foot was standing."

Roe's two-story, wood frame structure was leveled, along with Joe and Mary Eller's rock house and a trailer that was home to Joe's niece, Heike Baumann and her three kids. None of the homes were insured.

His parents' trailer received only minimal damage. His mother had covered herself with a carpet in an adjoining screened-in back porch, as two dogs sat in her lap. His father had sought refuge in a nearby pump house made from cinder blocks.

Thankfully, Roe's dog and three cats inside his home survived. He was also astonished to see that a stained-glass lamp shade -- consisting of 210 pieces of glass -- remained intact, as did a stained-glass window found at the opposite end of the house where it had originally been.

He did lose all but one of his antique guitars, as well as cherished family photos. Among other things.

But as Denny said, "He's alive, and mom and dad are alive."

Roe's 14-year-old daughter, Katy, was at school when the storm hit, after her school bus had turned back. A friend eventually gave her a ride home -- ahead of her father.

"She was pretty shaken up and disoriented," Roe said. "Just like me. We couldn't find the driveway."

She's now staying with her mother in Burleson, after spending a few days with Denny. Roe is sleeping on the couch in his parents' trailer.

"I probably had 15 pairs of shoes and found one of each," Roe said. "I'm wearing loaner boots and a loaner shirt now."

He recently returned to his business, after spending several days getting things squared away at home. During the cleanup, he and some neighbors cut into a toppled oak tree and counted the rings to estimate its age -- about 150 years old.

Another tree was impaled by a license plate. "That was interesting," Roe remarked.

He and the other Rocky Lane residents are in a holding pattern, awaiting the results of various fund-raising efforts.

Western Auto donated four utility trailers, one each to the three families whose homes were destroyed, and a community trailer already filled with donations. Roe and the others are hoping that someone will donate temporary trailers they could live in ("our number one concern"), while they rebuild. One trailer has been promised, but won't arrive for a couple of weeks.

Other organizations helping out include Sam's Club in Temple and Hoodview Federal Credit Union in Killeen. Vic Means, who owns Salado's Hutchens House, is also helping out, along with his Belton church, the Church of Christ.

Roe said a VFW post near Lake Belton is planning a fish fry June 14 to raise funds.

An account has also been set up at Belton Bank to help. Checks should be mailed to Rocky Lane Tornado Fund, c/o Cherie Schipper, Belton Bank, 2000 N. Main, Belton, TX 76513. Checks can also be dropped off at the bank.

"The list goes on, for those who have helped," Roe said.

Sister Denny wants to extend a "thank you" to all of them. "Everybody has been awesome," she said.

Hooded sprayers may offer a solution to farmers dealing with this year wet weather.

Wet spring causes farmers trouble

The excessively wet spring weather that has plagued farmers throughout the South will continue to cause problems well into the growing season, especially with weed control. But farmers using reduced tillage production systems and a special type of sprayer should be able to compensate for wet conditions that would otherwise hamper some field operations.

"The biggest problems farmers currently face are late planting, increased weed pressure and getting into soggy fields to run equipment," says Lyle Gingerich, technical development manager for Monsanto Company, maker of Roundup Ultra™ herbicide. "Farmers producing crops under no-till, reduced- or strip-tillage systems will be able to get into fields the quickest following rain due to improved soil structure and crop residue cover."

According to Gingerich, late planting will make weed control crucial, and wet field conditions will make mechanical cultivation to control weeds difficult. "An excellent alternative to cultivation is use of hooded sprayers, which allow in-crop applications of non-selective herbicides such as Roundup Ultra to keep row middles clean," he says.

Running a cultivator down crop rows several times per season to control weeds is a tradition in many crops, especially cotton. But this traditional thinking is being challenged by research documenting yield losses from root pruning following cultivation, and by new farming techniques that make cultivation less desirable, Gingerich says.

Since 1994, both university and private research studies have confirmed cotton yield increases when hooded sprayers are used in place of cultivation. "Hooded sprayer applications gave an average yield increase over cultivation of 158 pounds of lint per acre for one treatment, and 123 pounds of lint per acre for two treatments, when compared to cultivation," Gingerich says. These studies were conducted in Georgia, Alabama, Arkansas, Texas and north Florida.

Gingerich also says that these yield increases might be a good hedge against the yield losses associated with late-planted crops.

"When you cultivate, you prune roots that would otherwise get at nutrients and moisture more effectively," says Dr. Lowell Zelinski, director of agronomic services for Delta & Pine Land Company, a major producer of cotton and soybean seed, in Scott, Mississippi. Dr. Zelinski and his staff recently reviewed many years of research studies examining the pros and cons of cultivation. These studies encompassed all major, cotton-producing regions of the U.S.

"It is important to note that injury to root systems from cultivation occurs in the cotton root zone section with the highest fertility and moisture levels," Dr. Zelinski stresses. "Root pruning forces cotton roots to reach deeper into the soil to satisfy the plants' needs."

Hooded sprayers are fast becoming an attractive alternative to cultivation for many growers, especially in the Southeast. "They allow farmers to effectively and economically control weeds without disturbing the soil surface and cotton root systems," Dr. Zelinski says. "Hooded sprayers help prevent yield losses associated with root pruning."

According to Gingerich at Monsanto, farmers can get into wet fields much sooner with a hooded sprayer than with a cultivator. Sprayers also require less horsepower to pull, so smaller and lighter tractors can be used.

"Spraying is faster and provides better weed control than cultivation," he says. "And, unlike cultivation, hooded sprayers don't bring up fresh weed seed to germinate or spread perennial weeds throughout fields."

Hooded sprayer rigs are manufactured by both Custom Ag Products under the name Redball® and John Deere & Company. Over 2,000 farmers across the South and Southwest currently own these sprayers, which can be used in cotton, corn, soybeans and milo.

Shoppers to Salado will likely trek to The Store in the future for presents

by John Eubanks

In the not-so-distant 21st century, when Salado is a booming metropolis, The Store in Old Town Salado will likely be the place where shoppers from distant galaxies come to shop where others have shopped before.

A store trek, if you will.

Inquisitive store owner Becky McAulay will likely be inquiring about their point of origin, too.

"We're originally from Texas, but the summers were scorchers, so we bought a place on Mercury. We're on our way to Saturn for the winter. Hubby thinks he can ski rings around the planet, but we'll see."

Becky will simply respond with her "I see" look and quickly suggest a gift item that will still be in vogue light years from now.

"When people come to Salado for the first time, they're just visiting the store for entertainment," Becky explains. "If we have something to slow them down, then maybe they'll see everything we have."

Becky McAulay poses in front of The Store.

Like all the gift items and clothes and toys and cuddly bears and jewelry and ...

"I joke and tell people we are Salado's department store. We try to have a varied inventory," Becky said.

One of the most popular items is the Music Maker, which allows one to play songs on a rectangular-shaped string instrument by using a map-like guide placed beneath the strings. There are 15 different packets of songs, ranging from the Beatles to Russian folk songs.

Art work is also available in The Gallery in Old Town Salado, which adjoins The Store. The Gallery features work from Texas artists George Boutwell, B. Herd and Larry Dyke, among others.

"We have a lot of people come in for our selection," Becky said, of The Gallery. "It's our selection in art that really brings them back."

The Store also offers Muffy, a popular collectible bear distributed by North American Bear. The Store has done so well selling the bears that it has the distinction of hosting Muffy herself Nov. 14-16. No other store in the region handled by the sales rep received the honor.

Becky said people are so enamored with Muffy that they travel throughout the country to have their picture taken with the bear in its various outfits. (Becky has been told that Muffy will be wearing the Carolyn and Gregory Dachs were married just six months when they opened the doors of The Burlwood Gallery in Salado Square 20 years ago.

Today, Gregory's, an American Craft Gallery, marks their 20th anniversary in business in Salado.

The Dachs were the first tenant in Salado Square when they opened for business.

When they moved from Salado Square to Shady Villa two-and-a-half years later, they changed the name of their business from The Burlwood Gallery to Gregory's.

They were also the first tenants at their newly-built Shady Villa on Main St.

They have remained in Shady Villa since 1980 and doubled the shop space there in 1990.

Gregory's has made itself an impressive reputation as a fine gallery. In fact, it has been named to the Top 100 Retailers of American Crafts by Niche magazine for the third year running.

They have done it by insisting on offering the best hand-made items available, whether it is the contemporary quilts by Pamela Hill, jewelry boxes of exotic hardwoods by Daniel Secor, bronze fountains by Jim Millars, kinetic sculptures by David C. Roy or blown glass by Abelman.

Gregory's has become known as having the most extensive selection of kaleidoscopes in the Southwest with prices ranging from $14 to $2,600.

They have also become well-known for their wide selection of hand-crafted fine jewelry from Patricia Daunis, Tabra, Donald Cook and other artists.

"We consider ourselves fortunate to be successful in Salado," Carolyn said.

To celebrate that success, Gregory's will give away a Twin Oaks Hammock Chair valued at $700 at the close of business June 11.

Christmas outfit while in Salado, but don't tell anyone.)

Becky and husband George McAulay have had The Store for six years, the last four at the current location in Old Town Salado.

The idea for The Store came about while the McAulays were "trying to establish an alternative to George's corporate lifestyle, but we had to get it in place before he kissed the corporate world goodbye," Becky explained.

That should occur this summer, allowing George more time around The Store. Employee Fran Ridout also helps out at the store.

Becky is the type of person who gets totally involved in whatever she does. The former Salado Chamber of Commerce president is currently chairman of the Ambassadors committee, which is responsible for the ribbon-cuttings at new businesses.

Becky is the short person in the ribbon-cutting photos, helping hold the ribbon. Her shortness is an asset at The Store, too. "Since I'm a short person, I try to help short people find something they look cute in," she said.

Becky was used to helping people after working as a registered nurse for over 20 years. She entered the profession after earning a B.S. degree in nursing from Texas Woman's University.

About the only emergencies Becky responds to now are last-minute gifts that customers needed ... oh ... light years ago. "When I was a nurse, everything I did was life and death," Becky said, "and my store is not that way."

The Store is located in Old Town Salado, on Main Street, across from the Civic Center. It is open daily, including weekends. The number phone is 947-9000.

Alcoa gives $50,000 to Jarrell victims

The Alcoa Foundation has given $50,000 to help victims of the Jarrell storm that left 27 people dead, scores more injured and hundreds homeless.

Hal Reagan, Alcoa spokesman, said the Pittsburgh-based foundation gave $25,000 each to the Salvation Army and American Red Cross Disaster Relief Fund to help surviving families of the May 27 tornadoes that struck the small community north of Georgetown.

"Alcoa came to Central Texas—at Rockdale—46 years ago, and we have many employees and retirees in Williamson County," Reagan said. "We consider it part of our plant community and are pleased that the Alcoa Foundation elected to help with the storm relief and cleanup in Jarrell."

Reagan presented the donations to Maj. John Jordan, Austin area commander of the Salvation Army, and Steve Crisman, director of the American Red Cross of Central Texas, both with Austin headquarters.

The two agencies have been at the storm-ravaged site since the disaster occurred, providing food, clothing, personal necessities, household furnishings and multiple other needs, including an information center.

"The Salvation Army's round-the-clock relief efforts are made possible only through the generosity of people who care about the less fortunate," said Maj. Jordan. "The Alcoa Foundation has more than stepped up to the plate with its very kind contribution to ease the pain and hardship of victims of this tragedy."

Both agencies said money is the chief need at this point.

Alcoa, the world's largest aluminum producer, operates its biggest smelter at Rockdale in adjacent Milam County.

Many agencies continue helping victims of May 27 tornadoes in Central Texas

Many state and volunteer agencies continue to help the victims of the May 27 tornadoes. Texas Division of Emergency Management Coordinator Tom Millwee said recently that the state's goal remains one of helping the victims of the storms.

"We are here to help as much as we can," he said. Millwee praised the work of volunteer groups and individuals for their unselfish support of the people of both Jarrell and Cedar Park.

People from all over the state and beyond continue to provide cash, labor, support and donated items to the disaster areas, he said.

Because of the outpouring of donated goods into the area, Williamson County officials say that while they appreciate the generous gifts of donated goods, they can no longer accept these items. Cash donations now are the best way to help. That money can be used to buy items that meet the specific needs of individuals.

Persons wishing to donate to the relief effort in Jarrell should make their checks of money orders payable to the Jarrell Recovery Fund and mail to P.O. Box 361, Jarrell, TX 76537-0345.

Donors wishing to provide funds for tornado relief efforts throughout Williamson County should make their checks payable to Williamson County relief Fund, and mail to Union State Bank, 1100 Williams Drive, Georgetown, TX 78628.

Donors wishing to benefit the tornado victims in Travis County's Hazy Hills or Pedernales Valley areas should give either to the Central Texas Chapter of the American Red Cross at 2218 Pershing Dr., Austin, TX 78723 or the Salvation Army at P.O. Box 1000, Austin, TX 78767, noting on their contribution the area they intend to help. If donations are not specifically marked, the organizations may add them to their national relief funds.

Also, many state agencies continue to support disaster recovery and clean-up efforts.

They include these:

Texas Department of Transportation has provided machinery for the removal of debris and dead livestock from the Jarrell area. TxDOT's Austin district has provided personnel and equipment from its county maintenance offices and from Waco district to support this effort.

Texas Department of Insurance assisted homeowners in the disaster areas by providing information and expediting insurance claims. Texas Department of Insurance reports that all known disaster victims who have insurance coverage have been contacted by their insurance adjusters. Texas Department of Insurance has a consumer protection hotline at 1-800-252-3439 where insurance claims specialists are available to answer insurance questions or to handle complaints.

Martin, Scott to entertain at Salado Art Fair

Among the artists scheduled to attend the 31st Annual Salado Art Fair Aug. 2-3 in Pace Park are entertainers Deborah Martin and Preston Scott.

This husband-and-wife team depends on hard work, marketing strategy and the diversity of their styles to make a living throughout the country.

They spend most of their time traveling the land, marketing their music and related wares at fine arts fairs.

You aren't likely to hear them on the radio just yet, but they have sold many thousands of recordings at these fairs. Last year, they did 46 such shows, with only six weekends off.

As a solo act, Deborah's emphasis is acoustic, traditional folk music. As a duet, she plays flute, though she's proficient on many instruments. Preston dominates a wall of synthesizer keyboards (he's actually an entire orchestra," Deborah notes).

And their vocal harmonies are simply beautiful.

You can see them perform at the Art Fair, too.

Martin and Scott create flutes (upper photos)

Cool water creating world-class bass fishing on Guadalupe lakes

by Keith Warren
Texas Angler

In Texas it is rare to find water temperatures in the upper 60's in the summer. But that is what you will find on the chain of Guadalupe River lakes below Canyon Lake. From Lake Dunlap through Lake Placid, the unusual cool summertime water is creating world class bass fishing.

For the past several years these lakes have been choked with hydrilla grass which allowed great spawning and provided excellent habitat for bass. Now the lakes are void of the grass and the fish seem to be everywhere.

It is not uncommon for an average angler to catch 20-40 fish per day. Recently I videotaped an upcoming program, and found bass averaging 2-1/2 pounds.

The water is unseasonably cool due to the amount of discharge from the Canyon Dam. The watershed above Canyon Lake had caught a tremendous amount of runoff during recent rains. In order to maintain Canyon at or near the conservation level of 909 feet, the water is being released. Due to the swift current in the river, fishermen will find unusually off colored water, but the fish are still biting.

Recently a new record bass from Lake Dunlap was weighed in at 14 lbs. 15 ounces. Bass fishing for quality bass is better now on these river lakes than I have ever seen it. As a concerned angler I have mixed feelings about sharing this exciting news.

Without a doubt more fishermen are finding out and catching fish. That is the good news.

The bad news is that many fishermen are not practicing catch and release. It is ok to keep one or two, but use common sense. If everyone is keeping their limits, this world class fishing hole will only last a short while. Please remember to practice catch and release. Keep only what you can eat.

Keith Warren is the host of The Texas Angler Television Show, which broadcasts statewide. Catch The Texas Angler locally on KWTX on Sundays at 5:30 a.m. or check local listings for airtime.

Volunteers in Jarrell needed June 14-15 to help victims begin rebuilding process

People whose homes and businesses were destroyed in the May 27 tornado in Jarrell are appealing for special volunteer help next weekend. They need workers to help salvage and clear small debris so that families can begin the rebuilding process.

Volunteer groups should call the tornado recovery command post in Jarrell to receive work assignments for the weekend of June 14-15. The phone number is (512) 746-4309.

John Sneed, emergency management coordinator for Williamson County, said that an earlier call for volunteers to work this past weekend was cancelled as heavy equipment was scheduled for use that Saturday and Sunday.

"We knew that it would add to road congestion and might be dangerous. As it turned out, we weren't able to use the heavy equipment because of mud from heavy rains," he said. "We hope by next weekend to be able to assign volunteers to help individual families with specific tasks."

Sneed said that the work assignments will include shoulder-to-shoulder sweeps of large areas of the Double Creek subdivision and surrounding farms and ranches to clear debris from those areas.
