

Historians host annual Fourth of July picnic

Salado Historical Society will host its annual Independence Day celebration on the Fourth of July with a picnic at noon July 4 at the Salado High School Cafeteria. This is a community wide celebration that will include music, a Patriotic Program by re-enactors and a potluck lunch. This year, the Fourth of July is on Tuesday. The Salado High School Cafeteria is located on 1880 Eagle Road (off FM 2484).

The Salado Historic Society again provide fried chicken and drinks of iced tea and lemonade for the picnic. Attendees are asked to bring a side dish, salad or dessert to share with the community.

A patriotic program is planned to celebrate the signing of the Declaration of Independence 247 years ago. Heart of Texas Chapter Sons of the American Revolution will begin with a colonial color guard presenting the U.S. Flag. The Salado Community Chorus will sing a medley of patriotic songs and a tribute to the armed services. Patriot reenactors will recite quotes from eight patriots who were involved in declaring the 13 colonies "free and independent" from England. The program will end with Bobby Whitson, County Commissioner Precinct 2, reading several of the Federalist Papers written to support adoption of the U.S. Constitution in 1789.

No fireworks in Village limits, be safe this Fourth of July

While Bell County has not issued any kind of ban on fireworks ahead of Independence Day, the Village of Salado reminds citizens that it does not allow for the discharge of fireworks within the Village limits. In fact, discharge of fireworks could carry a fine as much as $500.

For many, barbecues and backyard fireworks are a tradition, and when used responsibly and legally, provide safe family fun. To help consumers do so, TNT® Fireworks (TNT) is providing three easy tips to ensure celebrations are legal, safe and responsible.

• Stay Legal: Local laws vary widely, from the type of product that is legal - to the times in which fireworks can be used. Know your local laws, and only use fireworks that are approved where you live. Local fire departments can provide information about what is legal in your community.

• Be Safe: Be selective when choosing a location. Pick a dry, flat surface such as concrete, dirt, or pavement that is away from structures and vegetation, and is free of debris. Always read and follow the instructions and have a hose or water source ready.

• Act Responsibly: After the show, let your fireworks take a bath to cool down. Soak them in a metal bucket overnight and outside at a site that is away from structures before properly disposing. Have a sober adult handle your display and do not let children use fireworks. Be considerate of neighbors and pets. When the show is over, clean up the area so that it is free of debris.

To keep everyone legal, safe and responsible, TNT recommends the following safety tips:

• Never give fireworks to young children.

• Stay sober. Never use fireworks with alcohol or drug consumption.

• Have a working hose and/or bucket of water nearby in case of emergencies.

• Never carry a firework in your pocket or hold a lit firework in your hand.

• Never shoot fireworks from a metal or glass container.

• Keep spectators at a safe distance and never aim or throw fireworks at another person.

• Never place any part of your body directly over a firework - even when lighting.

• Light only one firework at a time.

• NEVER approach or try to re-ignite a firework that doesn't light the first time.

• Soak your used fireworks in a metal bucket overnight and outside away from anything flammable.

After 50 years, Thompson will give last sermon

By TIM FLEISCHER
EDITOR-IN-CHIEF

After a half century in the pulpit, Rev. Carl Thompson will give his last sermon.

Rev. Thompson has served as the minister at Presbyterian Church of Salado. He will oversee his last service at the church on July 2.

"I first began to feel a call to be a minister during my junior year in high school," Rev. Thompson said. He grew up in Hubbard, a small town in northeast Ohio, and attended church and Sunday school at The First Presbyterian Church there.

While attending Youngstown State University, he continued to be active in the young adult group at his home church. "I taught Sunday school at the church during my college years," he said.

He earned a bachelor of arts degree from Youngstown State University.

"I really planned to follow in my father's footsteps and become an engineer," he said.

He studied math and science at Youngstown, but in his senior year at Youngstown, he attended a religious retreat for college students held at Wooster College. It was then that "the calling to be a minister became clear and strong for me," he said, "It happened during an evening Vesper service as I listened to the preacher that I decided to attend seminary."

He went on to Louisville Presbyterian Theological Seminary in Kentucky, where he earned a Master of Divinity degree.

During his first year in Seminary in 1970, his call was further defined, when he decided that "I would like to serve my God and Country as a Military Chaplain. I contacted my denomination's Council on Chaplains and was endorsed to begin the process of becoming a chaplain."

He was commissioned as a second lieutenant in the reserves in 1971 in the Staff Specialist Branch. He did his training at Fort Knox while attending seminary. After graduation and ordination, he transferred to the Chaplain Branch.

"Our denomination required two years of pastoral experience before I could serve on active duty," he said. He served as Assistant Pastor at Second Presbyterian Church Portsmouth, Ohio, and as a reserve component chaplain during those two years.

In 1975, Rev. Thompson entered active duty at Ft. Hood and served in the Second Armored division. While on active duty, Rev. Thompson trained as a Family Life Chaplain. He was Division Chaplain for The Big Red One, (1st Infantry Division), attended Command and General Staff college at Ft. Leavenworth and the Army War College at Carlisle Barracks. He also served on the III Corps staff at Ft. Hood. He retired in 2005 out of Ft. Sam Houston as the Army North Chaplain.

"Evelyn (his wife) and I thought we would like to serve a small church after retiring from the army," he said. "I was going to take a year off to get the green out of my system before thinking about getting a civilian job."

He says that he and Evelyn fell in love with central Texas on their first tour of duty at Ft. Hood. "We decided then to make Copperas Cove our retirement home," he said.

He learned from a friend that the Presbyterian Church of Salado needed a pulpit supply preacher. He committed to do that for two weeks before starting his year off. "God had different plans," he said. "I received a call from their pastor search committee asking if I would be interested in applying for the position. That was not in my plans, but Evelyn and I felt so much love from the congregation when I preached there those two Sundays that we thought this might be God's call to us earlier than I intended. I jumped through the ecclesiastical hoops and submitted my paperwork to Grace Presbytery. I was interviewed by the Salado Church search committee and was offered the position."

He has been the minister here ever since.

"My fondest memories of Salado are the love and commitment the people of faith have for God," he said. "People are so caring, and loving with their time, resources, and talents. Whenever a need came up in the church or community someone always stepped up and said, 'I can do that.'"

"I guess the greatest challenges as a minister of the Gospel is helping people look at their preconceived ideas and look at issues through the eyes of God," he said. "I guess the saying, 'What would Jesus Do' instead of what I want to do is more appropriate for a Christian."

He plans to work in his garden, play more golf and spend more time with family.

"I know I will miss the people in Salado," he said. "I will miss preaching, teaching, and providing pastoral care, but I know it is time to retire. I always told myself when I can no longer give 100% of myself to my ministry it is time to retire. That time has come."

Contradictory reports on U.S. housing market: prices down, starts up

The Markets

It was a rough week for the markets. The S&P500 Stock Index (SPX) slipped 1.39% to close at 4348.33. Now that the debt ceiling crisis has been behind us for a while, fear of higher interest rates and a potential recession have risen to the surface and the “wall of worry” that bull markets climb once more took center stage. This week’s decline leaves the SPX up 13.25% this year, 21.39% higher than it was last October, and about 43% higher than it was three years ago. It is also about 9% lower than it was in January 2022, at its record high. The CRSP US Mid-Cap Value Index joined in the slide, falling 2.28% in the last five days to 2309.73, leaving it down 1.28% this year and about 11% lower than it was in early 2022.

The benchmark 10-year U.S. Treasury note closed out the week yielding 3.74% with little change this year. The Treasury yield curve too was little changed with the 4-month T-Bill having the highest yield at an annualized rate of 5.44%. Oddly, the 30-year Treasury Bond yield fell a bit to 3.82%, leaving the curve with an amazingly consistent downward slope, the exact opposite of its normal shape. Oil joined in on the slippery slope with a barrel of West Texas Intermediate crude oil (WTI) sliding just over 3% to $69.41.

The Economy

Fed Chairman Jerome Powell testified before Congress this week and repeated his stern warning that interest rates will remain higher, longer than most people expect. Despite that being the same line he has been using for months, apparently at least some traders on Wall Street finally heard that interest rates are up and likely to rise and that not very new news caused them to sell some stocks. Then, they seem to have become aware of the fact that imbedded inflation in the United King-

Market & Economic Update

by Jeffrey W. McClure

dom is unacceptably high at 8.7% as the Bank of England raised rates there by a half percent. As we have written before, across the Euro Zone, inflation stands at over 6% and both the UK and the Zone are now officially in a recession. The gloom from across the Atlantic raises that wall of worry on our side since our economies are rather linked. Adding more rocks to that wall of worry is the drip, drip, drip, of less-than-ideal economic data coming out of China. The Bank of China is lowering its one-year loan prime rate (LPR) as their economic growth rate has slowed to one of the lowest in years. While our economy is not based on exports like China or Germany, exports remain a significant part of how we keep Americans employed. We live and work in a very globalized economy and bad news in any major economy is likely to have some impact here at home.

Another couple of economic reports came out during the week that illustrate the contradictory issues in the economy. U.S. existing home prices posted their biggest year-over-year price decline since 2011 as they fell 3.1% in May, even as the volume of home sales dropped over 20% from one year ago. The biggest price decline was in Austin where the average house sale was 15% lower. At about the same time, the Census Bureau announced that new housing starts rose almost 22% in May!

The contradiction between a 20% drop in existing house sales and a 22% jump in new house construction starts is possibly the starkest evidence that we are not living in what most of us would consider to be normal economic times. Low existing mortgage rates are keeping people in their existing homes because a new mortgage would be far more expensive. That is the reverse of the experience most of us have had over the past thirty years as falling interest rates tend to reward homeowners for selling their existing house and buying another. The glimmer of a silver lining is in the burst of new single-family home starts we are seeing. It has been argued that home building is the single largest element in the American economy. Some very respected economists have gone so far as to say that house building is the economy in the United States. It is worth noting though that new home prices are about 15% lower than they were a year ago.

In a more comprehensive reading on our economy, once more there is a contradiction. On Friday, S&P Global reported that the US Manufacturing Purchasing Managers Index fell to 46.3 this month on a scale where numbers below 50 indicate contraction and above 50, expansion. On the other, and much larger, service side of our economy though, the PMI was 53. In that same report, S&P Global estimates that the U.S. GDP is rising at about an annualized rate of 2% in the second quarter and the comprehensive PMI remains well above 50.

The bottom line is that our economy is continuing to send mixed signals, but across the board, evidence of a looming recession is missing. What we are seeing instead looks a lot more like growth and expansion, admittedly at a slower and probably more sustainable rate than we have seen in the past few years, but still expansion.

There should be no “woke” in baseball

It’s not unusual for prayer to play a role in sports.

“Spahn, Sain, and pray for rain!” was the famous refrain of Boston Braves fans in 1948, when they wanted their exceptional pitchers Warren Spahn and Johnny Sain to start as many games as possible.

A couple of years ago, the team chaplain of the Loyola Chicago men’s basketball team, Sister Jean, prayed before a game against Illinois in the NCAA Tournament, “As we play the Fighting Illini, we ask for special help to overcome this team and get a great win.” (Final score: Loyola Chicago 71, Illinois 58).

In the long history of sports, though, it seems unlikely that anyone has ever felt compelled to pray over the spiritual hurt caused by a team -- until now. Los Angeles Archbishop Jose H. Gomez dedicated a service to praying for “healing due to the harm caused by” the Los Angeles Dodgers.

And he’s not referring to the team’s disappointing exit from the playoffs last year at the hands of the San Diego Padres or its relatively soft 38-30 start this year. No, rather its “decision to honor a group that intentionally denigrates and profanes the Christian faith.”

He’s speaking of the Sisters of Perpetual Indulgence, a group of drag queens who dress up as Roman Catholic nuns and mock their faith. In the most embarrassing to-and-fro since Yankee owner George Steinbrenner fired and rehired manager Billy Martin multiple times, the Dodgers announced that they’d honor the “Sisters” on the team’s “LGBTQ+ Pride Night,” then backed off when people of faith were offended, then decided to honor them after all in response to LGBTQ backlash to the backlash.

This shameful cowardice comes courtesy of one of baseball’s most storied franchises, one that used to hold “Nun’s Day” at the stadium.

It’s a symptom of the sheer unavoidability of “woke” cultural politics that they’ve come to baseball, once the most mainstream and arguably still the most traditional of major sports league.

The Toronto Blue Jays just cut one of their relief pitchers, Anthony Bass, for not getting with the LGBTQ program. He thus became the first player in major league history to be DFA’ed for associating himself with traditional Biblical morality.

On May 29, a day that will live in Blue Jays infamy, right up there with the collapse in the 1985 ALCS, Bass shared a video from Bible-themed Instagram page supporting the boycotts of Bud Light and Target. In response to the resulting furor, he apologized and promised to do better, but that wasn’t close to being enough.

The last straw came when he tried to explain himself again about two weeks into the controversy. He said, “I stand by my personal beliefs,” adding -- very naively, as it turns out -- “and everyone is entitled to their personal beliefs, right?”

The demand of Bass wasn’t that he say bland and nice things but that he repudiate part of his belief system as a Christian.

Fans were booing him, and sports journalists were out for blood. The Athletic huffed, “It was clear that Bass still did not grasp how harmful his actions and words were.”

Preposterously, as part of his forced rehabilitation, Bass was scheduled to catch the ceremonial first pitch to open up the team’s Pride Weekend, which included a drag queen performing the national anthem.

Instead, he got fired. No one can accuse the Blue Jays of not fully embracing the spirit of pride ideology, including the illiberalism.

Back in the early 1950s, before the Dodgers had moved from Brooklyn, the team’s churchgoing first baseman Gil Hodges entered into a terrible slump. Instead of turning on him, the fans encouraged him. Father Redmond of St. Francis Church famously said one day: “It’s too hot for a sermon today. Go home, keep the commandments, and say a prayer for Gil Hodges.”

Hodges eventually found his groove, making for a nice piece of Dodgers lore. These days, he’d presumably have to watch what he said.

COLLEEN CECILIA HAYS GILCHREST
NOVEMBER 1, 1960
JUNE 20, 2023

Colleen Cecilia Hays Gilchrest, age 62, passed away peacefully at her home, surrounded by family, on June 20, 2023.

She was born in Waco, Texas on November 1, 1960 to Lula Cecile LeBouef and William McNeilly Hays.

A memorial service is scheduled for 10 a.m. Saturday, June 24, 2023 at Belton Church of Christ, officiated by Minister Jordan Hubbard.

Colleen and Byron Powell Gilchrest married on July 14, 1984.

They have been residents of Salado for 32 years and longtime Belton Church of Christ members.

During this time Colleen became mother to three children, Brittaney Belle Sharum, Stetson Beau Gilchrest, and Sharla Mae Miller; and four grandchildren, Indiana, Branson, Brayden, and Blakely.

Lovingly called “Ma” by her grandchildren, she was a seasoned rocker of babies, soccer mom, theatergoer, and traveler. Being an adventurous soul, Colleen enjoyed experiencing different cultures, both domestic and international, through travel to new and exciting places with family and friends.

Colleen is an alumna of Central High School, class of 1979.

She received a Bachelor's in Finance and Real Estate at Angelo State University in 1983 and a Master's of Education Curriculum and Instruction from University of Texas Arlington in 2015.

After college graduation, Colleen's extensive career began in finance and real estate. However her true passion was found when her legacy career began as a substitute teacher at Salado ISD where she later became a 6th grade mathematics teacher for 18 years. During her career she was instrumental in helping students excel in UIL, assisting in developing life skills through her self-made after school cooking club, enriching their lives through a summer trip to Washington, DC, and leading student's to win the national NASA's WEAR Challenge competition. The pinnacle of her teacher career was teaming with her dear friend and colleague Laura Tomlin and the Amateur Radio Relay League to have students make audio contact with astronaut Scott Tingle, on the International Space Station. In all of her years she has been the greatest supporter of many; whether it be her students, friends, or family.

Colleen's love of community and the joy of helping people will be cherished and missed by many. Donations can be sent to St Jude's Children Research Hospital.

Rehearsals underway for 30th anniversary Salado Legends

by Loyd Webb

The 30th anniversary production of Salado Legends, the epic outdoor musical drama written by Salado's Jackie Mills, is currently deep into rehearsals at Tablerock Festival's Goodnight Amphitheater. "There are more than 100 cast and crew members," Jackie says. "And we open in less than a month." Many actors and behind the scenes technical workers are returning from past seasons to produce the two-act play, which tells the tale of early Scottish settlers, Native Americans, Sirena the mermaid and European explorers. The drama and hardships of the Civil War and its toll on early Salado citizens are told through music, dance and song.

The play is the only one in the State of Texas ever chosen by the Library of Congress to serve as a record of American life at the close of the 19th century. It's a family-friendly show that also features actual livestock parading through the open air theater and ear-splitting sound effects, courtesy of black powder ordnance that's exploded during battle scenes.

The Tablerock Festival of Salado is a nonprofit organization that awards scholarships to student actors and backstage workers. "It's based on need," Jackie says. "Over the years, some of those kids wouldn't have been able to finish college without Tablerock scholarships."

Dr. Clyde D. Goodnight,

a physician from Little River, donated the land for Tablerock, which was founded in 1979. In addition to the Goodnight Amphitheater, the 14-acre site includes a half-mile walking trail, a 1920s cattle dipping vat and a modern two-story concessions building with restrooms.

Thom Wilson will again direct this year's Legends production. Also returning are lead actors Gabrielle Vaccaro and James Combs.

After a rewarding 30 years, Jackie says one thing hasn't changed. "It's always been our goal to recognize and give exposure to the talented professional and semi-professional artists, musicians and actors who live and work here."

Salado Legends will be performed at 8:15 p.m. July 22, 29 and Aug. 5 at Tablerock's Goodnight Amphitheater, 409 Royal St. Tickets can be purchased online at centraltexasitickets.com the ace of spades before entering dummy with a diamond to take a trump finesse. The purpose of the ace play is to guard against the possibility of the singleton queen in the West hand.

The other method of play is to cross dummy at once with a diamond, lead the nine of spades and let it ride. If the nine wins, declarer repeats the finesse.

In the actual deal, the second line of play makes the contract, while the first loses it. The question that naturally arises is which approach is correct, without the benefit of having seen the East-West cards.

There is no doubt that in the long run, the second method of play is far superior to the first. The so-called safety play of cashing the ace first, to protect against the singleton queen, is a snare and a delusion.

While it is true that it gains whenever West has the queen singleton, it loses four times as often, whenever West started with the singleton 7, 6, 5 or 4. When West has one of the small singletons, declarer eventually loses a trump trick if he cashes the ace first, but does not lose a trump trick if he takes a finesse on the first round of the suit.
