Throughout the land, the story is told

And it came to pass in those days, that there went out a decree from Caesar Augustus, that all his empire should be taxed.

This same taxing was when Cyrenuis was governor of Syria.

And all went to be taxed everyone to his own city.

And Joseph also went up from Galilee, out of the city of Nazareth into Judea, unto the city of David, which is called Bethlehem; (because he was of the house and lineage of David,)

To be taxed, with Mary his espoused wife, she being great with child.

And so it was, that while they were there, the days were accomplished that she should be delivered.

And she brought forth her first-born son, and wrapped him in swaddling clothes, and laid him in a manger, because there was none to give room for them in the inns.

And there were in the same country, shepherds abiding in the field, keeping watch over their flocks by night.

And lo, an angel of the Lord appeared unto them and the glory of the Lord shone round about them; and they were sore afraid

But the angel said unto them, Fear not, for behold, I bring you good tidings of great joy, which shall be to all people.

For unto you is born this day, in the city of David, a Savior, who is Christ the Lord.

And this is the way you shall find the babe, he is wrapped in swaddling clothes, and is lying in a manger.

And suddenly there was a multitude of the heavenly host praising God, and saying,

Glory to God in the highest; and on earth, peace; good will to men.

And it came to pass, when the angels were gone away from them into heaven, the shepherds said one to another, Let us now go, even unto Bethlehem, and see this thing which is come to pass, which the Lord has made known unto us.

And they came with haste and found Mary and Joseph, and the babe lying in a manger.

And when they had seen, they made known abroad the saying which was told them concerning the child.

All they who heard it, wondered at those things which were told them by the shepherds;

But Mary kept all these things and pondered them in her heart.

And the shepherds returned, glorifying and praising God for all the things which they had heard and seen, as they were manifested unto them.

And when eight days were accomplished for the circumcising of the child, his name was called Jesus; which was so named of the angel, before he was conceived.

Peoples National cuts ribbon on Salado branch

Among the dozens of people attending the ribbon-cutting for Peoples National Bank, Salado were branch manager Don Owens, bank president Wendell C. Williams and chairman and majority stockholder Vaughn Baird.

Peoples National Bank last week announced a new program and a new service in the near future of the Salado branch.

Working in cooperation with the Salado school system, PNB, Salado will begin the Spirit of Salado awards program. The Spirit of Salado award will honor Salado High School students during each grading period through this program. Similar programs have done well at PNB Belton and PNB Temple, according to Wendell C. Williams, President of PNB.

Williams also announced that the Salado branch will soon boast at Pulse Automatic Teller Machine.

Branch manager Don Owens introduced the Salado branch staff. Continuing in service to Salado are Glenda Hill, Leannette Walker, Betty Lindsey and Doug Hill. Laurie Zander is a new addition to the staff.

The ribbon-cutting had a solid turn-out of about 50 people, including chairman of the board and majority stockholder Vaughn T. Baird and other board members.

Whatever you do, avoid Poison Ivy. Good advice given to me by my mother. Too bad I didn't follow it.

Instead of avoiding Poison Ivy, I just had to watch it.

Believe me, the box cover is thrice as good as the actual video.

Poison Ivy, the movie starring formerly sweet and innocent Drew Barrymore, is much more excruciatingly painful than the rash caused by contact with the plant of the same name.

What is most painful is to see the transformation of Drew Barrymore as the beautiful little girl of our memories in E.T. to the trashy, tattoo-wearing bimbo Ivy in this teenage Fatal Attraction.

What is also painful about Poison Ivy is the predictability of the poorly written psycho-sexual-thriller filled with overtly unsexy sex. If you want a psycho-sexual-thriller, watch Basic Instinct.

Whatever you do, don't touch Poison Ivy.

This is a particularly difficult column to write since it deals with a certain amount of sadness. Sadness at Christmas time is normally something to try and avoid but this story needs telling.

There is a family in our village by the name of Guajardo. Husband is Manuel. Mother is Delia. There are five sons ages 13 down to 3. They all go to school except for the three year old. The father is a hard working custodian. The problem is that one of the little boys, Moses, has a rare bone disease and doctors at Shriner's Hospital in Houston say the seven year old may lose both hands due to the tumors and cysts that are untreatable. Trips back and forth to Houston have dried up all savings and left nothing from the monthly paycheck to buy presents for the youngsters this Christmas season.

Thus it was that Delia asked for help. She wrote to the Salado Chamber of Commerce and others to see if there was help available so the kids could have a tree with a present or two from Santa. The Chamber moved quickly and apon presents. Chamber secretary Laura McQueary took the mother on a shopping tour and the presents including clothing are ready for the children day after tomorrow.

But that's not all, both Salado banks, working with the Chamber, have set up accounts to receive donations to help the family's travel needs and other needs that require attention. Don Owens, manager of Peoples National Bank of Salado and Gerry Gamble, president of Salado National Bank expressed great interest in the case and promptly put the accounts into motion on a fast track. They are under the name of "The Moses Guajardo Fund" and deposits can be made as of right now!

Several of the Churches in town are collecting food and other items for this worthy family and the parents are going to be put in touch with agencies designed to help in just such cases.

End of Story?

End of Story? Hardly. Christmas morning and toys will come and go. A little boy will face the uncertain future and we will all worry and help in the days ahead. But what of others who have special needs in our community. Those whose plight never comes to the attention of the good hearted citizens of this community. Those who slip through the cracks and whose future is cloudy.

We are a small village without the formal governmental agencies set up to help those who need help. Few of us know what is available to lend a helping hand. Many of us look around and see an area of plenty and think everyone and everything is fine. What we don't see are the young who go without. The old and lonely who sit alone and perhaps long for companionship and many times the basic nutritional needs. The disabled and infirmed and on and on. These folks are present, to one degree or another, right here in our village. We just don't know about it until a cry rings out and we rush to help.

First Hand: Bonding between parent & child

by Steven Ervin

SISD Superintendent

There is a lot of talk now about bonding... male bonding... female bonding... parent-child bonding. Bonding is the development of strong emotional ties between people. Bonding involves more than the natural love a parent feels for his own flesh and blood. It involves learning to love and accept and like our children as individuals with their own thoughts and ideas. Bonding is promoted through the following behaviors:

1. Take time to listen and talk with, not at, your child.
2. Learn and take an active interest in your child's activities so you can discuss them together. Include your child in some of your activities, sharing your knowledge and experience.
3. Treat your child's questions with seriousness and interest. Seek answers to those questions you cannot answer.
4. Respect your child's privacy and property by not reading his/her mail or listening to his/her telephone conversations.

5. Love abundantly and tell your child how you care for him/her.

6. Find something that you can admire about your child and tell him/her about it. Use this as a way to open communication lines between you and your child.

7. Share your goals, dreams, and childhood experiences with your child.

8. Develop and encourage strengthened relationships with your spouse and own parents.

9. Encourage family activities; outings, vacations, picnics, projects, recreation or hobbies.

10. Spend time playing with, talking to and teaching your child.

11. Gradually allow the parent child relationship to change into a relationship of two friends.

12 Offer your guidance, suggestions and advice only when asked for as your child grows into young adulthood.

The parent child relationship is one to be treasured and nurtured. In time the relationship can grow into a true friendship between two individuals. The relationship you develop at an early age will influence the quality of your future relationship.

Should you use a Money Manager?

Managing a growing portfolio in today's complex financial environment isn't easy. You have to commit a large portion of your time, energy and resources just to keep up. Is entrusting investment decisions to a professional money manager the answer? The idea may seem a bit frightening at first.

Not every investor should use a money manager. But before you decide whether professional management is right for you, you should understand a money manager's role compared to that of your financial planner or investment broker.

In general, a money manager will free you from the difficult and often time-consuming task of managing your portfolio. He or she is given the authority to decide what investments to buy and when to sell. The manager will continuously monitor the contents and performance of your portfolio. You also gain the advantage of the many manager's expertise and full-time research.

This role is much different than that of a financial planner or broker. Unlike a financial planner, who only makes recommendations about investment moves, a money manager actively manages a portion of your assets and creates a portfolio that best meets your objectives. And unlike a broker, who typically must consult you before making trade, a money manager is solely responsible for trade decisions, based on guidelines agreed upon at the start of your relationship.

Mike
Miller

Money managers are also compensated differently. Instead of receiving a commission based on trades, like a broker, money managers are generally paid on a fee basis. This fee is often based on the amount of assets he or she manages for you.

The decision to use a money manager is obviously an individual choice. You must first decide whether you feel comfortable giving another individual discretionary power to direct your account, or whether you want to maintain the control over authorizing individual transactions. You should determine if your portfolio is large enough to meet most managed account minimums. You also may be very satisfied with your relationship with your planner or broker. If you decide to consider a money manager, however, your next step is to select the manager that will best help you fulfill your investment goals.

First, clearly define your investment objectives. Within these objectives, outline your expectations regarding the investment return you're seeking, how much risk you're willing to accept and the style of manager you prefer. The more specific you are, the easier it will be for you to find a money manager that can help you achieve your goals. Compare the manager's investment philosophies with your own. Ask each money manager to describe the strengths and weaknesses of his or her firm's investment style. This is especially important for newer firms that lack extensive performance records. You can narrow your choices by investigating only those firms whose philosophies are in line with your objectives.

Request promotional materials and performance records from different money managers. Compare each manager's past performance against a standard index, such as the Standard & Poor's (an unmanaged index). Be sure to look at performance annually and over a full market cycle rather than trade by trade. This will give you an idea of how well the money manager does during up and down markets.

Many brokerage firms offer services that assist you with the difficult and time-consuming task of selecting and monitoring a money manager. These services can help you through the process of selecting the right manager. In addition, they can monitor the performance of your manager as compared to other similar money managers. Whether you select a money manager on your own or through a selection service, give the manager an adequate amount of time with your portfolio (about three years) to see how he or she fares against the stock market's fluctuations.

Letter to the editor

To The Editor:
I want to offer my sincere gratitude to the Salado Volunteer Fire Department for their quick response and expert use of their newly acquired Jaws of Life when they responded to an accident involving my son, Michael Sladovnik on Oct. 16, near Jarrell.

I am certain that the combined efforts of the Salado Volunteer Fire Department and Belton Emergency Services team are responsible for Mike's survival and recovery.

Merry Christmas and Happy New Year to these very deserving teams!

God bless each one of you.

HOME TRENDS

Euro-style...the integrated look...the built-in look. All describe kitchens featuring uncluttered designs with plenty of workspace that are also comfortable places to spend time.

A key element of the built-in kitchen is a built-in refrigerator which integrates smoothly with virtually any kitchen cabinet. For example, a true built-in model from KitchenAid is 24-inches deep and fits American style 25-inch cabinet tops and European style 24-inch cabinet tops. To match both American and European cabinet toe kick heights, the lower ventilation panel is adjustable up to 4-1/2 inches.

With door and handle inserts, the look is custom. Looking good is not enough, however. Through-the-door ice and water dispenser, adjustable shelves and door bins, separate controls for refrigerator and freezer compartments, and a generous warranty round out the total style and performance of the built-in refrigerator.

The beauty and performance of built-in appliances go a long way to making kitchen design dreams a reality.

Why not form up a "Clearing House" if that is a good name, and ask our ministers to head up this new organization along with a representative from the school system and any other person the group feels it needs and let these men and women take on the job of checking out the needs as they are reported and when an investigation proves that need exists then set in motion the help required. Most churches have a food pantry and some even keep clothing on hand. They could muster all sorts of help from such stalwart civic minded folks as the Salado Lions Club as well as the Churches and together with other citizens who prove each day what large hearts they have - help could move where help is needed without a waste of motion.

Until the "Clearing House" or whatever they decide to call the group is set up - information on the Moses Guajardo situation can be gained by calling the Salado Chamber office at 947-5040 any morning starting Dec. 28 and thereafter. Mrs. McQueary will have updated information available.

Such a helping hand is surely in the finest tradition of Christmas as well as the fundamental teachings of Christianity that are supposed to operate all day - everyday! What a wonderful thing to put into action in 1993. In fact - I would bet that if there was one wish that each of us has in our hearts at this moment - after reading about little Moses Guajardo and all that he faces in the days ahead - we would hope that as a community we can set up a way to help all of those who truly have needs in our town.

Have a grand holiday season.
