

Williamson Co. residents bringing annexation petition to Clearwater UWCD

By TIM FLEISCHER
EDITOR-IN-CHIEF

“Aquifers do not follow county lines.” State Rep. Terry Wilson.

Because of this, several residents of western Williamson County have turned to their northern neighbors for help in conserving and protecting their groundwater.

Specifically, the Aquifer Conservation Alliance is seeking annexation of the western portion of Williamson County into the Clearwater Underground Conservation District.

This issue may be decided in a May 6, 2023 election of the voters residing in the proposed area to be annexed.

Before that election can be called, a petition signed by at least 50 residents in the proposed area must be presented to the Clearwater UWCD.

The petition will be presented to Clearwater UWCD in November to be placed on the Dec. 14 board agenda.

If the petition is presented to the board, the board must set two public hearing dates on the issue, one in the current district and one in the area proposed for annexation.

If after study of the issue, Clearwater directors believe the proposed annexation would benefit the District, the Board may add the territory by resolution and call for a ratification election. The deadline to call for a May 6, 2023 ratification election is Feb. 17, 2023.

The ballot for the proposed annexation will have to state the maximum property tax rate allowable by law, which is $0.05 per $100 valuation. The current Clearwater UWCD tax rate is $0.02708 per $100 valuation.

There are 98 Groundwater Conservation Districts in Texas. Clearwater UWCD was one of the early Districts to be formed by election of the voters in 1999.

There is no Groundwater District in Williamson

County, which shares the Edwards and Trinity group of aquifers with Bell County.

There are four methods to create a GCD: special legislation by the state legislature; a petition to Texas Commission on Environmental Quality (TCEQ). Initiation by TCEQ for an area that is in an existing Priority Groundwater Management Area (PGMA) or annexation into an existing GCD.

“We chose annexation into Clearwater as the best method to get the protection of our groundwater,” said Williamson County resident and ACA president Keith Elliston during a panel discussion that was part of the annual Bell County Water Symposium Nov. 16 in Belton.

Elliston said that the ACA chose Clearwater because “your decision-making is driven by the science. You have a long track record of getting the best science possible. You have a history of success. You are fiscally conservative.”

Since 2003, there have been 1,775 wells drilled in western Williamson County, according to Hydrogeologist Vince Clause with LRE Water Inc. Since 2004, there have been 1,100 wells drilled in the southwestern portion of Bell County.

Clause said that the topographies of southwestern Bell County and western Williamson County are very similar. “The faults in southwestern Bell County are significant and impactful,” Clause said. “The faults are impeding the movement of water.”

Add to that the amount of water used by aggregate industry in Williamson County and water can quickly become an issue for fighting.

Williamson County, Elliston said, “is the leading the country in the density of rock crushers and aggregates.”

“You need to know if you will have water,” he added. “This is one way of doing it.”

Bell, Coryell approved for $1 million to develop Habitat Conservation Plan

By TIM FLEISCHER
EDITOR-IN-CHIEF

“It’s not a matter of ‘if,’” Bell County Judge David Blackburn said last week, “it’s a matter of when they are found and what the impact will be when they are found.”

Judge Blackburn was talking about what he calls “creepy crawlies.” These aren’t the cute teddy bears or the American Eagle or other species that have been saved from extinction.

Instead they are the cave spiders, fresh water muscels and other threatened or endangered species that are the kind that can delay or prevent major infrastructure projects.

“Private development also has a huge stake in this,” Judge Blackburn said at the 21st annual Bell County Water Symposium Nov. 16 at the Bell County Expo Center. “They can get shut down by the feds just as quickly as TXDOT.”

Bell County, working with a dozen other regional and local governing entities, learned recently that its request for $1 million to fund the development of a Regional Habitat Conservation Plan (HCP) for Bell and Coryell Counties.

An HCP is a planning document required for an Incidental Take Permit (ITP) under Section 10(a)(2)(A) of the Endangered Species Act (ESA).

The BelCor HCP, as it is monickered, will be developed through the collaborative effort of 13 entities: Bell County, Coryell County, Clearwater Underground Water Conservation District, Brazos River Authority, Killeen, Temple, Copperas Cove, Harker Heights, Belton, Gatesville, Village of Salado, Middle Trinity Groundwater Conservation District and Killeen -Temple Metropolitan Planning Organization (MPO).

An HCP that is based upon “trusted science and stakeholder involvement” will help the entities involved as well as private development in “protecting these endangered and threatened species while allowing room for responsible growth.”

“This area is growing,” Judge Blackburn said. Bell County population grew by almost 20% over the last decade from 310,000 to 370,000.

Houses in Bell County are on the market for an average of 20 days with 555 houses selling in September 2022 alone.

Blackburn told the audience that Copperas Cove is expected to grow by 18% by 2030, adding 7,000 people.

Killeen ISD is expected to add 4,600 students by 2028.

In neighboring Williamson County, there are more than 14,000 residences or apartments that are under construction or approved for construction.

On this cusp of growth, the area has come under the scrutiny of USFWS in terms of potential threats to endangered and threatened species.

Bell County was informed in 2021 that it is a “county of interest” to the US Fish and Wildlife Service for these Karstic invertebrates, tiny creatures that spend their entire lives underground.

Judge Blackburn told the audience that Fort Hood maintains its own Endangered Species Management Plan (published in March 2001) for endangered and threatened species on its 214,968-acre military installation. The plan is a 166-page document.

“Fort Hood has been living with and protecting those species for years now,” Judge Blackburn said.

Work on developing the BelCor HCP will begin in January and is expected to take three-and-a-half years to complete. With an HCP in place, non-federal entities, including private entities, can obtain an ITP. The HCP describes how take of endangered or threatened species will be minimized in the region.

“Having the HCP in place is one way of protecting those species,” Judge Blackburn said.

The judge was asked by a citizen when Bell County would reach a point that it limits growth.

Judge Blackburn responded that in his three decades working in municipal and regional government (he was City Manager in both Temple and Killeen before retiring and being elected County Judge), he has seen “only two things happen for communities and economies: they either grow or they die. The idea of maintaining exactly what you have that is a mythical place.”

“The trick is to manage growth,” he said. “An HCP is one tool to use to do that.”

History that we have is the history that is left

Dr. Monte Monroe (COURTESY PHOTO)

By CAROL WILSON
LOCAL HISTORIAN

“The history we have is the history that’s left,” says Dr. Monte Monroe, Texas State Historian. “Most of it [historical documents/photos] is destroyed by neglect, war, natural disasters, great grandsons and silverfish,” he said with a broad smile.

“Too often, when Grandma dies, they clean out the house and throw those boxes away.”

Speaking at the Historical Society’s annual chili supper earlier this month, Monroe dispensed advice and told some interesting stories — like the time he saw President and Mrs. John F. Kennedy. It was the evening before the assassination when Monroe, then a young man, went with his family to Ellington Air Force Base when the President and First Lady arrived.

As they drove away, the famous couple looked back and waved at them. “And the next day he was dead,” Monroe recalled.

But listeners soon realized that Dr. Monroe was there to talk about his interest in preservation and in people. “I love to hear people’s stories,” he said. “You and your family are as important as anyone else” His comments were made to encourage people to preserve their family and personal histories as well as those of clubs and organizations. Monroe’s passion for preservation comes naturally. In addition to being State Historian and a member of the history Faculty at Texas Tech, Dr. Monroe is the archivist for the Southwest Collection/Special Collections Library at Texas Tech, one of the top academic archives in the country. He spoke with pride about this massive and diverse collection including the recently acquired papers of Governor Coke Stevenson. Topics like space exploration, sports, the Vietnam War, and colonial history, bring researchers from all over the world to Lubbock. For example, the Southwest Collections has been a resource for Ken Burns documentaries on several occasions.

“When people write [history], they do it by gathering tidbits and putting them together,” Monroe explained. Every tidbit is valuable in forming a story. Rarely are there great details that form a complete picture but when there are it is because someone had the foresight to save and make available historically valuable documents or photos. Records in a shoebox sitting on a shelf in a closet have no value to the public.

Monroe also advised his listeners about the importance of saving items digitally, backing them up, and sharing them.

In closing, Monroe said that his experiences have led him to believe that the most popular history among non-historians is local history. In keeping with that belief, members of Salado’s Historical Society endeavor to chronicle and safeguard our annals and promote and preserve our rich history.

In his position as State Historian, Dr. Monroe’s duties include educating and generating interest in Texas history among school children and the general public. Using that as a measure, we give this genial and knowledgeable history teacher an A+ and thank him for visiting the Village.

Collapse of crypto illustrates risk-reward in investments

The market week that ended on 11/18 was another one in which there was a lot of gnashing of teeth, surges up and down but in the end little had changed. The S&P 500 Stock Index (SPX), our preferred, if flawed, stock market barometer, sagged 0.69% to close at 3965.34. It now is down 16.8% from its top in January and 15.59% from this time last year but is up 10.7% from its recent low on October 12, up 77.23% from its low back in March 2020, and up 28% from where it was three years ago in the months just before the pandemic. The other stock index we follow, the CRSP Mid-Cap Value Index, fell 0.9% for the week closing at 2387.06 but is only down about 8% from its high point in January and 6.5% from this time last year.

The benchmark 10-year U.S. Treasury note ended the week yielding 3.82%, right where it was last week and with the 2-year note yielding 4.51%, still at a lower rate than shorter maturities, left us with a very inverted yield curve. The price per barrel of West Texas Intermediate crude oil, the benchmark for us here in the U.S., fell nearly 10% for the week to $80.23, 33% lower than it was in mid-June.

The headline economic news for the week was definitely all about the collapse of the cryptocurrency exchange FTX. What was heralded as a $32 billion company taking deposits from the public suddenly appears to have a negative value. Even if you never had anything to do with crypto currencies and never would, there is a lesson to be learned there. Certainly, the world of crypto currencies is fraught with danger. We question why a crypto coin is worth anything at all and the value of Bitcoin has fallen about 74% in the last year, but for those who had their coins deposited at

Market & Economic Update

By Jeffrey W. McClure

FTX, and more than a few other exchanges, the loss has been 100%.

That is the same tale of woe that repeats itself every few years. A few years ago, people who held Lehman Brothers bonds learned the same lesson the hard way. Then there was the nightmare for those invested with Bernie Madoff, or with Stanford Investments in 2008 and 2009. Going back further, there were those who had their retirement accounts filled with Enron stock. We have been at this long enough to remember when no small number of people who had entrusted their retirement funds to life insurance companies experienced the same sad surprise in the late 1970s and early 1980s, the last time interest rates went up dramatically.

With each bear market there are companies and institutions which, sometimes only days before, were considered paragons of value and virtue but vanished with a flurry of headlines leaving their depositors and investors with little or nothing. It is important to ask yourself who or what is backing any company to which you entrust your financial well-being. Generally speaking, if the institution is regulated by the federal government and accounts are backed to some degree by a federally chartered agency or law, the risk is likely small to negligible. If, on the other hand, the company or institution does not have that level of regulation or backing, the responsibility is on you, the investor or saver. A good rule is that if the benefits are exceptionally high, the risk is probably the same.

Meanwhile, in the rest of the economy, business activity here in the United States of America remains stubbornly solid. There continued to be better news concerning inflation too. The Producer Price Index, what retailers are charged for goods and services, held steady at a 0.2% increase for the past two months, a 2.4% annualized rate, even as retail sales rose 1.3% in October. The U.S. Import Price Index declined 0.2% in October after falling 1.1% in September. Those numbers jumped upward late last year and early this year, leading to the retail inflation surge we have seen. Historically, they lead the way both in rising and falling prices. If that pattern holds true, we may see inflation continue to decline, which has the potential to limit how high the Fed will raise rates. That, in turn, may be just the thing we need to dodge the recession bullet. A major contributor to inflation, existing home sales, saw another 5.9% decline in October, the ninth straight month of declines, and are now down about 32% this year. The median house price too has been falling month over month for four months. The labor market continues to be tight though with new unemployment claims remaining low.

The bottom line remains the same, the U.S. economy is charging ahead at or perhaps beyond a sustainable rate while the Federal Reserve has the unenviable task of reducing our propensity to spend money, probably by causing more people to be out of work. Again, we are thankful for where we are. Inflation in the United Kingdom came in at 11.1% even as its economy staggers into a recession.

Have Thanksgiving every day

DR. GLENN MOLLETTE

Thanksgiving always comes and goes too fast. We often think, "We need more time to focus on the Thanksgiving holiday." For many, it seems that Thanksgiving gets sandwiched between Halloween and Christmas.

By late September, many of the stores and television commercials are focusing on Christmas.

The only way we can fix the "fast Thanksgiving" holiday is to make Thanksgiving celebration every day. We shouldn't wait until Thanksgiving to give thanks but give thanks every day.

A thankful heart is a healthier heart. Living in an attitude of Thanksgiving celebrates the gift of life and every opportunity to live life.

Many of us have dreaded the shorter days. Dark by 6 o'clock and soon by 5 or even 4:30 in some areas. I used to always dread that but my attitude has changed. I'm just happy to be alive to experience the changing seasons. Take advantage of these cooler, shorter days to get some rest.

Longer days will be back soon and you can mow grass, work or walk until 9:00 or later every evening. Go with the flow and enjoy the differences.

I miss the Thanksgivings when my mom and dad were alive and mother cooked. If everyone got together, we could have 20 people in the house. This was a tiring time for my mother. Be sure to always praise the person carrying the cooking load.

Time passes quickly. Every day we should embrace the day. When you see someone, talk to someone, share a meal with someone then by all means embrace and savor the moment. Give thanks for all occasions that you have to spend time with others whether family or friends.

Thanksgiving is not the same for many of us because there are empty seats at the table. We miss moms and dads who have left us for a better place. We miss wives, husbands, children, and siblings who have left this life too early. This makes us sad and dampens our spirits. Yet, look around and see the people who may not be here next year. There are no guarantees. Be kind, be loving. Say good words to them. Lift them up. It will make you feel better to give thanks for people and to anoint them.

Jesus was anointed by Mary the sister of Martha before his arrest and crucifixion. Some criticized her for doing it but Jesus said she has prepared me for the burial. Let her alone he said she has done a good work. After Mary finished anointing Jesus' feet the house was filled with the smell of the ointment. When you love and are kind to people it always brings a better fragrance and atmosphere into the house. A part of this is showing Thanksgiving for them and toward them. Mary ended up with that ointment on her hands and in her hair. When you do good stuff for people to honor them a lot of that good stuff comes back to you.

Have Thanksgiving every day. Give thanks, express thanks and live in a spirit of being thankful. Your attitude will make your day better and encourage others around you.

Don't Count Trump Out Yet

Donald Trump is in his weakest political state since 2015 or early 2016.

During his presidency, when he was at the center of countless intense controversies, he didn't blink once. He never showed fear or desperation. Both are clearly at work now in his gratuitous attacks on Govs. Ron DeSantis of Florida and Glenn Youngkin of Virginia, neither of whom has done anything to him, besides presenting a viable alternative to his continued dominance of the GOP.

Any Trump political obituaries are premature, though, until a verdict has been reached by the force that has buoyed him and lent him his overwhelming power in the GOP politics -- Republican voters.

The idea that the "party decides" -- that a party's elites guide voters to their preferred presidential candidate -- got blown to smithereens in 2016. Trump had almost no institutional support and won anyway.

Since then, the party has neutered itself and, in many states, been affirmatively taken over by pro-Trump forces.

After the experience of the Access Hollywood tape and January 6, Republican officials have internalized the lesson that getting too far out in front of voters in expressing anti-Trump sentiment -- indeed getting an inch in front of them -- is potentially fatal.

Politics is always a realm of artifice and whispered conversations, but the Trump era has taken it to another level in the GOP. Many of the elected officials who are Trump's biggest public boosters have a dim view of him in private. People serving at the highest levels of his administration -- not deep state operatives, but his own political appointees -- would make clear their discomfort with him in private. Even the most pro-Trump voices in the media often don't share their true feelings about him.

If the window has opened a crack to Trump criticism among Republican officialdom, it's still quite muted. Everyone considers it much safer to train their public fire on presumptive speaker Kevin McCarthy or Majority Leader Mitch McConnell.

It's important to remember, by the way, that some of the worst candidate choices in the midterms were freely made by GOP primary electorates under the influence of the former president. There's been a lot of criticism of Democrats spending on weak MAGA candidates in the primaries. But these candidates never would have gotten nominated in the first place if Republican voters hadn't happily supported them, despite their flaws and despite Democrats desperately wanting to run against them.

One hopes that the lesson has finally been learned that Trump -- no matter how much Republicans admire his combativeness, appreciate his entertainment value, and detest his enemies -- is not a sound electoral guide, to put it mildly.

Trump didn't win a majority in either of his presidential elections, even the one he won; he was never anywhere close to 50% in the RealClearPolitics polling averages in either of his races; and his average job approval rating during his presidency never approached 50%, either.

Trump won in 2016 courtesy of Hillary Clinton, the Electoral College, and a dollop of luck. At the end of the day, he's a plurality, not a majority, candidate. And he's drawn to other plurality candidates, who, lacking the advantage of running in races with an electoral college or against Hillary Clinton, tend to lose. Winning 46.1% worked for Trump in 2016, but it's a formula for failure for everyone else.

There are early signs that voters have taken on board the contrast between Trump, who was embarrassed on election night and has been attacking other Republicans in crude terms, and Ron DeSantis, who won a crushing re-election victory and hasn't felt it necessary to throw out wild charges or insult other party leaders to try to deflect blame from himself.

The polls are very early but telling. A YouGov poll had DeSantis up over Trump nationally in a hypothetical 2024 matchup, 42-35. A new 2024 poll in Texas has DeSantis up by a similar 43-32. And a WPA Intelligence poll has DeSantis beating Trump in Iowa, New Hampshire, Florida and Georgia.

There will have to be much more of that to signal that a fundamental, enduring shift has taken place and coax party leaders out of their long defensive crouch. The party won't decide to turn against Trump until voters give it clear, unmistakable permission.

The Salado Community Chorus is rehearsing weekly to prepare for their upcoming free Christmas Concert set for 7 p.m., Tuesday, December 13, at First Baptist Church, 210 South Main, in Salado.

The chorus does not require auditions so those who enjoy singing don't have to worry about being a seasoned professional before they join the group.

Chorus President Marjorie Hairston said, "We gladly welcome new members whether they're experienced or not."

"We do believe, however, in being well prepared for our concerts. The chorus has been rehearsing every Tuesday evening since August from 6 p.m.- 7:30 p.m. at the Salado Civic Center."

The 48-voice chorus, consisting of members from Temple, Belton, Harker Heights, Georgetown, Nolanville, Holland, Waco and Salado, is under the direction of Salado resident Dottie Shirley.

The chorus will be accompanied at the Christmas Show by Pianist Dr. David Albee, a retired piano professor from Baylor University, plus several other instrumentalists and vocal ensembles.

When asked about the ways the chorus has been meaningful to members, Bryan Buck said, "I work in a pretty stressful industry. Chorus allows me to put that aside and have a creative outlet for a while each week. It's therapeutic in a way and allows me to do something I enjoy with friends."

The program will include: "A Bell Carol," "Jesus, Oh What a Wonderful Child (solo by Bobby Whitson)," "Lord of the Dance," "A Wacky Family Christmas," "No Room, No Room," "Peace, Peace," "Oh, Holy Night," "It's Beginning to Look a Lot Like Christmas," "Silent Night," and "The First Noel."

Special selections added to the program will be: "Mrs. Claus"-Salado Ladies Chorus, "Going to Bethlehem,"-Salado Men's Chorus, "White Winter Hymnal,"-Salado Chorus

Dr. David Albee, a retired piano professor at Baylor University, is the accompanist for the Salado Community Chorus.

Ensemble, "An Acapella Christmas",-Quartet featuring Suzanne Miller, Charles Turk, Dianne Massey and Bob Massey, and "Ave Maria,"-Mary McIntosh.

Shirley, who has directed the chorus for the past four years, and has been a member of several choruses over the past 18 years, said, "We have 12-14 weeks to learn 11-12 songs for each concert. In addition to the Christmas Show we also perform a concert in the spring. I truly enjoy directing the chorus but I love being with the members more than anything."

"I would describe our rehearsals as rather relaxed. We truly care about each other but my view of a successful rehearsal is having good attendance and members ready to work on the music and sing it well. I especially like the nights when we have a good time while getting a lot of serious learning of the music accomplished and improving as a chorus."

Chorus member Louise Oldham, said, "I joined the chorus for the sense of belonging and fellowship, the joy of singing and having fun. I leave rehearsals feeling good from the endorphins released by singing."

In addition to the Christmas and Spring Shows, the chorus participates in the Annual Community Thanksgiving Service, Salado's July 4th Celebration, the Salado Stroll, Salado Ladies League and the Scottish Games Celebration.

"I've been a choir member most of my life and have spent lots of time with children's choirs and learned from them," said Shirley.

"Most of my directing career was being a children's choir coordinator in the churches where my husband served as minister of music. I never took a class in directing but have had some very good directors from my high school and college years and being a member of many church choirs where my husband was my favorite director."

Shirley's husband, Jakie, was director of the Salado Community Chorus from 2009 to 2014.

Opening lead — six of clubs.

Let's say you're in three notrump and West leads the six of clubs. There appears to be nothing to the play, so you take East's king of clubs with the ace and return a low diamond. West follows low, but when you win with dummy's queen, East shows out, and there you are — in danger of losing the contract. In due course, you find that no matter how you twist and turn, the best you can do is go down one. You could attribute the result to bad luck, if you were so inclined, but the plain fact is that if you played the hand this way, the outcome is really your own fault.

The moment dummy comes down, you can see that the contract is ice-cold if the diamonds are divided 2-2 or 3-1. The only threat is an unlikely — but possible — 4-0 break. Granting that a 4-0 diamond division is only a 1-in-10 possibility, that does not excuse the failure to make provisions for it.

Once you've developed the habit of worrying about such things, it becomes clear that the right play at trick two is the jack of diamonds, not the deuce. If West has all four diamonds, leading the jack will enable you to make four diamond tricks — and the contract — because dummy's K-Q-7 will eventually swallow up West's 10-9-4 with the aid of repeated finesses.

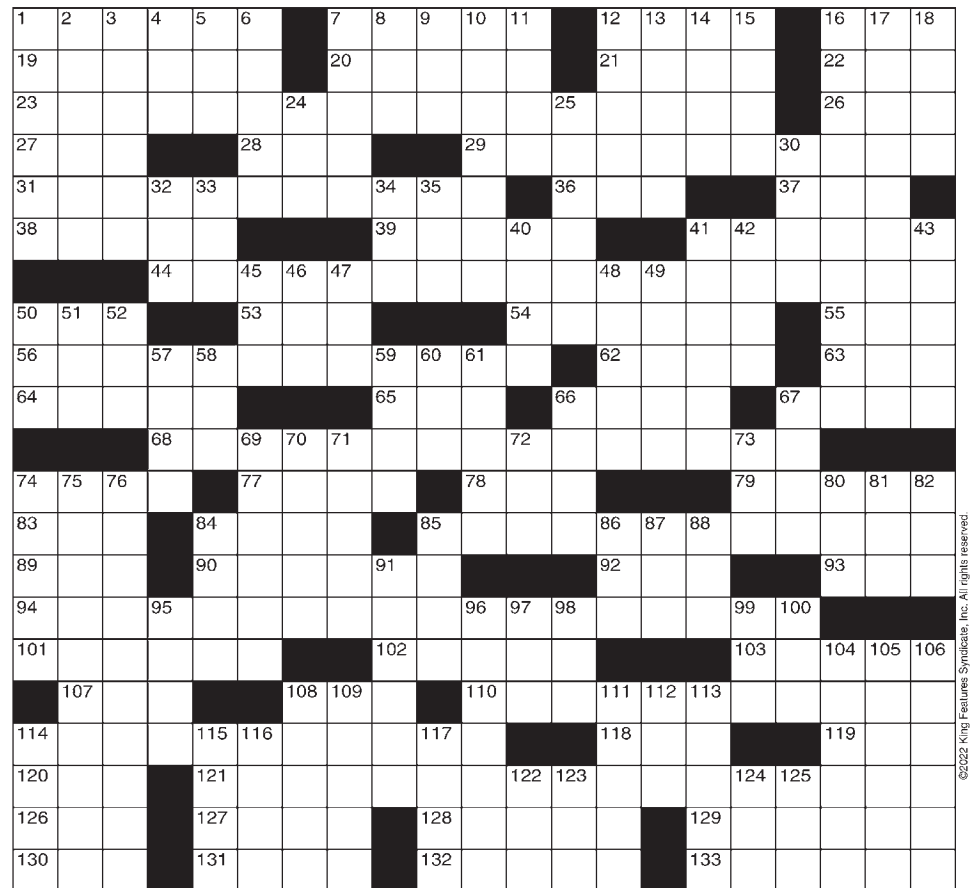

It is true that if East has all four diamonds, leading the jack won't help you a bit. But in that case, there isn't anything you can do to salvage the contract. In bridge, all you're expected to do is to control the controllable.
