Those members are Alan Dillon, Don Engleking, Don Hogue, David Matthews and Ashley Voss-Liebig.

Alan Dillon is an Instructor/Working Retiree with Texas A&M Engineering Extension Service's (TEEX) Emergency Service Training Institute (ESTI).

Prior to joining TEEX/ESTI in December 2005

Alan became a Fire Instructor for KFD in 1976 and earned Instructor I with the Texas Commission on Fire Protection (TCFP) when established in 1994. As Lead Instructor Alan worked with the Killeen Independent School District/KFD to open a TCFP Certified Recruit Training Class attended by High School Junior - Senior students. This was the first program of its kind in Texas and the second in the USA to allow public school students to graduate as Commissioned Fire Fighters. While with TEEX/ESTI Alan has provided training with the Recruit, Marine/LNG, Haz-Mat and Municipal Extension programs.

His education and training include the following:

TCFP Advanced Firefighter, Driver Operator, Haz-Mat Technician, Instructor I, Field Examiner

vice/TEEX Wildland Fire Response Team

He has also developed and authored emergency response curricula, including rewriting the TEEX Recruit Training Curriculum and co-authoring the Industrial Emergencies for Municipal Based Responders I & II classes (in response to the West, TX explosion)

Donald Engleking

Judge Donald Engleking has lived in Bell County for approximately 33 years. In that time I have also lived in the area that will be covered by Emergency Service District #1.

"Although I have never served on the Salado Volunteer Fire Department I have shown my support and admiration for this great department," he stated.

During his 14 years as Justice of the Peace for Precinct 2 Bell County, Engleking had regular contact with the Salado Volunteer Fire Department (SVFD). As part of his JP duties, Engleking often responded to emergency calls. "At Many of the calls I was met not only by law enforcement but also members of the fire department," Engleking stated. "I have had first hand experience working with and watching the great job that these dedicated volunteers perform."

Prior to being Justice of the Peace, Engleking worked with the Texas Alcoholic Beverage Commission as a state police officer. He started out as an Enforcement Agent for them until 1987 when he was assigned to Bell County as Sargent. He was promoted to Lieutenant assigned to the Dallas District Office, where he was responsible for enforcement in 28 counties of North Texas and was responsible for approximately 50 enforcement and civilian employees. In 1996, he changed assignments to TABC headquarters, where his primary assignment was grant writing and administration of more than $5 million in grants. Most of these grants were from the Texas Governors Office and The Texas Department of Transportation. Engleking worked with these two organizations to help them award grants to other applicants. Part of the administration of grants included budgeting and record

While employed by the state he attended and graduated from the Bill Blackwood Law Enforcement Management Institute.

Prior to working for the state I was with the Amarillo Police Department, working as a patrolman all four years that I was employed there.

During the same time I completed my Bachelors degree in Criminal justice Administration at West Texas State University in Canyon Texas.

He also served in the United States Air Force for six and a half years before being Honorable Discharged, during which time he was assigned to avionics, working on many types of aircraft.

Donald Hogue

Donald Hogue retired from retail sales, moving to Salado in 2014 to be closer to his grandchildren.

He was a sales associate for Home Depot in Corpus Christi for eight years, a store manager for Hobby Lobby for four years, a store manager for Michaels Arts and Crafts for 13 years and a store manager for K-Mart for 18 years. He graduated with a BBA from University of North Texas.

He has served on Chambers of Commerce, advisory board of Salvation Army, Church Administrative committees in four cities, Lions Clubs, homeowners associations including Treasurer of Mill Creek Community Association for four years. He has been involved in two city leadership training classes, served on neighborhood committee in Tucson to determine impact of street development in the area and volunteer groups (both church and community)

He is a member of the Salado Lions Club of which he serves as a board member, Salado Cemetery Association board member, Planning & Zoning Commission member for Salado, Keep Salado Beautiful, an active member of the Salado United Methodist church and a volunteer mowing group

"I have worked my adult life planning, setting goals and then working to reach those goals," he stated. "I believe that the boards purpose is exactly that: it is not to run the Volunteer fire department, their board does that, but the ESD board will be tasked with setting a long range goal and a plan to reach that goal. The board member should be a fiscal conservative with experiences setting and following a budget. The

Ladies Auxiliary is now Salado Ladies Community League

By Jane Hackley

Salado Chamber Ladies Auxiliary is kicking off a new year with a new name: The Salado Ladies Community League. A new name also ushers in new officers. They are Karen Kowaleski, President; Robbie Pettit, Vice-President; LaNora Miller, Treasurer; and Kara Kelley, Secretary. The League will continue the same caring commitment to the Village of Salado as an independent service organization separate from the Salado Chamber of Commerce.

"We have been under the umbrella of the Salado Chamber of Commerce since our inception and we've valued our relationship with the Chamber these many years," says President Karen Kowaleski. "The Chamber and our organization will still enjoy a collaborative relationship and we look forward to working together," Kowaleski continued.

"We would like to thank all those who participated in the Deck the Halls virtual auction which replaced Christmas in October as our major fund-raising activity in 2020. Because of your generosity, the organization raised over $5,000 to be given back to deserving groups in Salado."

The first meeting for 2021 took place Jan. 14 at the Salado Church of Christ. Pat Scarborough from Heart and Hands ministry gave the group an overview of Heart and Hands' mission to provide food and other necessary items to Salado families in need. Members of the League brought canned goods and monetary donations to the meeting.

The Salado Ladies Community League meets the second Thursday of each month, and the next meeting is scheduled for Feb. 11 at the Salado Church of Christ Activity Center, 217 N. Stagecoach Road. Refreshments and lively conversation are enjoyed from 9:30-10 a.m. at which time the scheduled meeting begins.

Membership is open to all those who value good fellowship and have a desire to support charitable, educational and social endeavors in Salado.

An Open Exchange of Ideas

December retail sales dip, employment continues down

The Markets

The collective intellect of the investors and traders who drive the day-to-day value of the S&P 500 Stock Index (SPX) looked at the totality of the data as the week drew to a close and appear to have concluded that things were not quite as rosy as they thought before. The Index promptly declined about 1.5% before bouncing back slightly then falling again to end the week down 1.48% at 3768.25. That decline still leaves it up just a bit, +0.32% year-to-date, and up over 13% from a year ago. The decline for the week and day came despite JPMorgan reporting a 42% rise in earnings for the quarter and other positive earnings news from the big banks. The news that turned the markets appeared to be a dramatic surge in new unemployment claims and December's reported fall in retail sales. See more below.

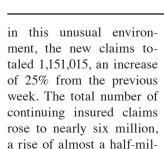

The yield on the 10-year U.S. Treasury note marked agreement with the stock market by declining about 2.6% to 1.091% but remained above the 1% mark, a figure it only crossed last week since the pandemic began. Meanwhile the longer-term T-bond yields inched closer to the pre-pandemic levels as the yield curve remained solidly positive, suggesting growing economic optimism for the longer-term. Oil too indicated a slightly muted optimism as West Texas Intermediate crude (WTI) slipped about 1% from last week's high to $52.18, only 11% below where it was a year ago.

The Economy

The unnerving headline for the week ending on January 15 was the Labor Department's report that initial filings for state unemployment insurance jumped to nearly one million. The official, seasonally adjusted figure was 965,000 but without the seasonal adjustment, which is questionable

Market & Economic Update

By Jeffrey W. McClure

That ongoing rise in new unemployment claims was reflected in consumer spending. The Labor Department reported that retail sales, a number that normally soars in December, instead declined 0.7%. That already less than delightful news was compounded deeper in the report with the news that control retail sales, which take out the more volatile energy and food categories, dropped 1.9%. That number is considered a reasonable proxy for the critical consumer spending report due out later this month.

The driving force behind the sag in employment and spending should come as no surprise. The seven-day average of COVID-19 hospitalizations nationally is at a new record of 130,340 and the daily death rate is now just under 4,000 according to the COVID Tracking Project. At the same time the daily new diagnosed cases also hit a record at just under 223 thousand. Every diagnosed case equates to a reduction in both income and spending. As more and more people know someone who has died or been hospitalized, the tendency to pull back increases.

The good news is that the vaccines are being produced and distributed so there is an end in sight. The not-so-good news is that the vaccination rate is running behind schedule and is more than a little chaotic in the absence of a central plan for distribution. It appears though that lessons learned and some forming organizational leadership may be turning the corner on that. Moody's Analytics is forecasting that with improved federal and state leadership we could reach "herd immunity", effectively stopping the virus' spread by September. For the first time we are seeing a respected organization estimate when this could be mostly over and a return to normal life begin in earnest.

The economic news was not all doom and gloom.

The Federal Reserve reported that U.S. industrial production rose 1.6% in December, the biggest gain since July. More importantly, manufacturing output rose 0.9% for the month, strongly suggesting that manufacturing, possibly the core if not the majority of our economy, is healthy and overcoming the restrictions imposed by the pandemic. The recovery in industrial production leaves us only down 2.8% from where we were before the pandemic, making it a nearly complete recovery. Also, during the week, the Institute for Supply Management (ISM) reported that in December American factory output grew at the fastest rate in more than two years.

The bottom line remains much the same. In the shortterm we should be prepared for some unpleasant economic news, but the end of this crisis is on the horizon as vaccinations rise. All indications are that on the other side of this pandemic a combination of deferred desires and ample cash will generate an exciting economic boom that well may be the opening scene for a decade of historic growth and innovation.

Don Trump's exile

It's a shame they didn't name one of the early social media entities Pandora, after the mythological woman who opened the box that released all kinds of trouble on humanity, a shame that the trademark was left for a music and podcast app later. The Facebooks and Twitters of this world are prime examples of a technology run amok. With the intention of providing a voice to every individual, it quickly became evident that not every individual should have that voice, that our worst instincts will inevitably spread and pollute the plan-

Look no further than Donald Trump, who turned this instrument into a cyber-demagoguery platform and stepped from it all the way to the highest office in the land. He clearly had no concept of how he would use his near omnipotence, other than for feeding his most unhinged narcissism.

But who decides who has access? If the institutional filters for ideas, like the media, have unfairly represented the rich and mighty's interests and infuriated everyone else, who's to say that a shameless, ignorant demagogue can't inspire the "regular folks" with simplistic and hateful promises using these internet soapboxes, particularly if this scaffolding is run by amoral technocrats?

Only after an entire Trump presidential term -as these profiteers lurched from one bad idea to another -- have they settled on their latest strategy to police misinformation to try to control the deranged plug on him ... silenced his voice in the final few days of his lying public presence. Twitter and Facebook chose to shut him down. In the case of unrestrained right wing Parler, Apple, Google and Amazon decreed that such mini sites would not be allowed to peddle their incitement. They'd simply be removed.

Suddenly, the president's bully pulpit had no bullhorn. His millions of supporters could only claim censorship. Of course it was censorship, opening another Pandora's box. In their case, they were scrambling to come up with another hightech way to construct a new misinformation highway.

Of course, their militants have another alternative: continued violence. In the few days remaining before Joe Biden's inauguration, they can regroup and launch their evil, deadly attacks now that they have a martyr to rally around: Donald Trump. But they and he have momentarily lost the element of surprise, which compromises the ability to coordinate their treason. But there is nothing magical about inauguration day, particularly since it's less likely that security forces will be as woefully unprepared as they were for the Capitol siege.

No. They can choose to wait and surreptitiously They simply pulled the arrange an operation another day. And it's likely these domestic terrorists will, with Trump as a grievance

Meanwhile, in spite of the argument that this lunatic commander in chief, with his constitutional potential to annihilate everything, needs to be removed immediately, an attempt to shut him down before Biden takes over is probably not workable. Instead, neutralize him somehow, and wait until he's a private citizen, unprotected from prosecution. If he pardons himself, fight it out in the courts.

The sad fact is that whichever legal strategy is chosen for recourse, it will keep him at the top of the news, which is what he craves. Perhaps some bargain with him is possible, where he agrees to make no chief executive decisions for the few days remaining, literally White House arrest. He would also have to accept that he'll never run for office again and be muzzled. If he violates the artfully drawn deal, the legal system can lower the boom.

It amounts to an exile in Mar-a-Lago, with visits from Rudy Giuliani so they can talk about the good old days of destroying the country. Maybe there could be occasional calls from his comrade Vladimir Putin.

That way Biden and his successors can clean up the rubble and repair the country -- in spite of the social

Twitter deranged our politics

Donald Trump was the president of Twitter.

What radio was to Franklin Delano Roosevelt and TV was to Ronald Reagan, communicating 280 characters at a time on a social media platform that is a watchword for hyperactive inanity was to President

It is symbolically appropriate that the effective end of his power after the siege of the U.S. Capitol has coincided with the suspension of his Twitter account.

He may well get impeached a second time, but for now, the punishment that really stings is Twitter CEO Jack Dorsey deciding after sitting down with his woke colleagues that Trump must pay the ultimate price for his post-election misinformation and agitation.

This judgment is as arbitrary as Dorsey's worst critics would expect, and it will be impossible for Twitter to enforce anything resembling a consistent line following its Trump suspension (the platform didn't seem particularly exercised by all of the voices valorizing last summer's riots as an "uprising").

But there's no doubting Dorsey's power. He has rendered the president of the United States practically

Trump remains in the Oval Office and, in theory, commands the biggest megaphone on the planet. He could still make statements, hold press conferences, sit down for interviews or meet with his cabinet. In his reduced and isolated state, though, none of these options are as appealing as letting his thumbs do his work for him, one outlandish tweet at

Now that this avenue is foreclosed to him, he's less of a presence, even as the political world continues to be obsessed with him (in particular, the manner of his exit from office).

It's not exactly a slow news environment. Yet, without Trump's tweets stirring the pot at all times of the day, the nation's political debate feels a little less fe-

Twitter is Exhibit A for Marshall McLuhan's axiom that the medium is the message. There is plenty of worthy news coverage and real-time commentary on Twitter. But that's not where the emotional center of gravity is, as one would expect of a platform built for instantaneous, unfiltered re-

It's this aspect of Twitter that perfectly matched the president's proclivities. He found a natural home in an environment that encourages, and often rewards, snap judgments, insults, soon-to-be-forgotten pronouncements, grotesque oversimplifications and the spread of false or dubious information.

Trump wasn't careful about what he said anywhere, but he reserved his most lurid and poisonous communications for Twitter. It was the place easiest for him to, for instance, absurdly accuse Morning Joe host Joe Scarborough of murder or insult the looks of his alleged paramour Stormy Daniels.

It was a symptom of his erratic, easily distracted, and thoughtless governing style that he used Twitter as a tool of his administration. He warned foreign leaders, fired officials and made pronouncements on legislation on Twitter, often leaving allies and his own government baffled by what was supposed the line between "just a tweet" and an official order by the president of the United States.

Twitter was an especially ready forum for airing conspiracy theories. Asked prior to the election about his giving credence to the lunatic idea that Navy SEAL Team 6 had been assassinated, Trump shrugged and said it was only a retweet. In the wake of his election defeat, his Twitter feed become a nonstop source of bad information dredged up from the worst corners of the internet.

If Trump was the foremost offender, Twitter hasn't done us any favors in this period of our national life. It has fed moral panics and enabled cancellation mobs. It has exposed journalists who once made a pretense of objectivity as rank partisans. It has enticed once serious people into crowd-pleasing clownishness. It has made politicians dumber and cruder. It has distorted political reality for people across the spectrum.

It, in short, has helped derange our politics, with the former Tweeter-in-Chief leading the way.

Methodists raise funds for Promise House

After a year of planning, Family Promise of East Bell County is days away from receiving two acres of land on which the organization will build its new facility, The Promise House.

At the beginning of 2020, the Family Promise Leadership began dreaming about how to serve families better; both quantitatively and qualitatively. While researching what other organizations have done around the country, Family Promise of East Bell County learned about a new model.

In this new model of work, volunteers from churches like Salado United Methodist Church come to serve the children and guest families at the new facility, The Promise House, where the families stay while in the program.

The Promise House will be approximately 6,500 square feet and include seven bedrooms with private bathrooms for guest families

In the past, the church rotational model only allowed four homeless families to be served at one time.

Churches in Bell County will continue to volunteer several times per year, but instead of transporting the children and parents who are homeless to and from the churches to the current center in East Temple, the families in the Family Promise's Guest Program will have more stability and less chaos while in the program. The Estimated cost of the Promise House is $1 million.

Phase two will include eight transitional houses, which families in the program can move into once they have completed the Guest Program. The transitional houses will serve as an interim stage for families who step into a higher level of independence while looking for a long-term housing solution.

While the estimated cost of the Promise House is $1 million, $400,000 of the funding goal has already been secured. A former Board Director and volunteer for Family Promise, has already pledged $400,000. Will you help as well? Your financial partnership will make the Promise House become reality.

"We are thrilled about the future and our increased ability to serve families who are homeless, empowering them on to a life of self-sustainability, ensuring that they do not become homeless again," said Rucker Preston, Executive Director of Family Promise of East Bell County.

While the new central site facility is in the coming future for Family Promise, the staff and volunteers continue to serve families with the core overnight program as well as other programs like financial literacy, homelessness prevention, and after care support, which includes a year of follow-up case management.

Local faces & places find themselves in Braun's novels

Local author and entrepreneur Carl Braun (C. Frederick Braun), has just published his eleventh book and seventh novel entitled Detective Trucker 3's and 8's—A Covid 19 Thriller. This is the second book in the series and it depicts numerous local landmarks and businesses.

"I love Georgetown and I adore the small artist community of Salado, where I have made knives with my buddy Bill Smith for nearly ten years. It only made sense to combine my knifemaking, knowledge of the trucking industry, and military into a package of intrigue, deception and hilarity using real, every day Americans. I know it's a strange combo but the books work, and many see them as a potential movie or television series,"

In Detective Trucker-Once a Cop...Always A Cop. Book 1. Beau Tucker retires from the Houston Police Department after being shot by a sniper, and starts driving a big rig again; something he did for years in the Army. Trouble is, he can't let the cop in him go. It starts with him trying to save young women from human trafficking, and devolves into a whirlwind of involvement in stopping Cartel drug smuggling, hijacking, and eventually a showdown with the Jersey wit. The book is hilarious, while at the same time placing a spotlight on the tragedy of drugs and human trafficking." Braun said.

"Beau is your classic Texan from his boots to his keen, and sometimes brash

In Detective Trucker 3 and 8's- A Covid 19 Thriller, Book 2. Braun views the first two weeks of the pandemic through the eyes of a man and his team who bear the responsibility for getting critical supplies to America's cities. There are devious and unscrupulous characters at work, and he takes them on like he always does: front and center with extreme prejudice. "Beau, christened Detective Trucker by his fellow drivers, is a classic American hero." Braun noted. "Like in my novel ISSA, I love to bring local landmarks, people, and businesses into my stories," he added.

Some notable businesses are 600 Degrees Pizza, Mesquite Creek Outfitters. Round Rock Donuts, Johnny's BBQ in Salado, BedrockJewels.com, the Georgetown Square, Blue Corn Harvest, and of course Bill Smith and JWS Custom Knives, a featured character in Detective Trucker books.

Previous books spotlight Tony and Luigi's, IHOP, The Sheraton and many more.

All of C. Frederick Braun's books are available on Amazon in digital or paperback formats.

One occasionally hears the term "free finesse" applied to a seemingly helpful lead made by an opponent, but sometimes there is a question as to whether or not the finesse is really free. It is easy to misapply the term, which is exactly what declarer did in this deal where he unnecessarily went down one.

West led his singleton club against South's five-spade contract. Acting under the impression that he was getting a free finesse, declarer played dummy's club to the king, hoping to find the suit divided 3-3 so that he could later discard a diamond on dummy's fourth club. But when West failed to follow to the second club, there was no way declarer could avoid losing a club and two diamonds for down one.

It might seem that South is sure to fail whatever he does, but actually he can make the contract with proper play. He should assume from the bidding and the opening lead that the eight of clubs is a singleton. No harm can come from making this assumption because if West has the queen of clubs, it can be trapped later on.

South should therefore play low from dummy at trick one and take the eight with the ace.

After ruffing two hearts in dummy and drawing trump, South then plays the ace and another diamond. The defenders can collect their two diamond tricks,

If West winds up on lead, he must return a heart or a diamond, allowing dummy to ruff as South discards his club loser. If East wins the third diamond, he must either yield a ruff-anddiscard or lead a club into dummy's K-J. The so-called free finesse at trick one turns out to be an illusion.

87th Legislative session opens amid virus, economic worries

SENATE NEWS SERVICE

It was a muted start to this year's legislative session in Austin Tuesday as lawmakers returned to tackle the biggest public health crisis in living memory and the economic downturn it caused. The normal raucous hallways and packed galleries of past opening days were replaced by quiet on a day usually filled with ceremony and celebration as the pandemic kept constituents and well-wishers at home. One day before, state Comptroller Glenn Hegar laid out his projected forecast for state revenue for the next two fiscal years, telling lawmakers how much they'll have to work with as they look to pay for state services over the upcoming Texas could see a robust biennium. "The pandemic, which resulted in steep declines in key sources of revenue in the later half of fiscal [year] 2020 and has continued to drag down collections in fiscal [year] 2021 wiped out a projective positive ending balance and has turned it into a currently projected deficit of nearly $1 billion," said Hegar.

Though COVID restrictions and a crash in the price of oil this spring led to concerns about a much larger budget deficit entering session, an increase in on-line sales tax collections as well as a stronger-than-expected economy coming into 2020 helped blunt the impact. Hegar told reporters that with the prospect of effective vaccine distribution, economic rebound in the second half of this calendar year. Additionally, reduced consumer spending during the pandemic led to increases in personal savings and reductions in personal debt, which could mean a strong recovery once the economy is fully reopened. "These and other factors suggest there may be capacity for a substantial surge in consumer spending once pandemic concerns have receded," said Hegar. In all, he projected state revenue collections through August 2023 to total $112.53 billion, slightly down from the amount available to state budget writers when they came into Austin last session. The revenue forecast doesn't include five percent across-the-board cuts requested by state leadership over the summer or any forthcoming federal aid packages.

In Austin, the COVID pandemic has reached new highs, with a record number of cases announced on Wednesday and hospital capacity reaching its limit. That meant a quiet opening day and new rules for COVID prevention in the Senate. Rules adopted Wednesday require Senators and staff to be tested daily for the virus. Members of the public who want to watch proceedings from the gallery or attend a committee hearing will also have to test negative for COVID. While not required to enter the Capitol building itself, testing is offered at no charge outside the north entrance of the Capitol. Those who test negative will get a wristband verifying that status, as will those who can demonstrate proof of vaccination against COVID.

Testing was required to enter the building on opening day Tuesday, and Lt. Governor Dan Patrick said it demonstrated that people understand the risks and the need to prevent the spread of the disease at the Capitol. "We had over 800 people tested and only one objected," he said. "The people know, if we want to have session, if we want to protect lives and life, if we want to conduct the people's business with the least restrictions, then testing is the answer." Patrick said he hoped that the Texas House would follow the Senate's lead, and called for testing anyone who wants to come into the Capitol building.

Other mitigation protocols approved this week would limit seating in the gallery, reduce staff levels on the Senate floor and require mask wearing in most public spaces under jurisdiction of the Senate. In the event of a positive test, a person is required to leave the Capitol complex and cannot return for at least 10 days.
