By TIM FLEISCHER
EDITOR-IN-CHIEF

Southland Marketing and Development, Inc. marketed and conducted a one-day Land Sale for a 1,000+ acre development off of FM 2843 just west of Mustang Creek Ranch on property formerly owned by Double B Wildlife Ranch.

Southland brought potential buyers from as far away as California to purchase 2.5 acre lots for as low as $49,900 and creek-front (Mustang Creek) estate lots marketed at $139,900 (<https://landsales.southland-grp.com/texaslandsale>).

The Village of Salado got a couple of calls about Salado after the initial out-of-state marketing campaign by Southland launched, prior to the one-day land sale.

On the morning of Oct. 15, two large tents were set up on the old Tyler house property to welcome the potential buyers who had to book appointments through the website or by calling Southland at 877-717-5263.

Large off-premise signs were placed around the Village on Main St. and the interstate access roads, which the Village directed the company to take down because they were in conflict with the sign ordinance.

Potential buyers were taken out to the property by customer representatives to view the property, which included a 6,142 sq. ft. residence which may be the “luxurious clubhouse with guest suites, pool, fitness room, hot tub and relaxing lounges both indoor and out” marketed on the website. The website also promotes a 14-acre park and lake on the property.

The marketing website also states that the development includes “underground power and water with a beautiful Boulevard entrance for easy access.”

At the one-day Land Sale, customer representatives took reservation payments of 20% on proposed lots until the subdivision is platted, water supply issues resolved and infrastructure completed.

No concept design or plat has been submitted to the Village of Salado. The property is in the extra-territorial jurisdiction of the Village of Salado and any proposed subdivision would have to be approved by the Village of Salado.

The marketing material on the development says that it will have community water, rather than each owner drilling their own water wells like those at Hidden Springs

The property sits in the Certificate of Convenience and Necessity (CCN) of the City of Georgetown, which took over the now-defunct Chisholm Trail Special Utility District. Phone calls and emails to the utility department at Georgetown were made by Salado Village Voice with no response.

If the subdivision cannot be served by the City of Georgetown, the developer will have to form its own water service provider after being released from the CCN of Georgetown.

That water service provider will have to apply for a permit for a large well from the Clearwater Underground Water Conservation District (CUWCD).

The property is owned by Mor-Maur Mustang, LLC.

On June 7, Mor-Maur Mustang, LLC purchased three parcels totaling 1,105 acres from Double B Wildlife Ranch. Mor-Maur Mustang, LLC principal is James Kerby, a well-known Austin-area developer.

Kerby is a central Texas developer whose projects have centered around golf course communities in the Austin lakes region.

Among Kerby’s developments are these:

- Bayplace, a 750-acre development at Horseshoe Bay that included an 18-hole golf course (partnering with Douglas Jaffe and Russell Parker) in the early 2000s.

- Flint Rock Falls, a golf course and residential development that began in 2002 in the Lakeway area.

- Forest Creek, a master planned golf course community in Round Rock.

- Rocky Creek Ranch, a 396-home development that went bankrupt before any homes were built in the 2008 recession and housing bubble. Rocky Creek Ranch was bought by Hillwood Communities in 2012 and finally developed.

In addition to the Salado development, Kerby is actively developing a 245-home development on 452 acres in Marble Falls, according to a news release from the Texas A&M University Real Estate Research Center.

The Austin Business Journal reported that the Marble Falls development was given zoning approval in March 2022. (<https://www.bizjournals.com/austin/news/2022/03/07/thousand-oaks-marble-falls-re-zoning.html>)

Kerby is also developing Lakeside Meadows, a 420 acre mixed use urban development south of Lake Pflugerville that will include a corporate campus, industrial, office, commercial, single family residential and multi-family rental. According to a report in the Austin American-Statesman, mixed use commercial could include up to 45 residential units per acre with minimum building heights of four stories. Single family residences would have a density of 10 per acre, according to the Statesman report (<https://www.statesman.com/story/news/local/pflugerville/2022/01/13/pflugerville-officials-discuss-re-zoning-changes-lakeside-meadows-project/6510930001/>)

If this development is a few hundred lots, it will add to the inventory of developments already on the books in Salado.

This year’s event set records with almost $208,000 raised. Auctioneer extraordinaire Bill Hall worked the record crowd of 357 in attendance and raised $92,500 from the live auction alone. Knives and other items made by Smith and his students brought in more than $25,000 during the live auction. ## Friends surpass goal for Gidley

Steve Jackson and Alex Berumen couldn’t be more pleased. The fundraiser that they, their friends and former Salado High classmates put together for their friend and former classmate Tom Gidley, Jr. on Oct. 15 surpassed their expectations.

“We served more than 400 plates of barbecue,” Steve said. “I am tired, but happy.” Happy because the friend he has known throughout his life can now concentrate on his health and not his medical bills.

“It’s amazing what this community has done,” Jackson said. He added that he knew when he set the date of Oct. 15 that there were other big fundraisers going.

“It was the only date open though,” he said.

Even with the well-established Cattleman’s Ball and Volks Ride, the Tom Gidley fundraiser brought together 400 people and raised more than $20,000 for Gidley and his family.

Feds want economy to cool down, but not crash

The S&P 500 Stock Index (SPX) for the week ending on the 14th declined 1.55% to close at 3583.07. That leaves the SPX down 25.24% from its high in early January, and about 20% lower than at this time last year.

On the other hand, it is also over 60% higher than it was in March of 2020 and 21% higher than it was three years ago. Whether the market is up or down depends entirely on your time frame. Our other index, the CRSP Mid-Cap Value Index fell 0.29% to close at 2117.73 and is now down 18.46% this year. Once again, reading the headlines a person could easily have imagined that there was a market crash Thursday morning, followed by a major bull market surge on that same day. The reality though was that not much changed. The stock market seems to have priced in the economic drag caused by an anticipated 0.75% interest rate increase at the Fed meeting in November and further rises after that taking short term rates to the upper 4% range.

Reflecting the fact that interest rates are driving the train in market actions, the yield on the 10-year U.S. Treasury note surged past the 4% line three times in the week before finally stabilizing at 4.025%. Unfortunately, the 2-year yield rose to 4.48% leaving the Treasury yield curve still quite inverted and warning of a recession, probably next year. Much of the volatility in bond yields and prices, which move inversely to the yield, was the amazingly volatile and dysfunctional pricing of bonds (gilts) in the United Kingdom as the government there faces a major recession while inflation is in the double digits. Meanwhile the price per barrel of West Texas Intermediate crude oil (WTI) fell slowly and steadily over 8% to $85.61 despite threats by Russia and Saudi Arabia to cut oil production.

Market & Economic Update

By Jeffrey W. McClure

issued its monthly report on September's Consumer Price Index (CPI) mid-week and as expected, it was not a pretty picture. First the top-line 12-month trailing CPI came in at 8.2%. Dropping down to the "core" inflation numbers, which are more stable, the CPI rose 6.6% over the last year. We tend to focus on the core CPI as it changed over the past couple of months, and there the increase was about 0.4% per month which equates to an annual inflation rate of about 5%. Since the Fed wants inflation (price increases) to be reduced to about 2%, that means they have a long way to go.

We have addressed this before, but the immutable law of supply and demand states that when demand exceeds supply, prices will rise. It takes years to increase supply in an economy as large and diverse as ours, so if we want the price increases to slow down, we need to reduce demand. The primary source of demand in our economy is consumer spending. With wages rising at 5% per year, it should not come as much of a surprise when the cost of goods and services are also rising at about the same rate. Why are wages rising at 5%? Well, companies are expanding and want to hire more workers than we have in the jobs market. Since the demand for workers is higher than the supply, the price, expressed as wages, rises. The Fed's job then is to reduce the demand for workers and that means slowing the growth of the companies that are doing the hiring. Expanding companies tend to borrow money to pay for the expansions. Higher interest rates on borrowed money should slow things down.

The complication is that there is a lot of momentum in our economy. It typically takes six to 18 months for an increase in interest rates to show up as slowed corporate expansion. So, the big question is, "How far will the Fed need to raise interest rates to slow things down and will they raise them too far, and bring the economy to a screeching halt?" Trying to guess what rate will slow demand without crashing the economy is as much art as it is science. The bright side to this is that the last time we had inflation this high, back in the early '80s, Chairman Volcker fully intended to create a recession, and we got one. This time around, the members of the Federal Reserve Board are making it quite clear that they do not see a need for nor want a recession, but we might get one anyway.

Economists surveyed by Bloomberg put the odds of a recession in 2023 at 60% but there is good news to be found in the consensus of those economists. They also believe any recession we get will be relatively mild. There is more good news to be found in the fact that the stock market appears to have already priced in a mild to moderate 2023 recession. Since the traders who move the markets already were expecting a high inflation report and for the Fed to raise interest rates 0.75% in November to about 4%, with smaller increases thereafter and topping at about 4.75%, the CPI news this week resulted in very little change.

Despite all the hysteria, we remain optimistic for the longer term. As we have written before, the rest of the world wishes they had our problems of too many jobs, too much income, and an economy running too fast.

High-speed Rail Is a Progressive Fantasy

California progressives tried to build a European-style high-speed rail network and alienated the French in the process.

A big New York Times piece on the rail project reports that the French, who wanted to work with California, decided the state was simply too dysfunctional and departed to help complete a high-speed line in Morocco instead.

The ongoing unraveling of California's rail plan is an object lesson in how infrastructure as eschatology is a bad idea. If transportation is conceived as a way to save the planet and fulfill a deep-seated, quasi-religious fixation rather than a means to move people around more efficiently, it is bound to fail. Throw on top California's politicized decision-making and regulatory and legal obstacles to building, and it's a formula for a boondoggle for the ages.

No matter how high California has estimated the cost of the project, it hasn't been enough, even as almost nothing has been built. It started out at $33 billion in 2008. Now, it's $113 billion, with no one knowing where the funding is going to come from.

Not that the California experience will diminish the progressive ardor for high-speed rail. As far as its enthusiasts are concerned, it is like socialism -- never failed, just never truly tried.

President Barack Obama proposed an 8,600-mile high-speed rail system, and Transportation secretary Pete Buttigieg wants the U.S. to be the "global leader" in high-speed rail.

Progressives think of bul

Rich Lowry

let trains like windmills on rails, a symbol of enlightenment and modernity, a way to free ourselves from the selfish, small-minded tyranny of the automobile and adopt a sleeker, greener, more virtuous future.

Then, the wheel meets the rail. In California, it might have sounded appealing to build a high-speed rail link between Los Angeles and San Francisco -- if you abstracted the project from all the topographical and other difficulties. For political reasons, a less direct, less economical route between the cities was selected. And the decision was made to start building between the two megalopolises, in the Central Valley, creating the possibility that California may end up with a bullet train to and from nowhere.

Of course, we already have cheap, high-speed transport between population centers. It is called air travel.

As Randal O'Toole of the Cato Institute points out, planes cruise at roughly 500 miles per hour. The Amtrak Acela, on the other hand, has a top speed of 150 miles per hour. Yes, airplanes need infrastructure, but not expensive, complex new infrastructure all along their routes.

O'Toole notes that Japan's high-speed trains seemed like the future in the 1960's, when air travel was more expensive than rail. Also, Japan's high-speed trains had a ready-made customer base in the substantial proportion of the country's population that already traveled by train.

In the U.S. today, in contrast, the average cost per mile of traveling by air is cheaper than traveling by rail, and a minuscule 0.1% of all passenger travel is via Amtrak.

If we built the Interstate Highway System, why can't we build a comparable high-speed network? As O'Toole observes, the highway system basically paid for itself and accounts for a substantial 20% of the country's passenger-miles and a roughly comparable proportion of freight ton-miles.

High-speed rail could never be a match. Even if you put aside the endemic cost overruns, the inevitable construction delays, and the considerable maintainable costs, it can only carry passengers, not freight.

While progressives swoon over high-speed rail as the shiny future, some other genuinely futuristic technology is likely to emerge. If the age of self-driving cars ever arrives, people will be able to experience a car more like a personal train, except unlimited by rails.

California hasn't created a railroad to the future but a warning to the rest of the country to avoid its delusion and folly.

GOLDA MARIE
MADISON BROCK
MARCH 19, 1938
OCTOBER 17, 2022

Golda Marie Madison Brock, 84, of Salado, passed away Monday October 17, 2022 in Temple, following a brief illness. The family will be welcoming guests for visitation at Dossman Funeral Home in Belton from 4:00 PM to 6:00 PM on Friday, October 21st. The funeral service will be at 2:00 PM Saturday, October 22, 2022 at Salado Cemetery with Reverend Andy Davis officiating.

Golda was born on March 19, 1938, in Santa Anna, Texas, to Agnes and Johnie Madison, Sr. She attended school in Salado and graduated from Salado High School in 1956. It is there that she met the love of her life, James Winston Brock. They were married at her parents' home in Salado on January 19th, 1957 and would spend the next 65 years together. Golda and Jim started their life together in Waco but soon moved to Austin to pursue careers. Her training and education led her to a position with the Texas Department of Public Safety where she held various positions but would spend much of her time with the Department of Emergency Management, from which she would retire in 1997.

After retirement, Jim and Golda returned to Salado and lived there until this year. Golda thrived in retirement and was active in many groups, but especially First Baptist Belton and the Chisholm Trail and Good Sam camping groups. Golda and Jim especially enjoyed the many camping trips they made and the fellowship with their many friends. Golda was a devout Christian throughout her life and taught Sunday School and sang in the choir at First Baptist Belton for many years. She and Jim also helped with bereavement luncheons for many years.

Golda is preceded in death by daughter Tammie Diann, and her beloved husband Jim, who recently passed away on July 2nd.

She is survived by her sons Rodney, of Austin, and Robert and his wife Marta, of San Angelo. Sisters Donette Street of Rockport, Juanita Krupica of Birmingham, Alabama, and brothers Johnie Madison, Jr. of Lubbock, James Madison of Hot Springs, Arkansas, and Mark Madison of Burnet, grandson Patrick Brock and wife Hillary of Pflugerville, granddaughter Natalie Brock of Pflugerville, Kelley Avants and husband Shay of Westbrook, Wade Smith of San Angelo, Molly Hall and husband Reid of Lubbock and nine great-grandchildren.

Memorials in memory of Golda may be made to First Baptist Belton Children and Youth Divisions

Salado Artist Ron Coleman paintings on display at CAC Nov. 5- Dec. 15

By TIM FLEISCHER
EDITOR-IN-CHIEF

When Salado artist Ron Coleman tells people "I am color blind," it leads to a host of questions.

"What color is this?" they will say pointing to something," Coleman says. "Why don't you wear the glasses for that purpose?" Or... "Did it just start one day or have you always been color blind?"

Art has been a passion for Ron for his entire life. But painting did not come along for a long time, he said.

"Growing up in Georgia, I only did pen and ink drawings," he said, "knowing that being color blind presented somewhat of a problem for my art teachers."

Colors were very important to him, but Coleman says "they seemed so very different from other people's views. My mother tried to help, but to no avail."

Coleman recalls that even as a young boy "I would ride the bus to downtown Atlanta to art museums to see famous original works of art and to see the beautiful churches to look at the stained glass windows."

He credits A. D. Greer with getting him into painting. "I spent time with him at his home and at the end of the day, A.D. asked me if I painted. I said no because I was color blind. With a quizzical look on his face, he came very close to me and looked into my eyes and said, 'Can you read?'"

Ron responded yes. "To which he said, 'Then read the damn paint tube!'" Ron said. "At that moment I thought this man is brilliant!"

Later Coleman realized that "after buying so many different colors of paint, the words on each tube meant nothing," he said. "I just did not see them the same as other people."

With 50 tubes of paint and five blank canvasses, Coleman began to paint.

"The rules of art are elusive for me," he said. "Colors resist coloration for me, they deliver what is seen at the time of transition to the canvas."

"Some colors are adventures, some new sensations, some strangers," he says. "Some paintings have meaning with the presentation, for others the meaning must be found within the viewer. Every painting is unique and original."

Coleman works from his home studio in Salado. His paintings have been shown at the Texas State Capitol in Austin and are in private collections across the country and internationally.

His original art will be on display in Nov. 5-Dec. 15 in the Saulsbury Gallery at the Cultural Activities Center in Temple. An opening reception will be 5-7 p.m. Nov. 5 followed by a Hayes Carl concert at 7:30 p.m.

The bidding:
 South West North East
 1 ♠ Dble 4 ♠
 Opening lead — king of hearts.

Assume you become declarer at four spades on the bidding shown and West leads the K-A-Q of hearts. After you ruff the third heart, it might seem that all you can do is draw trump, play a diamond from dummy, finesse the ten and later lead another diamond from dummy and finesse the jack. If you do this in the actual case, though, you'll go down one, since West has both the king and queen of diamonds.

You could lament your bad luck in finding West with both diamond honors, but in truth the outcome would be your own fault because you overlooked a superior line of play.

Since the only danger to the contract is the possibility of losing two diamond tricks, you should search for and then implement a line of play that might eliminate the risk factor inherent in taking two finesses.

Accordingly, at trick four you should cash the ace of clubs, then ruff a club in dummy. Next you ruff dummy's last heart before ruffing your last club.

As a result of these preliminary maneuvers, dummy's hand and your own have no more hearts or clubs. You then cash the K-A of trump and lead a diamond from dummy, and, after East follows low, you finesse the ten.

West wins with the queen but finds himself without recourse. His last three cards are the K-5 of diamonds and jack of clubs. If he returns a diamond into your A-J, he hands you your 10th trick, and if he returns the jack of clubs instead, you ruff in dummy and discard the jack of diamonds from your hand to produce the same result.

Fright Trail presents Macbeth

By TONJA MOORE
TABLEROCK FESTIVAL

"By the pricking of my thumbs, something wicked this way comes," says Macbeth's "wyrd sisters". Three friends and weird English teachers portray the characters that foretell Macbeth's future at Tablerock's Fright Trail on the evenings of October 29 and 30. Join Naomi West, Jennifer McCauley, and Tonja Moore as they introduce Shakespeare's Macbeth to audiences young and old.

Small groups will be led through Tablerock's woods and come across groups of actors entertaining them with short skits from literature ranging from one of the first texts written in Old English, Beowulf, to Salado's own legend of Native American princess turned mermaid, Sirena.

Tablerock looks forward to charming you in a family-friendly atmosphere. Join them as they weave their tales of ancient monsters and their counterparts. Captain Ahab will be searching for his white whale, Marley will be rattling his chains warning his friend Scrooge, and the Mad Hatter, White Rabbit, and Queen of Hearts will be discussing Unbirthday.

Tablerock of Salado's Fright Trail, on Royal Street in Salado, will present its tales of thrills and fun on Oct. 29-30 from 6:30-9:30.

Tickets can be purchased through CentralTexasTickets.com ahead of time or at the gate for $5 adult and $3 children 12 and under. See Tablerock.org for more information.

Ninety-three Salado High School Art I students competed in a class-sponsored art competition. Their task was to create a two-dimensional artwork in any medium that represented the theme, "Human Strength/Weakness." They could focus on one or the other, or represent them both in the artwork. The artwork was judged on how well they used their chosen medium and how well it represented the theme. Four students were awarded a box full of art supplies and goodies for their creative interpretations. Lilly Gallegos received "Best of Show" for her charcoal drawing; Madyson Rosamond received first place for her watercolor painting; Isabela Ponce received second place for her oil pastel; and Samuel Perez received third place for his acrylic painting. ## Sign up now for 2nd Warrior Angels in Boots

The second annual Warrior Angels in Boots 5K is returning stronger this year with more sponsors to support Boot Campaign. Barrow Brewing Company is graciously hosting the race. The Veterans Day weekend event is set for Nov. 12, with registration opening at 8 a.m.

It will begin with prayer by Neal Grogan, Elder at Christ Community Church, Harker Heights. Neal served in the USMC as an infantryman and in combat operations in Afghanistan. Our Nations Anthem will be sung by Jasmyn Spain and T.A.P.S. played by Doug Slauson, Pipe Major, of Silver Thistles.

Kimmie Turk, founder of Warrior Angels in Boots, said the event began when the heart-wrenching events that occurred at the Kabul airport in Afghanistan in August 2021 undoubtedly made an impact on our nation's freedom fighters, veteran community and patriots who support them. "I watched in disbelief and was inspired to take action and do whatever I could to remind the military and veteran community that they are important, honored and will always be remembered for their service. I had never run a 5K, nor organized one, and I've never served in the military, but the love I have for our country and people who fight for our freedom inspired me to get one quickly organized. The amount of support we received last year was overwhelming and I'm really excited to #LaceUpSalado again this year!"

Competitive runners can compete and families can also participate and welcomed to bring strollers and their pets. Last year, participants ran with the American flag, Marine Corps and Army flag to show support for our country. The race route will start at Barrow and go up and down Main Street. Barrow Brewing is also offering a Zero K. Sign up for the Zero K and your registration includes a pint from Barrow Brewery. Individuals will meet at the alternate starting line and proceed at a normal clip around the beer garden to be "awarded" a Golden Ale of their choice at the finish line. This Zero K is not timed. Start time is at 10:30am. All proceeds from your registration go to the Boot Campaign.

Boot Campaign helps our military and Veterans with their physical and mental wellbeing. .88 cents out of every dollar goes to someone in need and 100% of the proceeds from this 5K will be donated to them.
