The Declaration of Independence

In Congress, July 4, 1776

The unanimous Declaration of the thirteen united States of America, When in the Course of human events, it becomes necessary for one people to dissolve the political bands which have connected them with another, and to assume among the powers of the earth, the separate and equal station to which the Laws of Nature and of Nature's God entitle them, a decent respect to the opinions of mankind requires that they should declare the causes which impel them to the separation.

We hold these truths to be self-evident, that all men are created equal, that they are endowed by their Creator with certain unalienable Rights, that among these are Life, Liberty and the pursuit of Happiness .-- That to secure these rights, Governments are instituted among Men, deriving their just powers from the consent of the governed, -- That whenever any Form of Government becomes destructive of these ends, it is the Right of the People to alter or to abolish it, and to institute new Government, laying its foundation on such principles and organizing its powers in such form, as to them shall seem most likely to effect their Safety and Happiness. Prudence, indeed, will dictate that Governments long established should not be changed for light and transient causes; and accordingly all experience hath shewn, that mankind are more disposed to suffer, while evils are sufferable, than to right themselves by abolishing the forms to which they are accustomed. But when a long train of abuses and usurpations, pursuing invariably the same Object evinces a design to reduce them under absolute Despotism, it is their right, it is their duty, to throw off such Government, and to provide new Guards for their future security.--Such has been the patient sufferance of these Colonies; and such is now the necessity which constrains them to alter their former Systems of Government. The history of the present King of Great Britain is a history of repeated injuries and usurpations, all having in direct object the establishment of an absolute Tyranny over these States. To prove this, let Facts be submitted to a candid world.

He has refused his Assent to Laws, the most wholesome and necessary for the public good.

He has forbidden his Governors to pass Laws of immediate and pressing importance, unless suspended in their operation till his Assent should be obtained; and when so suspended, he has utterly neglected to attend to them.

He has refused to pass other Laws for the accommodation of large districts of people, unless those people would relinquish the right of Representation in the Legislature, a right inestimable to them and formidable to tyrants only.

He has called together legislative bodies at places unusual, uncomfortable, and distant from the depository of their public Records, for the sole purpose of fatiguing them into compliance with his measures.

He has dissolved Representative Houses repeatedly, for opposing with manly firmness his invasions on the rights of the people.

He has refused for a long time, after such dissolutions, to cause others to be elected; whereby the Legislative powers, incapable of Annihilation, have returned to the People at large for their exercise; the State remaining in the mean time exposed to all the dangers of invasion from without, and convulsions within.

He has endeavoured to prevent the population of these States; for that purpose obstructing the Laws for Naturalization of Foreigners; refusing to pass others to encourage their migrations hither, and raising the conditions of new Appropriations of Lands.

He has obstructed the Administration of Justice, by refusing his Assent to Laws for establishing Judiciary powers.

He has made Judges dependent on his Will alone, for the tenure of their offices, and the amount and payment of their salaries.

He has erected a multitude of New Offices, and sent hither swarms of Officers to harrass our people, and eat out their substance.

He has kept among us, in times of peace, Standing Armies without the Consent of our legislatures. He has affected to render the Military independent of and superior to the Civil power.

He has combined with others to subject us to a jurisdiction foreign to our constitution, and unacknowledged by our laws; giving his Assent to their Acts of pretended Legislation: For Quartering large bodies of armed troops among us:

For protecting them, by a mock Trial, from punishment for any Murders which they should commit on the Inhabitants of these States:

For cutting off our Trade with all parts of the world:

For imposing Taxes on us without our Consent:

For depriving us in many cases, of the benefits of Trial by Jury: For transporting us beyond Seas to be tried for pretended offences

For abolishing the free System of English Laws in a neighbouring Province, establishing therein an Arbitrary government, and enlarging its Boundaries so as to render it at once an example and fit instrument for introducing the same absolute rule into these Colonies:

For taking away our Charters, abolishing our most valuable Laws, and altering fundamentally the Forms of our Governments:

For suspending our own Legislatures, and declaring themselves invested with power to legislate for us in all cases whatsoever.

He has abdicated Government here, by declaring us out of his Protection and waging War against us. He has plundered our seas, ravaged our Coasts, burnt our towns, and destroyed the lives of our people.

He is at this time transporting large Armies of foreign Mercenaries to compleat the works of death, desolation and tyranny, already begun with circumstances of Cruelty & perfidy scarcely paralleled in the most barbarous ages, and totally unworthy the Head of a civilized nation. He has constrained our fellow Citizens taken Captive on the high Seas to bear Arms against their Country, to become the executioners of their friends and Brethren, or to fall themselves by their Hands. He has excited domestic insurrections amongst us, and has endeavoured to bring on the inhabitants of our frontiers, the merciless Indian Savages, whose known rule of warfare, is an undistinguished destruction of all ages, sexes and conditions.

In every stage of these Oppressions We have Petitioned for Redress in the most humble terms: Our repeated Petitions have been answered only by repeated injury. A Prince whose character is thus marked by every act which may define a Tyrant, is unfit to be the ruler of a free people. Nor have We been wanting in attentions to our Brittish brethren. We have warned them from time to time of attempts by their legislature to extend an unwarrantable jurisdiction over us. We have reminded them of the circumstances of our emigration and settlement here. We have appealed to their native justice and magnanimity, and we have conjured them by the ties of our common kindred to disavow these usurpations, which, would inevitably interrupt our connections and correspondence. They too have been deaf to the voice of justice and of consanguinity.

We must, therefore, acquiesce in the necessity, which denounces our Separation, and hold them, as we hold the rest of mankind, Enemies in War, in Peace Friends. We, therefore, the Representatives of the united States of America, in General Congress, Assembled, appealing to the Supreme Judge of the world for the rectitude of our intentions, do, in the Name, and by Authority of the good People of these Colonies, solemnly publish and declare, That these United Colonies are, and of Right ought to be Free and Independent States; that they are Absolved from all Allegiance to the British Crown, and that all political connection between them and the State of Great Britain, is and ought to be totally dissolved; and that as Free and Independent States, they have full Power to levy War, conclude Peace, contract Alliances, establish Commerce, and to do all other Acts and Things which Independent States may of right do. And for the support of this Declaration, with a firm reliance on the protection of divine Providence, we mutually pledge to each other our Lives, our Fortunes and our sacred

An Open Exchange of Ideas Refining capacity wanes with more electric cars

The S&P 500 Stock Inour preferred if flawed indicator of the state of the U.S. stock markets, turned in a delightful week, ratcheting upward every day to end the week at 3911.74, a rise of 6.45%. It has now reduced its loss this year to 17.93% and from last year at this time to 8.62%. It also bumped up the three-year average annual return of the Index to 10.32% Interestingly enough, the rises came in a week Chairman Powell of the Federal Reserve, acknowledged before Congressional committees that a recession might be created by the Fed's aggressive interest rate increases but that he was determined to crush inflation. The other index we follow, the CRSP Mid-Cap Value Index, was up 4.87% for the week to 2279.04, reducing its loss this year to 12.25% and 6.97% from this time last year. Does this mark the bottom of the bear market? Based on historical investor behavior, probably not, but the future is always an unknown.

The yield on the U.S. 10year Treasury note first rose to about 3.3% mid-week, then slid downward to close the week at 3.135%. The Treasury yield curve held its positive slope with the 30-year bond at 3.265% and the 2-year note at 3.063%. Happily, the price of West Texas Intermediate crude oil also moved downward to $107.53, $13 cheaper than it was a couple of weeks ago. The Economy

There was plenty of new news about the economy for the week, but the focus remained on inflation, interest rates, and the probability of a recession. The Conference Board's Index of Leading Economic Indicators (LEI) fell by 0.4% in May to 118.3 and is now down 0.4% for the trailing six months but remains up about 3% for the trailing one-year period. The Index remains near a historic high but is now suggesting that economic growth will be slower in the near term. The key takeaway is that the Index is still not indicating a recession on the horizon. Historically, the LEI needs to be below where it was a year ago for at least two months to forecast a recession.

Market & Economic Update

By Jeffrey W. McClure

The indicators that the LEI tracks do suggest that U.S. economic growth probably has peaked and will be less robust than it has been over the last year. That is exactly what the Federal Reserve wants to see. Chairman Powell in his testimony before congressional committees repeated that the goal of the Fed was to bring inflation back down to around 2% but to do so if possible, without causing a severe recession. In his terms, a "softish" landing. On Friday, Moody's reported new home sales were running at a seasonally adjusted annualized rate of 696,000. While that is a bit higher than April, it is well below the 839,000 rate we saw six months ago and down 6% from a year earlier. Their survey of builders suggests that prices are no longer rising at double-digit rates and may level off for the year. Moody's suggested that in some areas of the United States as much as a 15% reduction in home prices may be seen over the next year or so as mortgage rates

In another report, initial jobless claims held steady at 229,000, a number that sounds high but is suggestive of a rapidly growing economy. The number to watch for is 250,000 because at that jobless rate the job-growth in the United States will be in neutral. Anecdotally, some businesses have announced hiring freezes, another indication that growth is slowing.

Surveys of small busiand individuals have indicated a substantial decline in both business confidence and consumer confidence. We take those surveys with a grain of salt as both consumers and business owners commonly report a drop in future economic expectations but continue to spend money as though the future is going to be better than the present. Small businesses, despite increasingly negative surveys, are continuing to hire new employees, a strong indicator they do not believe a slowdown is in the works. All indications suggest that they are indeed still spending vigorously.

The price of gasoline is unlikely to fall by much, if at all, as the summer progresses. The culprit appears to be refinery capacity. Investors and major oil companies are hesitant to spend large sums on new or improved refineries in the face of a predicted shift to electric vehicles. Meanwhile, as Russian petroleum is reduced or eliminated in Europe, drivers there are willing to pay top dollar for fuel and, as a result, are in direct competition with drivers here in the

The bottom line has not changed much. The U.S. economy is still on a tear although signs of moderation are beginning to appear. Inflation is still a threat, although we can take cold comfort in knowing that on the other side of the Atlantic it appears to be worse even as the Europeans face a very high probability of a recession soon. We remain technically in a bear market for stocks and a serious bear market for bonds, but like the economy, that may also be moderating.

Protecting us against the Putin Playbook

As we gather to celebrate Independence Day, it's a good time to reflect on how our most fundamental freedoms have served this nation well.

It's an even better time to think about what would happen if those liberties were taken away.

Sadly, the latter doesn't take much imagination in 2022. Your closest video screen will show you scenes of Russian troops pummeling Ukraine with the support of a majority of the Russian people.

The Russian public has been told that their country is doing noble work ferreting out "Nazis" and that the West is engaged in its usual persecution of Russia and its people. Surveys say most Russians believe it.

In times of war, people always want to see their government as the good guys, but it's still a little hard to grasp how that many people can be so thoroughly misled.

That's the power of the Vladimir Putin playbook. The Russian president quickly and with little opposition eliminated the freedoms of speech and press.

First, Putin bandied around allegations of "fake news," undermining domestic news media that had far more latitude than their Soviet Union counterparts.

Then he coordinated a plan with the national legislature to pass a law imprisoning those who "lied" about the war, including even calling it a war. Russian media of integrity had to close up shop, and international journalists in Russia had to temper their reporting.

That left the internet as the one avenue for Russians to learn the truth about their country's misdeeds. Putin then banned social media outlets and sharply limited access to international news

In short order, the Russian people were isolated, left to believe the lies of their government.

It took just weeks for Putin to wipe out freedoms of press, speech and dissent.

Could anything like that ever happen in the United States? As unlikely as it may seem, there are some areas of concern.

After all, over the past 60 years, certain presidents from both parties have been known to mislead the public about the purpose and progress of wars. And the use of "fake news" claims to evade responsibility began with politicians in this country, only to be adopted by totalitarian leaders around the globe.

Today there are active efforts to overturn New York Times v. Sullivan, the 1964 Supreme Court decision that made investigative reporting viable in the United States. And there are many politicians, again of both parties, who want to control how private social media companies are run.

Do I believe that America could fall victim to something resembling the Putin playbook? No. But it's also no longer unthinkable.

It's not a coincidence that the first step wouldbe dictators take is to shut down the press. That eliminates questions and accountability, both of which are anathema to those who abuse power.

There are some today who choose not to be informed, saying the media are biased. Well, there are tens of thousands of media outlets in this country, including manipulative cable channels, partisan sites that masquerade as news providers and those sites that would entice us with clickbait. But there are also many core news organizations of integrity, including The New York Times, Wall Street Journal, PBS and the very newspaper you're reading right now. They're the ones we need to support with readership and subscriptions.

From the very beginning of this nation, Americans understood the importance of a free press aggressively reporting on people in power. In an era when newspapers were fiercely partisan and unfair, that first generation of citizens still insisted on journalists being protected by the First Amend-

That shouldn't surprise us. After all, the model was right there in 1776 in the document we celebrate this

The Declaration of Independence called out King George III, reporting a list of injustices perpetrated by the mother country against its colonies. We had "unalienable rights," it said, and they were being violated. Americans were no longer going to put up with this "long train of abuses and usurpations."

That is the same spirit with which America's free press has exercised its duties since 1791. Abolitionist newspapers took on slavery, suffragist papers focused on injustices against women and news organizations spanning centuries have reported on scandals, corruption and racial injustice.

We live in a highly polarized time, when it's easy to dismiss the views of those with whom we disagree and deride those who publish the facts we don't want to acknowledge.

We have to take care, though, that our internal political wars don't turn us away from the core principles contained in the Declaration of Independence.

We remain a free people and need to be vigilant in protecting our rights and documenting the abuses in people in power, not just when the other guy's party is in office. That's the real spirit of '76.

Time for Congress to pass Judiciary Act

Right now, the right to abortion care is at risk because of a deliberate, decades-long takeover of the Supreme Court by powerful right-wing extremists. We're seeing the culmination of this takeover as the Court just overturned Roe v. Wade, the landmark ruling that made abortion access a constitutional right. This opens the door for states to outlaw abortion and take us back to a time when women were forced to go through with an unwanted pregnancy, potentially endangering their health and hurting their ability to provide for their families.

Letters to the Editor

But it's possible to undo this damage. The Judiciary Act would add four seats, restoring balance to the Supreme Court. It's the solution that recent polling showed is supported by the majority of Americans, and it's what we need to move away from partisan rulings that dismantle our rights and freedoms. And it's been done before. In fact, Congress has changed the size of the Supreme Court seven times already in our nation's history. It's time to do it again.

I'm urging Congress to pass the Judiciary Act of 2021 to ensure we protect our fundamental freedoms and restore balance to our courts now.

Margarita Pineiro Killeen, TX

Salado Museum hosts exhibit: 'The Blessing of Liberty: The U.S. Constitution' in July

Salado Museum and College Park presents The Blessings of Liberty: The U.S. Constitution, a National Endowment for the Humanities traveling exhibit, on display July 1 through July 29 in the museum meeting hall at 423 South Main in Salado. The exhibit, prepared for travel by Humanities Texas, is open to the public free of charge.

Developed by a national consortium of scholars and institutions, The Blessings of Liberty consists of twelve poster panels addressing the transformation of the United States from a group of colonies to a nation founded upon and united by a single document, the U.S. Consti-

Written to "secure the blessings of liberty to ourselves and our posterity," the Constitution is short, simple, and often ambiguous. As the blueprint for our nation's government, it represents a set of beliefs and a way of life. The exhibit seeks to explain the immense importance of a document that holds answers to challenging questions of government, cryptic though it may seem.

County amends Drought Disaster Declaration to allow some fireworks

On Tuesday, June 28, following an evening of rainfall, Judge David Blackburn released a statement, amending the Drought Disaster Declaration to authorize the sale and use of some fireworks from July 1 through July 4.

"The overnight rains we experienced across the County, bringing up to 3 inches in some parts of the County, have mitigated against the fire dangers that we have been seeing," Judge Blackburn said. "The Keetch-Byram Drought Index (KBDI) rating dropped almost 60 points to 560.23, taking the County out of the highest danger range on the index."

Blackburn also pointed to the recent rainfall's impact on wildfires. The county has seen no such fires since the precipitation, a noted drop from daily average of five such fires that have been taken place recently.

"To be sure, we are not out of the drought, and, no doubt, without more rain we will see the fire danger go back up and wildfires return," Judge Blackburn said, "but the recent rains have brought some short-term relief...relief that should allow the prudent use of fireworks to occur."

Blackburn emphasized the importance of personal responsibility when it came to individuals planning to use fireworks over the holiday. "We still need everyone to exercise extreme caution when it comes to anything that can be an ignitor," Judge Blackburn said. "Please continue to be very cautious and prudent as you enjoy the 4th of July."

The amendment declares that "the sale and use of fireworks between July 1 and July 4, 2022, is hereby allowed, save and except the sale of stick rockets and missiles with fins or rudders which are prohibited.

Violations of this declaration, either through the sale or use of prohibited fireworks, is an offense punishable by a fine of up to $1,000 or confinement in jail for a term that does not exceed 180 days.

Fourth of July Pot Luck at SHS

The community is invited to the annual Salado Historical Society Fourth of July Pot Luck held at the Salado High School cafeteria at noon July 4.

The Society will provide fried chicken and drinks (tea and water). Attendees are encouraged to bring side dishes for all to enjoy.

Library catalogs Robertson collection

Working in collaboration, the Salado Public Library and the Salado Museum and College Park, formerly known as Central Texas Area Museum, have preserved state and area history books collected for more than 40 years by the museum and Sterling Ambrose's family, the Robertsons.

The Salado Museum and College Park Collection, dedicated recently at the library, was donated by Ambrose after the museum closed its own library in 2017. His donation was contingent on the books being kept together as a collection.

The Salado Public Library accepted the challenge, however, it took several years to catalogue the collection's 675 fiction and non-fiction books, some of which are rare and out of print, and to list the titles on the library website.

At the dedication, Ambrose spoke of his mother and grandmother's love of history and how pleased they would be that the collection is now accessible to scholars, writers, researchers and history buffs. Salado Historical Society President Bill Kinnison, who recently retired from the library board of trustees and moved the historical books to storage and then to the library, thanked Ambrose for his forethought in "realizing the importance of preserving this collection."

Salado Public Library Director Jeanie Lively thanked Rachel Gerik, Pat Hart, Susan Starnes, Emmy Alvarez, Julie Hoy, Elizabeth Lively, and June Lubowinski for organizing the collection and preparing a special section for it.

Each book can be found in the library's online catalog at https://salado.bib

Drought & Trees explained

Not even through June and Texas has already seen extreme heat and very little rain this summer, with the trend predicted to continue. The anticipation of drought can bring many thoughts to mind from water shortages to increased wildfire risk, but what do drought conditions mean for our trees?

Drought is defined by a relatively long duration with substantially below-normal precipitation, usually occurring over a large area, and Texas is no stranger to drought. According to the US Drought Monitor, in 2011 more than 80% of Texas experienced exceptional drought conditions. This drought killed an estimated 300 million trees, 5.6 million being urban shade trees.

According to experts at Texas A&M Forest Service, tree fatalities occur during a drought because drought is a significant stress to trees.

Drought alone may not kill your trees, though it could be the tipping domino of tree mortality and should be cause for concern.

Secondary pests and diseases are those that attack a tree that is already stressed by something else, such as a drought or a winter storm. Hypoxylon and most boring insects are considered secondary pests and diseases - with the exception of the Emerald Ash Borer, which attacks both healthy and stressed ash trees.

Drought-stressed trees

So, what happens to trees during a drought? Ultimately, the lack of water causes trees to photosynthesize less, or make less food, which leads to a lack of nutrients needed to survive.

"Plants generate their own food though photosynthesis and one of the key components of photosynthesis is water," said Karl Flocke, Texas A&M Forest Service Woodland Ecologist. "Water is necessary for the chemical reactions that create sugars, it's also necessary to help move the needed materials around in the tree and finally, to utilize those materials."

Just because leaves begin to fall from your tree, does not mean the tree is dead though. For small trees, you can simply use your thumb nail and scrape some of the smaller twigs – if there is still green underneath, then the tree is not dead. Within a few weeks, it may leaf back out. If you are concerned your tree is dead, contact a certified arborist for a professional opinion.

Reducing tree stress

The most helpful way to reduce stress to your tree during drought conditions is to give supplemental water – though the amount and how often you water will depend on your specific tree and area.

If you begin to see signs of stress in your trees and the ground under your trees is extremely dry, it's time to begin watering. To test the dryness of the soil, you can take a long screwdriver and stick it in the ground. If the screwdriver doesn't go easily six to eight inches into the soil, it's time to water.

Watering can be done with a water hose, soaker hose, sprinkler or bucket – each way being efficient so long as the tree is getting the water it needs. A good guideline for the amount of water your tree needs is two to three gallons per one inch trunk diameter.

According to Courtney
Blevins, Texas A&M Forest Service Urban Forester, a general rule of thumb for newly planted trees during the heat of the summer is to water them up to three times per week, in the absence of precipitation. Though, you want to make sure the soil is not completely saturated with water at all times.

Larger, established trees may not need much water at all but extremely high temperatures and lack of precipitation may warrant watering them every couple of weeks.

When watering your trees, adhere to any water use restrictions you may have in your area and try to maximize the water you do give.

An easy tip for watering trees during a drought is to try and mimic what a typical summer looks like for your trees, watering every 10 days to two weeks and knowing that it's okay to not be on a set schedule – just like normal summer rain.

Another way you can help your trees manage drought stress is by mulching. Mulch is an easy and inexpensive option to help your trees because it conserves water, regulates soil temperatures, reduces competition from other plants and improves soil health.

Avoiding tree stress

During times of drought, be extremely cautious not to add additional stresses to your tree, making them more susceptible to secondary insects and diseases. First, do not prune your trees unless absolutely necessary.

According to Blevins, the exception to pruning trees during drought is a completely dead branch or one that is a hazard to its surroundings.

Another common mistake that can be harmful to your trees during a drought is putting out fertilizer.

"Just generally applying fertilizers without knowing if there is a deficiency is a really bad idea," said Blevins. "If there is not a nutrient deficiency then it's not going to help anything and it can actually hurt things and make the tree worse."

Salado Church of Christ

Come find out why our church family is driven by the same purpose Jesus gave to all his disciples – to love God completely, to love our neighbors

(as we love ourselves), and to serve all the above.
You are always welcome!

Salado Legends actors portray Salado College principal, teacher

By Beth Correa TABLEROCK FESTIVAL

Salado Legends weaves the story of the founding of Salado with the establishment of Salado College and features two historical characters: Ms. Willingham, a school teacher at Salado College, and Levi Tenney, the first principal of the Salado College.

Megan Combs will appear on state as Ms. Will-

Combs is 21 years old and in her 12th year in Salado Legends. All of her siblings have participated at one time or another. Being from a very large family, her father, Robert, was the first to join Legends and he brought all 9 of his children in with him. Megan was only a year old when she started and would often be backstage entertaining the

At the age of 10 she began acting in Legends. She has played many roles from a school child, to teenager, and finally teacher.

Most of the other characters' lines she memorized from the many years of participating in Legends. Since she began, even more of her family has joined from inlaws to nieces and nephews.

Megan said, "Everyone loves the atmosphere and theater at Tablerock."

And it is evident when you watch her and her family members volunteer and show up to the workdays, rehearsals and shows with excitement and joy. Megan has been attending Central Texas College and has been accepted into the Fall Nursand kind demeanor, we know she will be successful in any career she chooses!

Jimbo Moore will appear as Mr. Levi Tenney, the school principal at Salado College. as Mr. Tenney

Moore is only in his second year at Salado Legends but certainly seems like he has spent much more time, as his role as Mr. Tenney is played out so well.

If you haven't seen him in "A Christmas Carol," you have missed a good one. Jimbo's talent is natural and solid. Aside from his fabulous ability to act, Jimbo has a heart of gold and can outwit the best of them with his delightful humor. He is married to an equally talented lady, Tonja Moore. He has grown children and even some tiny grands that he and Tonja thoroughly enjoy!

These photos were tak and Ms. Willingham may have had moments of teaching and conversing with each other as these pictures portray.

Come and see the 29th production of Salado Legends July 23 and 30 and August 6.

A catered dinner will be served to those with dinner tickets at 7:15 p.m. with seating at Tablerock picnic tables under the shaded trees at the Tablerock Trail next to the amphitheater.

Dinner Tickets are $13 per person and advance purchase with reservation is required 24 hours in advance through CentralTexasTickets.com.

Show Tickets are $25 for adults, $10 for students with ID, and $5 for children 12 and younger and can be purchased through Central-TexasTickets.com or can be bought at the gate before showtime at 8:15 p.m.

Briana Siggins of Salado Earns Degree from UMGC

ADELPHI, (06/24/2022)-- Briana Siggins of Salado earned a Bachelor of Science in Business Administration from University of Maryland Global Campus.

Worldwide, more than 13,600 graduates from all 50 states and the District of Columbia, as well as 32 countries and U.S. territories, earned UMGC degrees during the 2021-22 academic year.

Celebrating its 75th anniversary, University of Maryland Global Campus (UMGC) was established in 1947 to serve adults in the workforce. Today, UMGC enrolls some 90,000 students annually, offering bachelor's, master's, and doctoral degree programs, as well as certificates in more than 125 fully online, UMGC has a long history of innovation in reaching students where they are, including as a pioneer of internet instruction, piloting its first online classes in 1994. The university has received numerous awards for its groundbreaking work in developing fully online degree programs, including in high-demand fields such as cybersecurity, business, data analytics, health care and education.

UMGC now classes to military service personnel and their families at more than 180 locations in more than 20 countries. More than half of the university's students are activeduty military personnel, their families, members of the National Guard and vet-

TSTC offers flexible programs in tech

This fall, Texas State Technical College's Computer Networking and Systems Administration, Cybersecurity, and Drafting and Design programs will offer students the choice to complete their training either fully online or in a format that combines online learning with in-person lab time -- opportunities that have not been available in these programs since before the pandemic.

Computer Networking and Systems Administration students who enroll in the in-person/online learning format can look forward to getting their hands on network cables, servers, and Cisco routers and switches in the lab, TSTC instructor Renee Blackshear said.

"It will be industry-level engagement," she said. "We also get to work with students on their soft skills and shells."

Students have the power to select flexible lab times based on their schedules, with the added benefit of connecting with instructors who offer real-world advice and experience.

TSTC offers an Associate of Applied Science degree, certificates of completion and an occupational skills award in Computer Networking and Systems Administration, as well as an advanced technology certificate in Cloud Computing.

In Texas, computer network support specialists can earn an average annual salary of $62,280, according to onetonline.org, which forecasts that the number of these positions will grow 17% in the state through 2028.

TSTC Cybersecurity instructor Norma Colunga-Hernandez has also missed day-to-day and face-to-face interactions with students. She hopes that the in-person/online format of training will help to reestablish a campus cybersecurity club.

Colunga-Hernandez highly encourages students who are new to the Cybersecurity program to choose the in-person/online format, especially in their initial se-

Ideally, having Cybersecurity instructors in labs will help students advance, Colunga-Hernandez added. "We can watch over their shoulder and see if they're and progress better." TSTC offers an Associate of Applied Science degree, certificates of completion and occupational skills awards in Cybersecurity -- plus an advanced technology certificate in Digital Forensics Specialist.

Information security engineers can earn an average annual salary of $84,220 in Texas, according to onetonline.org. The number of these positions is forecast to grow by 20% throughout the state by 2028, the web-

Whether TSTC Drafting and Design students are pursuing degrees in Arhelp pull them out of their chitectural/Civil Drafting Technology or Engineering Graphics and Design Technology -- or a blend of both in Architectural Design and Engineering Graphics Technology, they will be able to get access to industry-level tools and equipment when they take advantage of the in-person/online format.

> That includes CAD stations, gaming-level laptops, plotters, laser printers and traditional drafting tables. "It's going to benefit students in several ways," TSTC instructor Bryan Clark said. "They're going to have a place they can come to. They're not going to have to buy a computer and source a space in their house and hope everyone is quiet so they can get their work done. There will be a seat available for them and a qualified instructor to answer any questions."

> TSTC instructor Corby Myers agreed, citing the industry experience that instructors can share with their students.

> "To me, the biggest benefit to students is when they walk into the lab, there will be two instructors who have spent years in the industry doing the job that we are preparing them to do," he

Congratulations to Salado High School students Netanel Eldridge and Ian Ibarra for their success during the Cybersecurity Camp at Texas A&M University - Central Texas in Killeen earlier this month. They won first place for their final project and presentation regarding the benefits of using biometric systems in cybersecurity!

Saladoans among UMHB Spring Commencement

The University of Mary Hardin-Baylor held commencement services for the Spring 2022 semester on Saturday, May 7 at Crusader Stadium. This was the university's 166th graduating class. There were 403 confirmed graduates.

UMHB President Dr. Randy O'Rear commended students for their dedication and determination to finish their degrees and celebrated the accomplishments of the class of 2022.

Graduates from Salado receiving Bachelor Degrees were Amanda Isabel Franks - BS - Biology Pre-Med and Haley Catherine Lum -BSN - Nursing.

Graduate from Salado receiving a Master's Degree was Dana Denise Hildebrand - MA - Clinical Mental Health Counseling.

"It is great to be together in Crusader Stadium surrounded by the family members and friends who have encouraged these graduates," he said. "Class of 2022, 63 of you are the first in your family to graduate from college. 190 of you only took 3 years to graduate, and 24 of you are graduating with a perfect 4.0. The youngest members of your class, there are two of you. are 19 years old, and the oldest member of your class is 62 years young."

The United States scored the most lopsided victory in the 70-year history of the Bermuda Bowl, routing Brazil 506-288 in the final of the 2000 world team championship. The margin (in International Match Points) and the winning team's IMP total were both records for the event.

The 16-day competition, which started with 20 teams, came down to a showdown between the U.S. squad, composed of Bob Hamman,

Texas hay season looks bleak

Texas Crop and Weather Report – June 22, 2022 WRITTEN BY: ADAM RUSSELL

The 2022 Texas hay production outlook appears in doubt due to high fertilizer prices and widespread drought, said Texas A&M AgriLife Extension Service experts.

Joe Paschal, Ph.D., AgriLife Extension livestock specialist, Corpus Christi, and Vanessa Corriher-Olson, Ph.D., AgriLife Extension forage specialist, Overton, said dry weather, high temperatures and reduced inputs like fertilizer have inhibited warm-season grass production across much of Texas. Hay quantity and quality are down, while the cost to produce bales is up, and weather forecasts do not look favorable.

Pockets of the state have received decent moisture, they said, but high fertilizer prices have discouraged hay producers from making applications. As a result, hay baled was expected to be of lower quality.

Paschal said prices for supplemental feed like range cubes and hay have continued to increase. Range cubes reached $400 per ton, while round bales were starting to fetch $75-$80. For weeks, AgriLife Extension agents have reported $80-plus bales in extremely dry areas of the state.

Some cattle producers around the state have been culling their herds deeper to reduce stocking rates and "mouths to feed," Paschal said. But many more face declining grazing, tightening hay supplies and below-average bale production this season.

"People are baling, but it looks like this hay season could be one cutting, maybe two," he said. "There is hay being fed now, so the hay situation could be tough."

Avoid overstocking as forage conditions decline

Paschal said hay production and grazing conditions were spotty and mirror scattered rainfall in south Central Texas from Del Rio to Kerrville and east of Corpus Christi back to the Rio Grande River. Some pockets have reported 4-7 inches, but much of that area had not received any rainfall since last fall.

Most of East Texas is experiencing abnormally dry to moderate drought conditions, according to the drought monitor map of Texas produced by the National Drought Mitigation Center at the University of Nebraska. Areas in south Central Texas were showing mostly severe and exceptional drought conditions, which translates into major to exceptional crop and pasture loss and widespread water shortages and restric-

Grasses and crop growth are stunted under abnormally dry conditions, and damages begin to show as moderate drought sets in, according to the center. Extremely high temperatures are exacerbating the moisture deficit for plants, including pasture grasses.

Corriber-Olson said weather outlooks suggest Texas will slip further into the drought. Weather systems during hurricane season could change that, but producers with grazing should be implementing contingency plans if they have not already.

"I really don't have a feel for how many producers are adjusting their grazing management as a result of drought and high fertilizer prices," she said. "It gets harder to avoid overstocking when forage production is limited. But it puts a lot of producers in a really tight spot when they don't have the hay or grazing to try and maintain their herd."

Plan for tight supplies, test hay

Both Corriber-Olson and Paschal expect hay supplies to be tight and low quality going into winter if conditions do not reverse soon.

Drought and fertilization – each of those factors alone can put a dent in hay production, Corriber-Olson said, but both at the same time can be disastrous for both quality and yields. High temperatures also increase Bermuda grass's fiber content, making it less digestible for cattle.

Fertilizer prices have softened some, Corriher-Olson said, and producers could potentially fertilize ahead of a promising storm system that might provide moisture for a cutting. But cuttings are best at the beginning and end of the season when temperatures begin to decline.

One East Texas producer she talked to is forgoing fertilization this summer to invest input costs into cool-season forage production, she said.

Corriher-Olson said producers should be making decisions regarding stockpiled forages and hay supplies with an expectation of very high bale prices, especially for quality hay, just to cover the cost of fertilizer, pesticide and herbicide applications and diesel.

Paschal said producers should be planning for ways to stretch available nutrition - whether that is finding alternative feed like cotton seed, purchasing failed corn crops or using supplemental feeds with a limiter to reduce the number of trips to feed.

Hay production conditions are better in states east of Texas, he said, and bales

Texas or cattle are expected to be moved to better pastures. He suggests cattle producers test bales for their nutritional value, whether purchased or produced. Tests can provide information that will better guide cattle supplementation, improving the digestibility and nutritional value of that hay.

Producers can reach out to AgriLife Extension agriculture agents in their county for assistance with hay testing, Paschal said.

"It's going to be tough," he said. "There is a lot of hay cows will eat when there is nothing else, but it doesn't mean it is good. There are ways to stretch a cow's nutritional needs, but the bottom line is getting the right amount of protein and energy in her."

AgriLife Extension district reporters compiled the following summaries:

A map of the 12 Texas A&M AgriLife Extension districts. CENTRAL

The district experienced record-high temperatures and no rainfall. Most areas reported short moisture conditions. Dry conditions were dominating the area, and crop conditions were declining. Drought-stressed corn was maturing very rapidly. Expectations for corn were not good due to the 100-degree days and drought at tasseling/silking stages. Farmers finished oat and wheat harvests and were baling hay. Sorghum was coloring, and cotton was flowering. Stock tank levels were quickly declining. Pastures were in poor to very poor condition. Livestock were in fair condition.
